Action of the Legislature of Indiana in relation to the Report of the Adjutant General.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
THURSDAY, December 21, 1865.

Hon. Mr. COWGILL, from the special committee appointed to act with a like committee on the part of the Senate, reported a proposition from the State Printer offering to print and bind 4,500 copies of each volume of the Report of the Adjutant General, in a style corresponding with Volume II, already published, furnishing paper and all materials, at $1.90 per volume; with a resolution, prepared by the joint committee, accepting said proposition and providing for the sale and distribution of the Reports, which resolution had also been reported to the SENATE and adopted by that body.

FRIDAY, December 22, 1865.

On motion of Hon. Mr. BRANHAM, the concurrent resolution of the Senate, relating to the publication of the Report of the Adjutant General was taken up.

The resolution accepts the proposition of the State Printer, and authorizes the sale and distribution of the Reports as follows: Fifteen hundred copies of each volume to be sold by the State Librarian at their cost price—one dollar and ninety cents per volume—the proceeds to be paid into the State Treasury; one copy to be distributed to each Township Library; one copy to each County Clerk, Auditor, and Recorder, to be retained in their respective offices for reference; one copy to each County and Public Library in this State; one copy to the Adjutant General of each State and Territory; one copy to each State Library; one copy to each member of the present General Assembly; fifty copies for the use of the Departments at Washington City; twenty copies for the use of the State officers; one copy to each of the leading governments of Europe, to be forwarded through the officers of the United States government; and the remaining copies to be deposited for preservation and safe keeping in the State Library.

Which resolution was agreed to.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S REPORT.

THIS VOLUME, completing the Rosters of Officers and Historical Outlines of Regiments and Batteries, is submitted to the people of Indiana in the hope that it will be found a valuable contribution to the military history of our beloved State and Nation.

NOTWITHSTANDING every possible care has been taken to insure correctness in names, dates and facts, numerous errors have doubtless escaped notice, but it is confidently believed that in the varied character, extent and magnitude of the work, a sufficient and satisfactory excuse will be found for any and all defects and inaccuracies that may be discovered.

THE WHOLE REPORT, it is estimated, will require seven volumes of this size, five of which are yet to be published. The Ist volume, to contain the report, proper, of the Adjutant General, covering the entire period of the war, will be the last of the series issued, as time will be required to complete the important and valuable statistics which it is designed it shall contain. The IVth, Vth, VIth and VIIth volumes, to contain the names, residences and military record of all non-commissioned officers and privates, will be issued in rapid succession, and the whole work, it is expected, will be ready for delivery within the present year.

W. H. H. TERRELL,
Adjutant General, Indiana.

HISTORICAL MEMORANDA, ADDITIONAL.—In the battle at Baton Rouge, on the 5th of August, 1862, the regiment lost twenty-four killed and ninety-eight wounded, including many excellent officers. On the 3d of November, 1862, it was engaged with the rebel iron clad, J. A. Cotten, with a loss of three men killed and Lieutenant Eden Fisher, of Company "A," wounded, losing both legs.

On the 12th of April, 1864, the veterans returned from their furlough with four hundred recruits, which filled up the regiment to the maximum, and entitled it to the full complement of officers. On the 6th of July Companies B, F, I, K and M began equipping for the field, and were joined at New Orleans by L, which had spent the winter on Matagorda Island, off the Texas coast. On the 29th of July, Battery H left for Mobile Bay, and on the 13th of August, Batteries B, F and K joined them, landing at Navy Cove, Mobile Point, on the 17th, where they took position within one thousand yards of Fort Morgan. They worked continuously night and day, in the broiling sun, aggravated by the glare of the white sand, until the morning of the 22d, when the grand bombardment began, which was kept up without intermission till the morning of the 23d at six o'clock, when the Fort surrendered. Returned to New Orleans September 4th. On the 4th of March, 1865, eight batteries, B. C. F, H, I, K, L and M, left for a campaign against Mobile, landing at Dauphin Island and Mobile Point, where they remained until the infantry had driven the enemy inside their works at Spanish Fort. On the 29th, proceeded to the Fort, took position on the 31st, and was engaged until the surrender of Spanish Fort on the 9th of April. Batteries H, K, and L then proceeded to Blakely, where they were engaged until the capture of that point on the evening of the 9th. On the 24th of April the eight batteries all left for Mobile, where they remained until the 24th of June, when they turned in their guns, and were sent to garrison the coast forts—B and C to Fort Morgan, H and K to Fort Gaines, F and L to Barrancas, Florida, I and M to Fort Pickens. In the meantime, A, E and G were at Baton Rouge, and D at Port Hudson. In November, the regiment was ordered to concentrate at Port Hudson to be mustered out. On the 24th of December the regiment had its first grand parade of twelve batteries, and on the 10th of January, 1866, at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, it was mustered out.

Departing for Indiana, it arrived at Indianapolis with eighteen officers and two hundred and twenty-three men, under command of Capt. William Bough. The remainder of the regiment, some seven hundred strong, preferred being finally discharged in Louisiana, and remained in that State for that purpose.

At its original organization the regiment numbered 1,042. It has received, at various times, 1,777 recruits, making a grand total of 2,819. Of this number 1,208 have been discharged, and 373 have been killed in action, or died of wounds or disease. Up to the close of the war the regimental rolls showed a remarkably small number of desertions, but since the war many of its members have availed themselves of the facilities afforded by the "French system" of furlough, 249 having taken informal leave of the army. During its service, the regiment has traveled over fifteen thousand miles, and has on all occasions well sustained the reputation of Indiana soldiers for gallantry and soldierly bearing, while it has been remarkably fortunate in preserving the health and efficiency of its members.

FORTIETH REGIMENT.

BREVET APPOINTMENTS.—Field and Staff: First Lieutenant and Adjutant. WILLARD GRISWOLD to be Captain by brevet, March 13, 1865.

HISTORICAL MEMORANDA—ADDITIONAL.—The Fortieth Regiment marched with Wood's Division of Buell's army to Shiloh, arriving on the battle-field about noon on the 7th of April, 1862, in time to take part in the final onset that resulted in driving the enemy from the field. During the siege of Corinth the regiment was with its command in every important movement, and after the evacuation it marched to Iuka, Mississippi, and thence through Northern Alabama, into Middle Tennessee. About the 1st of September it started from McMinnville, Tennessee, and marched with the army to Nashville and Louisville, reaching the latter place on the 25th of September.

On the 9th of September, 1863, it crossed the Tennessee River and was one of the first regiments to occupy Chattanooga after its evacuation. Here it remained on post duty till the time of the commencement of the battles before Chattanooga. Shortly after the battle of Chicamauga, it became attached to the Second Brigade (General Wagner's) of the Second Division (General Sheridan's) of the Fourth Army Corps, commanded by General Gordon Granger. The regiment took an active part in the engagements before Chattanooga in November, 1863. In the assault on Mission Ridge, on the 25th of that month, twenty men were killed on the field, and one hundred and thirty wounded. A few days after this, the regiment marched with the Fourth Corps to the relief of Burnside at Knoxville, and during that Campaign the men suffered greatly for want of comfortable clothing, many of them marching without shoes over the frozen ground. The greater part of the winter was spent above Strawberry Plains, along the Holston River, in the woods, without winter quarters or tents. In January, 1864, the regiment marched to Dandridge, Tennessee, with the army under General Cox, and after a short engagement with Longstreet, fell back to Knoxville. At Loudon, on the 31st of January the regiment re-enlisted, and then proceeded to Indiana on veteran furlough. It was recruited to five hundred and re-equipped while in the State, and returned to the field, re-joining its command at Cleveland, Tennessee, on the 2d of April.

During the Atlanta campaign, while skirmishing at Dallas, the regiment had three men killed and twenty-two wounded. On the 14th of June in a skirmish near Lost Mountain two men were killed and five wounded. On the 18th the regiment was under fire all day, losing four killed and twenty-nine wounded. Whilst occupying the works before Kenesaw, it lost almost daily, in killed and wounded on the skirmish line. On the 27th it was engaged in the bloody and unsuccessful charge at Kenesaw, forming the head of General Wagner's brigade. Of the three hundred and sixty men and officers taken into action, three officers were killed and four wounded, twenty-one men killed and sixty-eight wounded and ten missing, making a total of one hundred and six.

In resisting Hood's advance upon Nashville, the regiment was engaged in the battle at Spring Hill on the 29th of November, and in the battle of Franklin on the 30th of the same month, losing in the latter engagement one hundred and twenty in killed, wounded and missing. It was also engaged in the battle of Nashville, December 15th and 16th, 1864, and followed Hood's retreating army to Lexington, Alabama, within 25 miles of the Tennessee River. It then marched to Huntsville, Alabama, put up winter quarters and remained in camp until the last of March, 1865, when it was transported on the cars to Blue Springs, East Tennessee, but returned by railway to Nashville in the last of April, 1865. The regiment moved to Texas in July 1865, and while there it was on post duty at Texana, Jackson county. The losses of the regiment during a term of over four years active service are as follows:

Number of men killed in action, one hundred and thirty-five; number of men wounded in action, four hundred and twenty-eight; number of men died of disease, one hundred and sixty-two; number of men transferred by order, fifty; number of men mustered out, five hundred and seventy-six; number of officers resigned, forty-six; number of recruits received, four hundred and sixty-one; number of men re-enlisted as veterans, two hundred and forty-five.

Since its first organization it has marched three thousand four hundred miles; traveled by railway two thousand five hundred and fifty miles; traveled by steamboat two thousand four hundred and fifty miles; and by steamship one thousand miles; making a total of nine thousand four hundred miles.

The regiment, consisting of twenty-six officers, and two hundred and eighteen enlisted men, was mustered out at Texana, Texas, to date December 21, 1865. On the 21st of January, 1866, the regiment arrived at Indianapolis with thirteen officers and one hundred and eighty men, under command of Colonel Henry Leaming, where the officers and men were finally discharged from service.

HISTORICAL MEMORANDA—ADDITIONAL.—On the 4th of July, 1864, the regiment moved to Vicksburg to make a diversion in favor of General A. J. Smith, who, at about the same time, moved from Memphis upon Forrest, in the direction of the Mobile and Ohio railroad. From Vicksburg the Seventh Cavalry proceeded eastward, and, crossing the Big Black River, marched to Port Gibson. There it engaged the command of the rebel General West Adams on the afternoon of the 13th of July and on the next morning, driving back the enemy and taking many prisoners. Returning to Vicksburg, it proceeded up the river to Memphis.

In September, 1864, the regiment left Memphis, under command of Major S. E. W. Simonson, and marched with General Mower's forces through Arkansas after Marmaduke. Arriving at St. Louis, it was placed in General Pleasanton's cavalry command and, with it, participated in the battles of Independence, Big Blue and Osage, and was directed by a special order of that General to inscribe these names upon its regimental colors. In the sabre charge at Osage it took many prisoners and a section of artillery.

On the night of the 25th of December, 1864, a detachment of the regiment under command of Capt. J. H. Elliott, led the advance of an expedition, and took Vernon, on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, capturing Forrest's camp, camp equipage, four hundred wagons, five thousand stand of arms, and large quantities of Quartermaster and Commissary stores, which they burned for want of transportation. The next day they joined in the attack on Egypt Station, which resulted in the rout of the forces of General Gholson, the taking of the rebel fortifications and the capture of a railroad train loaded with stores, together with six hundred rebel prisoners. From this point the detachment went with General Grierson to Vicksburg.

On the 26th of January, 1865, the regiment made an expedition into northern Louisiana, crossing Bayou Bartholomew, where it met and routed the enemy, under Col. Harrison. From thence it returned in the direction of Camden, Arkansas, embarking at Gaines' Landing, for Memphis.

After leaving Hempstead, Texas, the Seventh Cavalry marched to Austin. From that place a detachment, under command of Colonel Browne, was sent to Sherman, on the northern border, where it remained until the regiment was ordered to be mustered out of service.

On the 18th of February, 1866, the regiment was mustered out of service at Austin, Texas, and on the 20th left for New Orleans, from whence it proceeded to Indianapolis, arriving there on the 13th of March, with twenty officers and three hundred and seventy-eight men under command of Colonel Thomas M. Browne, where it was finally discharged on the 15th of March.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIFTH REGIMENT.

BREVET APPOINTMENTS.—Colonel WILL A. ADAMS to be Brigadier General by brevet, November 21, 1865.

Historical Memoranda—Additional.—The One Hundred and Forty-Fifth Regiment was organized at Indianapolis February 16th, 1865, having been recruited in the 3d Congressional District. The regiment was, the same day, ordered to report to Major General Thomas. Leaving Indianapolis on the 18th day of January under command of Captain Vinson Williams, (its field officers not having been appointed) it arrived at Nashville, Tennessee, the 22d, and immediately received orders from General Thomas to report to Major General James B. Steedman commanding District of the Etowah. Leaving Nashville on the 23d, the regiment arrived at Chattanooga on the 24th and was ordered to proceed at once to Dalton, Ga., where it arrived the same day, and relieved a detachment of the Twentieth Army Corps garrisoning that station. Here it was joined by its Field Officers. Dalton, at this time, was the extreme outpost of the Federal army in northern Georgia.

On the 17th of March the 145th, with the 147th and 151st Illinois and 187th Ohio, were formed into the First Brigade Second Sept. Division, Army of the Cumberland, Brigadier General H. M. Judah commanding the Brigade. On the 1st of May the Brigade was ordered to Resacca, Georgia, arriving there the same day, where the Brigade Commander received the surrender of the Confederate army of northern Georgia; the formal surrender taking place at Kingston, Georgia, on the 12th of May, where upwards of 4,000 Confederates were paroled. On the 8th of May the regiment marched, under orders, for Kingston, arriving the same day at Calhoun, and on the 9th was ordered back to Resacca, where it remained in camp until the 16th, when it was detached from the brigade and ordered to Cartersville, Georgia, arriving there on the 17th. It remained at Cartersville garrisoning the country to Atlanta and protecting communications with the cavalry command of General Wilson, at that time occupying Middle Georgia, until the 27th of July when it was ordered to Marietta, Georgia, where it arrived the same day. On the 29th it was ordered to report to Brigadier General John T. Croxton commanding District of Columbus. Arriving at Macon on the 3d, it was assigned to duty in the 4th Sub-District of the District of Columbus, Colonel Will A. Adams commanding, with headquarters at Cuthbert, Georgia, where the regiment arrived the 1st of August. During August, September and October, Companies "C," "E," "G" and "K" were stationed at Bainbridge with small detachments at the county seats of Stewart, Quitman, Webster, Clay, Calhoun, Early and Miller counties.

On the 8th of December Colonel Adams was assigned to command the District of Columbus, the regiment being left under command of Lieutenant Colonel Vinson Williams. On the 12th of December companies "F," "G," and "I" were ordered to Albany, and constituted the garrison of that place until the 15th of January, 1866, when the regiment was rendezvoused at Macon, at which place, on the 21st day of January, it was mustered out of service. On the 22d the regiment, under the command of Brevet Brigadier General Will A. Adams left for Indianapolis, where it arrived on the 28th day of January, 1866, with twenty-seven officers and seven hundred and fifty men, and was immediataly paid off and discharged under the direction of General Pitcher.

SEVENTY-FIFTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Companies composing the Seventy-Fifth Regiment were raised in the Eleventh Congressional District, the camp of rendezvous being at Wabash. On the 19th of August, 1862, the regiment was mustered into service, with John U. Petit as Colonel, and moved to Louisville, Kentucky, on the 21st, one thousand and thirty-six strong. From thence it proceeded to Lebanon, and upon the advance of Bragg's army returned to Louisville. In the campaign that followed, it took an active part, marching to Frankfort, Scottsville, and Gallatin, and then back to Cave City in pursuit of Morgan's forces. Most of the winter of 1862 was passed in camp near Gallatin, and in January, 1863, the regiment moved to Murfreesboro, where it remained until June 24th, serving in Gen. Reynold's division, and engaging in scouting and other ardouus duty. During this time it served in the Second Brigade, Third Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, which was known as the "Indiana Brigade," being composed of the Seventy-Fifth, Eighty-Seventh and One Hundred and First Indiana regiments.

On the 24th of June the Seventy-Fifth started towards Tullahoma, and on the march engaged in the battle at Hoover's Gap. It was the first regiment to enter the rebel works at Tullahoma, about the 1st of July. Marching with Rosecrans' army towards Chattanooga it crossed the Tennessee and, on the 19th and 20th of September, participated in the battle of Chicamauga, losing seventeen killed and one hundred and seven wounded; total one hundred and fourteen. After this engagement the regiment returned to Chattanooga where it remained some months, engaging in the battle of Mission Ridge on the 25th of November and losing five killed and seventeen wounded; total twenty-two. The winter of 1863 was passed in the vicinity of Chattanooga, and early in the spring of 1864 the regiment moved to Ringold, Georgia, preparatory to engaging in the Atlanta campaign.

On the 27th of April, 1864, all the troops composing Sherman's army were ordered to concentrate at Chattanooga. On the 7th of May Thomas occupied Laurel Hill. On the 12th the whole army, except Howard's Corps, moved through Snake Creek Gap on Resacca. On the 15th the battle of Resacca was fought, and the same night the rebel army retreated across the Oostanaula. Near Adairsville the rear of the rebel army was encounteved, and a sharp fight ensued. On the 28th the enemy made an assault at Dallas, but met with a bloody repulse. On the 27th of June an assault was made upon the enemy's position on Kenesaw, without success. On the 2d of July Kenesaw was abandoned by the enemy. On the 4th, Thomas demonstrated so strongly on the enemy's communications as to cause him to fall back to the Chattahoochie river, and cross that river on the 9th. On the 20th the enemy sallied from his works in force and fought the battle of Peach Tree Creek. On the 22d a general battle was fought in front of Atlanta, the rebels being defeated. On the 28th the enemy made another assault upon our besieging lines, but were driven back in confusion. The siege of Atlanta vigorously progressed, with constant skirmishing. On the 25th of August the bulk of Sherman's army moved by a circuit around Atlanta, struck its southern communications near Fairburn, destroying the West Point Railway and Macon Railroad. This caused the enemy to evacuate Atlanta on the 2d of September. On the 4th the army moved slowly back to Atlanta, and rested in clean, healthy camps. Thus, after four months' campaign, ended one of the greatest achievements of the war.

During the Atlanta campaign the regiment marched and fought with the Second Brigade, Third Division, Fourteenth Army Corps, engaging in the battles at Dalton, Resacca, Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, and Jonesboro. After the occupation of Atlanta, the regiment rested for a brief period.

On the 1st of October Hood's army marched to strike Sherman's rear. On the 4th the regiment moved from Atlanta in pursuit, and marched with its corps to Pine Mountain, arriving at that place in time to threaten the rear of French's rebel division, then investing the garrison at Allatoona. The enemy retreated to Dallas, and thence marched for Resacca and Dalton. The regiment marched in pursuit as far as Gaylesville, when it halted for a time in the rich valley of the Chattooga. Then returning to Atlanta it started from that city on the 16th of November with Sherman's army in its famous "march to the sea," reaching Savannah in December. In January, 1865, the regiment marched with its corps through the Carolinas to Goldsboro, North Carolina; participating in the battles of Bentonville and Fayetteville. From Goldsboro it moved to Raleigh with the advance of the army and engaged in a skirmish at Smithfield, which was the last action had with the enemy in North Carolina. After the surrender of Johnson's army it marched to Richmond, Virginia, and thence to Washington, D. C., where on the 8th of June, 1865, it was mustered out of service. Returning to Indiana, with four hundred and thirty men and twenty officers, it was present at a public reception given to returned regiments, in the Capitol grounds, at Indianapolis, on the 14th of June. While in Washington the remaining recruits were transferred to the Forty-Second Indiana and continued to serve with that organization until its muster out of service, at Louisville, Kentucky, on the 21st of July, 1865.

SEVENTY-SIXTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

This regiment was organized at Indianapolis on the 20th of July, 1862, with James Gavin as Colonel, to serve for the period of thirty days, to repel a guerrilla raid. On the 16th of July, 1862, a band of guerrillas from Kentucky, crossed the Ohio river at Newburg, and captured and paroled about eighty convalescent soldiers in the hospital at that place, and also captured State arms and other property.

Colonel James Gavin, of the Seventh Indiana, and Colonel John T. Wilder, of the Seventeenth Indiana Volunteers, being at their home in Greensburg, proposed to raise several hundred men, to serve for thirty days, for the purpose of pursuing and punishing the depredators. Their proposition was accepted, and, in the brief space of forty eight hours, a regiment was raised, mustered, armed, equipped and organized as the Seventy-Sixth Regiment, and at once left for Evansville, Indiana, and Henderson, Kentucky. The regiment remained in the neighborhood of Henderson, Kentucky, during its term of service, having several severe skirmishes with guerrillas and losing a number of officers and men. Companies "G" and "H" were employed as guards to protect steamboats on the Ohio river, and did effective service.

FOURTH-CAVALRY (77th) REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Fourth Cavalry (Seventy-Seventh) Regiment was organized at Indianapolis, on the 22d of August, 1862, with Isaac P. Gray as Colonel. On the completion of its organization the aspect of affairs in Kentucky was so threatening that the regiment was divided, four companies being sent under command of Major John A. Platter to Henderson, Kentucky, and the remaining companies to Louisville, from whence they were ordered into the interior, where they were joined by Colonel Gray.

The battalion under command of Major Platter had a skirmish with the enemy at Madisonville, Kentucky, on the 26th of August, and again at Mount Washington, on the 1st of October, in which a number were killed and wounded. On the 5th of October it engaged the rebels at Madisonville, suffering some loss. In the spring of 1863 this battalion joined the other companies, and after this the regiment served together, with the exception of Company "C," which became the escort for Gen. A. J. Smith, and followed the fortunes of that officer's command.

During the invasion of Bragg, a portion of the battalion under the command of Col. Gray, went into camp for a brief period near Madison, Indiana, and moved from thence to Vevay, near which place it crossed the Ohio river and moved, on a tour of duty, through Owen, Henry and adjoining counties in Kentucky, reaching Frankfort about the 24th of October. Soon after the companies of this battalion were stationed at Gallatin, from whence they moved after John H. Morgan's forces towards Green river. On the 25th of December the battalion fought Morgan near Munfordsville and defeated him, suffering a slight loss. Moving into Tennessee in January, 1863, it reached Murfreesboro in February, in which vicinity it operated for some months, fighting the enemy at Rutherford's Creek, on the 10th of March. On the 28th of March it was actively engaged in feeling the enemy near Murfreesboro. At this time the battalion was commanded by Col. L. S. Shuler.

The regiment, now united, moved with Rosecrans in the campaign toward Tullahoma and Chattanooga, participating in the battle of Chicamauga, on the 19th and 20th of September, and again engaging the enemy on the 23d of September. Crossing the Tennessee, it fought the rebels at Fayetteville, Tennessee, on the 1st of November, losing a few of its members.

The regiment marched into East Tennessee early in December, where it remained during the winter of 1863 and 1864. During this campaign it held the advanced position in all the cavalry movements, and was conspicuously engaged in the battles at Mossy Creek, Talbot's and Dandridge, for which it was highly complimented in the reports of brigade and division commanders. On the 27th of January, 1864, a severe fight occurred at Fair Garden, between the division to which it was attached and two rebel divisions, the latter having been driven during the day eight miles. Captain Rosencrantz, with the second battalion of the Fourth Cavalry, dismounted as skirmishers, charged with the Second Indiana and First Wisconsin Cavalry (also dismounted,) on the enemy's skirmishers. Major Purdy, with the first battalion, supported by Lilly's Eighteenth Indiana Battery, and the remaining four companies of the Fourth Cavalry, were ordered to a "sabre charge" on a rebel battery. This charge was led by Lieut. Col Leslie, and resulted in the capture of the battery, one battle flag and more prisoners than the charging party had men engaged. The enemy were completely routed, and fled in disorder to the mountains. Lieut. Col. Leslie fell while gallantly leading his men on to victory, pierced through the breast with a rebel bullet. The other losses to the regiment were but few.

In March the regiment arrived at Cleveland, Tennessee, and in May moved with the cavalry of Sherman's army in the campaign against Atlanta. On the 9th of May it fought the enemy at Varnell's Station, Georgia, and on the 2d of June it had a skirmish near Burnt Church. It next moved on the McCook raid, participating in the fight at Newnan, on the 31st of July, and in all the movements of that expedition.

After the capture of Atlanta it marched into Tennessee, and engaged the enemy at Columbia, Tennessee, in October. In November it was stationed near Louisville, serving with the Second Brigade of the First Cavalry Division of the Cavalry Corps of the Military Division of the Mississippi. In January, 1865, it was in the vicinity of Nashville, and in the following month at Waterloo, Alabama. Moving into Alabama with Gen. Wilson's forces, it participated in the active campaign in that State and Georgia, engaging in the battles of Plantersville and Selma. Leaving Macon, Georgia, in May, it reached Nashville, and went into the Provisional Cavalry Camp at Edgefield, where it remained until mustered out of service on the 29th of June, 1865. After its muster out the regiment remained at Nashville a few days until it was finally discharged and paid, when the organization was broken up, and the officers and men returned to their respective homes without coming to the State Capital in a body.

Company "C" was detailed to serve as escort to Gen. A. J. Smith, and engaged in all the operations of the command of that officer, including the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, and the Red river expedition. During the year 1864 it returned to the regiment, and served with it until its final discharge.

SEVENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT—SIXTY DAY'S SERVICE.

Guerrilla raids becoming frequent on our borders during the summer of 1862, and sixty days' volunteers being tendered to the Executive, an organization composed of six companies was accepted, which rendezvoused at Indianapolis, with William L. Farrow as Lieutenant Colonel, and was mustered into the service August 5th, 1862. The organization was designated as the Seventy-Eighth Regiment, armed, equipped, and stationed at Evansville, where it performed guard duty, and made several expeditions into Kentucky in pursuit of guerrillas. In one of these affairs a portion of the regiment was captured, and paroled at Uniontown, Kentucky and Lieut. Howard, of Company "C," killed. The regiment also was employed in picket duty along the border during its term of service.

SEVENTY-NINTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Seventy-Ninth Regiment was organized at Indianapolis during the month of August, and mustered into the service, for three years, on the 2d of September, 1862, with Fred. Knefler as Colonel. Louisville was then menaced by the approach of the rebel army under General Bragg, and the regiment was hurried to the field, arriving at Louisville on the 3d. Here it participated in the work of preparation for the expected enemy until the arrival of Buell's army, when it was assigned to the First Brigade, Third Division, Twenty-First Army Corps. On the 1st of October it left Louisville with the main army, joined in the pursuit of Bragg, and was present in reserve during the battle of Perryville. After the battle the regiment joined in the further pursuit of the enemy, and, at Crab Orchard, skirmished with the rebel rear guard, losing one killed and two wounded. The regiment then marched to Logan's Cross Roads, and then countermarched to Gallatin, Tennessee, and, crossing the Cumberland river, went into camp near Nashville. It took part in the battle of Stone River, on the 31st of December, 1862, and 1st and 2d of January, 1863, losing seven killed and forty-four wounded, a total loss of fifty-one. After the disaster to the right wing, the regiment was moved to the left wing, and took part in the fight in which Breckenridge received his terrible repulse on the 2d of January, 1863. The Seventy Ninth moved with the main army into Murfreesboro, and remained in camp at that place until the 24th of June. It then marched with the army to Tullahoma; thence to Manchester, McMinnville and Pikeville.

On the 1st of September the regiment moved with the army toward Chattanooga. On the 6th it crossed the Tennessee river at Bridgeport. On the 9th crossed Lookout Mountain; and thence marched through Rossville and Ringgold to Lee and Gordon's Mill. Upon the 13th it participated in a reconnoisance, during which there was heavy skirmishing. The regiment was engaged in the battle of Chicamauga, on the 19th and 20th of September, losing one killed, forty wounded and thirteen missing, being a total loss of fifty-four. During this battle the Seventy-Ninth charged and captured the First Virginia Battery of Longstreet's Corps. It fell back with the army to Chattanooga, and was upon duty during its siege by the enemy.

Upon the re-organization of the army the Seventy-Ninth was assigned to the Third Brigade, Third Division, Fourth Army Corps. On the 23d of November the army moved to attack the besieging force under General Bragg. Then occurred the celebrated battles of Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge, known by the general name of the battles of Chattanooga. Upon this occasion the Eighty-Sixth Indiana was ordered to be temporarily consolidated with the Seventy-Ninth; and both regiments placed under command of Colonel Fred. Knefler. This consolidated force led the column which stormed and captured Mission Ridge, planted the Union colors first on the rebel works, and captured eleven pieces of artillery and several hundred prisoners. The loss of the regiment was small; the rapidity of its advance, and the conformation of the country, protecting it from the fire of the enemy.

On the 27th the regiment moved with the army under General Sherman toward Knoxville, for the purpose of relieving Gen. Burnside, then closely besieged by the rebel forces under Gen. Longstreet. Upon the approach of our army the siege was abandoned by the enemy. The command arrived in the vicinity of Knoxville on the 6th of December. The division to which the Seventy-Ninth was assigned, remained in East Tennessee during the winter of 1863 and 1864, suffering much from exposure, and being without sufficient food and clothing. The regiment was almost constantly engaged in reconnoisances, skirmishes and marches, during the four weary months that followed its advent into East Tennessee. At Strawberry Plains, New Market, Mossy Creek, and Clinch Valley, it participated in heavy skirmishes with Vaughn's rebel command, killing and capturing many prisoners. It also accompanied a cavalry expedition to Thornhill, en route for Cumberland Gap, and participated in numerous other affairs. In the month of April, 1864, the Seventy-Ninth rejoined its corps at Chattanooga, and, for the first time in ten months, rested in camp for ten days.

On the 3d of May the regiment marched to Catoosa Springs, Georgia; thence to Tunnel Hill and Rocky-face Ridge, where it was engaged in heavy skirmishing. The command then pressed onward to Dalton, and was present in reserve during the battle of Resaeca. The Seventy-Ninth marched with its corps to Calhoun, Adairsville, Kingston and Cassville, encountering severe skirmishing at all these points, and crossed the Etowah river on the 23d of May. The regiment was in the fight at New Hope Church and Pickett's Mills, and accompanied the main column to Pine-top Mountain, Lost Mountain and Kenesaw. Here it took part in the severe skirmishing that preceded the evacuation of that stronghold. It then marched to Marietta, and the Chattahoochee river, crossing the river on the 14th of July. The Seventy-Ninth effected the first crossing of Peach Tree creek, capturing the rebel works and many prisoners. It was present and on active duty during the siege of Atlanta, from July 22d until August 24th, when it moved with the main army to the south of Atlanta, on the Macon Railroad, and was engaged in the actions at Jonesboro and Lovejoy's station, Georgia, September 1st and 2d. The regiment then returned to Atlanta, arriving there on the 7th, and remained in camp at that place until the the 3d of October.

Early in October Gen. Hood's rebel army crossed the Chattahoochee river, struck the line of our communications at Big Shanty, and committed further depredations. Upon the 3d the regiment marched with its corps in pursuit, and continued until it reached Gaylesville, Alabama, and the lines of the Coosa river. There the Fourth Corps was detached from Sherman's army and sent to the support of Major Gen. Thomas, then commanding at Nashville, Tennessee.

The Seventy-Ninth marched with its corps through Chattanooga to Athens, Alabama, and from thence to Pulaski, Tennessee, arriving at the latter place on the 1st of November. Here it was employed in fortifying. On the approach of the rebel army, under Gen. Hood, it fell back to Columbia, Springfield and Franklin, where, during the battle, its division formed the reserve. The regiment arrived, with its corps, in front of Nashville on the 1st of December, and took position in the fortifications until the battle of Nashville. During this battle it was present at the storming of Overton Hill, which was captured, with nine pieces of artillery, by a portion of the brigade to which it was attached. The regiment then took part in the pursuit of the rebel army, moving through Brentwood, Franklin, Spring Hill, Columbia and Pulaski, Tennessee, to Huntsville, Alabama, where it arrived on the 6th of January, 1865. It remained in camp at Huntsville until March 17th, and then moved by rail to East Tennessee, for the purpose of participating in the contemplated advance upon Richmond, Virginia, by the army of Gen. Thomas. Disembarking at Morristown, Tennessee, the command marched through Bull's Gap and Greenville, to Jonesboro, Tennessee, where the further movements of our army were arrested by the surrender of the rebel armies of Virginia.

The Seventy-Ninth then marched back to Nashville, arriving there on the 26th of April, and remained in camp at that place until the 5th of June, when it was ordered to proceed home for discharge; and starting at once, reached Indianapolis on the 7th of June. It was present at a grand ovation given to Indiana veterans at the Capitol grounds on the 11th, welcomed by kind words from Governor Morton, General Hovey, and others, greeted with cordiality by the citizens, and upon the 11th of June, 1865, finally discharged the service of the United States.

The Seventy-Ninth, during its term of service, has been constantly in the field, upon active campaigns—never having been detailed for garrison duty. It has captured, according to official reports, and is credited with eighteen pieces of artillery and over one thousand prisoners.

EIGHTIETH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The companies composing the Eightieth Regiment were recruited in the First Congressional District, under the call of July, 1862. They were rendezvoused at Princeton in the months of August and September, at which place the regiment was organized. On the 8th of September it moved to Indianapolis, where it was armed, and at once proceeded to Covington, Kentucky, then threatened by the invading forces of the rebel General, Kirby Smith. After remaining there a few days, the regiment was transported to Louisville, where it joined the army of Gen. Buell, then being reorganized to march against Bragg. On the 1st of October it moved from Louisville on this campaign, and on the 8th participated in the battle of Chaplin Hill, or Perryville. In this engagement, fought just one month after the Eightieth left its camp of rendezvous, the regiment bore a conspicuous part, losing, in killed and wounded, one hundred and fifty men and officers; of the officers two were killed, three wounded and two captured. After Bragg had been driven out of Kentucky, the regiment remained in that State doing guard duty, and engaging in two expeditions against John Morgan's raiding cavalry. The first of these expeditions started on the 29th of December, 1862, and ended on the 9th of January, 1863. The other campaign was commenced on the 20th of June and closed on the 5th of July, 1863.

On the 18th of August, the Eightieth left Kentucky with Gen. Burnside's army, and marched across the Cumberland Mountains into East Tennessee, occupying Kingston and Knoxville during the first week of September, and participating in the active campaigns that followed. On the 7th of November it was engaged in the battle at Kingston, and in January, 1864, took part in the engagement at Mossy Creek. In the spring of 1864, the regiment left East Tennesse, with the Twenty-Third Corps, commanded by Gen. Schofield, and joined Gen. Sherman's army. Reaching the vicinity of Red Clay, Georgia, it went into camp there, and on the 9th of May, moved with the Twenty-Third Corps in the direction of Dalton.

In the memorable Atlanta campaign, the Eightieth participated in all the important engagements from Dalton to Atlanta, including the battles of Resacca, Kenesaw, Peach Tree Creek, and the fights before Atlanta. During this campaign the regiment sustained a total loss, in killed and wounded, of one hundred and seventy-five.

After the fall of Atlanta, the regiment moved northward with the Twenty-Third Corps, in pursuit of Hood's army, then making a raid in the rear of General Sherman's army. Upon reaching Gaylesville, Alabama, further pursuit was abandoned, and the Twenty-Third Corps was detached from Sherman's army and sent into Tennessee, becoming a part of Gen. Thomas' command. In the campaign that followed this transfer, commencing on the 25th of November, and ending on the 30th of December, 1864, the Eightieth was almost constantly kept on active duty. On the 30th of November it participated in the desperately fought battle at Franklin, and then fell back to Nashville, near which place, on the 15th and 16th of December, it took part in the engagement that proved so victorious to the Union arms, under General

Thomas. After the retreat of the defeated army of the rebel General Hood, the regiment moved with its corps in pursuit, following the enemy to the Tennessee river.

In January, 1865, Schofield's Corps was transferred to Alexandria, Virginia, where it embarked on steamers for North Carolina. Accompanying it on this expedition, the Eightieth participated in the campaign against Wilmington, Kingston, Goldsboro and Raleigh. It was conspicuously engaged in the successful attack upon Fort Anderson, near Wilmington, on the 19th of February. Upon the arrival of Sherman's army in North Carolina, the Twenty-Third Corps took part in the movements of the united armies against Johnson's rebel forces, and after the surrender of the latter the Corps remained on duty in that State, the Eightieth proceeding to Saulsbury with the First Division of the Corps. Here it remained until the 22d of June, 1865, when the organization proper was mustered out of service.

Returning to Indianapolis with about three hundred and twenty men and officers for discharge, the regiment was present at a reception given to returned regiments in the State House grove, on which occasion addresses of welcome were delivered by Governor Morton, General Hovey, and others. During its term of service the regiment has had three hundred and twenty-five men and officers killed and wounded, and two taken prisoners, and has traveled seven thousand two hundred and forty-five miles; of which one thousand and fifty was by water, two thousand four hundred and forty-five by railroad, and three thousand seven hundred and fifty on foot.

At the muster-out of the organization only such of the men as had entered service prior to the first of October, 1862, were discharged, all other recruits being held to service. These were transferred to the One Hundred and Twenty-Ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, which regiment was retained in service until the 29th of August, 1865, when it was mustered out of service.

EIGHTY-FIRST REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Eighty-First Regiment was organized at New Albany, and mustered into the service on the 29th of August, 1862, with William W. Caldwell as Colonel. So soon as the organization was completed it left for Louisville, Kentucky, where it remained until the 1st of October. It then joined Buell's army, and marched with it in pursuit of Bragg, reaching Perryville, Kentucky, on the 8th, and was present at the battle of Perryville, but did not participate in the engagement. From thence it countermarched to Nashville, where, upon General Rosecrans assuming command, it was assigned to the Third Brigade, First Division, (Jeff. C. Davis'.) The regiment remained in camp near Nashville until the 26th of December, when it moved with the main army on Murfreesboro, and was in position on the right wing when the rebel forces made their terrible charge at the battle of Stone River, on the 31st of December. The brigade to which it was attached successfully repelled the fierce onslaught of the enemy, and held its position until the brigades upon both flanks fell back, rendering a retrograde movement necessary. In this desperate battle the Eighty-First lost four killed, forty-four wounded, and forty missing, making a total loss of eighty-eight. It took part in the fighting on the two subsequent days of that battle, January 1st and 2d, 1863, and entered Murfreesboro with the main army.

The Eighty-First remained in camp at Murfreesboro until the 26th of June, when it joined in the forward movement, and participated in a fight at Liberty Gap on the same day. It then marched to Winchester, and remained at that place until the 17th of August. Breaking camp upon the 17th, the regiment crossed the Cumberland Mountains and marched to Stevenson, Alabama. It took part in the movement of the army that forced the enemy to evacuate Chattanooga, and on the 19th and 20th of September was engaged in the battle of Chicamauga, losing eight killed, fifty-nine wounded, and twenty-two missing, being a total loss of eighty-nine. After the battle the regiment fell back with the army to Chattanooga, and remained at that place until the 25th of October. It then broke camp and marched to Bridgeport, Alabama, where it remained until the 26th of January, 1864. The Eighty-First then marched to Ooltewah, Tennessee, and was in camp at that place until the opening of the celebrated campaign against Atlanta, May 3d, 1864. As this regiment was an active participant in this campaign, a brief sketch of the general movement may be interesting.

During the first week in May General Sherman's army moved out of Chattanooga, and on the 7th took possession of Tunnel Hill. On the 8th the enemy were driven from position in front of Buzzard Roost Gap. The next day General McPherson crossed Chattanooga Mountain, through Snake Creek Gap, after a sharp fight, and threatened the enemy's communications from Dalton to Rome and Atlanta. General Schofield marched toward Dalton on the east of Rocky Face. The remainder of the army skirmished along the line for the purpose of diverting the attention of the enemy from the flank movement. On the 10th McPherson established himself on the railroad, one mile north of Resacca. On the 12th the Fourteenth and part of the Fourth Corps moved in the direction of Snake Creek Gap, for the purpose of strengthening Hooker and McPherson, who had passed through. On the 13th the bulk of the army was in Sugar Valley, near the eastern mouth of Snake Creek Gap. The battle of Resacca resulted from this movement. The enemy retreated during the night after the battle. The army pursued, and occupied Rome and Kingston. On the 25th the battle of Dallas was fought. On the 30th the army moved toward Marietta. June 3d was passed in skirmishing. The next day the enemy retreated. On the 6th Acworth was occupied. On the 19th the enemy retreated toward the Chattahoochie river, and our army pursued. On the 21st the rebels made a furious assault and were repulsed. On the 27th Sherman made an assault upon the enemy's position at Kenesaw Mountain, and was repulsed. On the 3d of July a flank movement of our army caused the enemy to abandon his works on Kenesaw Mountain, and retreat across the Chattahoochie river. Soon after our army crossed the Chattahoochie river, and were within seven miles of Atlanta. On the 20th the battle of Peach Tree Creek was fought, and the enemy repulsed with great loss. On the 22d a terrible battle was fought, called the battle of Atlanta, with severe loss to both sides, the enemy being repulsed. On the 25th of August the Twentieth Corps fell back to the Chattahoochie river and intrenched. The enemy's cavalry cautiously pursued, thinking that the siege of Atlanta had been abandoned. Meantime, Sherman, with the bulk of the army, moves rapidly south, reaches the West Point Railroad, near Fairburn, on the 27th, and destroys twelve miles of the track. He then moves east, his right approaching the Macon Railroad near Jonesboro. On the 31st the enemy attack our right wing and are defeated. While the battle is raging, Sherman moves between Rough and-Ready and Jonesboro, and captured Jonesboro by assault on the 1st of September. That night the enemy evacuate Atlanta. On the 2d the Twentieth Corps occupied Atlanta. Sherman pursued the enemy to near Lovejoy's, when the whole army returns and group around Atlanta.

The Eighty-First participated in the following battles, during this campaign. Rocky Face, Resacca, Kingston, Bald Knob, Kenesaw, Marietta, (siege of Atlanta,) Jonesboro and Lovejoy's. The regiment subsequently marched to Atlanta, where it remained in camp until the 3d of October. At this time Hood made his raid into the rear of Sherman's army, and the regiment joined in the pursuit, marching by way of Gaylesville, Alabama, to Chattanooga. On the 31st of October it left Chattanooga as guard to the train of the Fourth Corps, and marched to Pulaski, Tennessee, arriving there on the 10th of November. It left Pulaski on the 25th, and marched by way of Columbia to Franklin, arriving there on the 30th of November, and participated in the battle of Franklin, in which the rebel General Hood was defeated. The command left Franklin on the 1st of December, and marched to Nashville, where it was engaged on duty until the battles in front of that place, on the 15th and 16th of December. The Eighty-First bore a prominent part in these battles, and followed the retreat of the rebel army, until it crossed the Tennessee river. The regiment then marched to Huntsville, Alabama, and from thence to Strawberry Plains, East Tennessee. It then Marched to Bull's Gap, and on the 3d of April, 1865, started on an expedition to North Carolina, from which it returned in eight days, and leaving Bull's Gap, arrived at Nashville on the 22d of April. Here the regiment remained until June 13th, 1865, when it was mustered out of the service of the United States, and left the same day for Indianapolis, arriving there on the 15th. On the 26th it was present at a grand ovation given to returned soldiers in the State-House Grounds, and was welcomed home by addresses from Governor Morton, Gen. Hovey, Gen. Wilder, Col. Ben. Spooner, and others. The Eighty first numbered, at its organization, nine hundred and twenty-seven men, and returned from its campaigns with two hundred and fifty men, and twenty-seven officers. On the 20th of June the remaining recruits, then at Nashville, were transferred to the Thirty-First Indiana Veterans, and continued with that regiment until its muster-out in Texas, in November, 1865.

EIGHTY-SECOND REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Eighty-Second Regiment was organized at Madison, and mustered into the service on the 30th of August, 1862, with Morton C. Hunter as Colonel. On the 1st of September it left for Louisville, Kentucky, and upon its arrival there was employed in preparations to meet the expected invasion of Bragg's army, until the 1st of October, when it was assigned to a brigade in Buell's army, and marched with the army through Kentucky in pursuit of Bragg. Returning from that unsuccessful pursuit, it formed a portion of Rosecran's command, and was engaged in the battle of Stone river, on the 31st of December, 1862, and 1st and 2d of January, 1863 It entered Murfreesboro with the victorious army of Rosecrans, and remained in camp there until the general forward movement of that army; when, on the 26th of June, it participated in the battle of Hoover's Gap, and the campaign that followed through Tennessee and Northern Georgia, and was engaged in the battle of Chicamauga on the 19th and 20th of September. During that terrible battle the Fourteenth Corps, to which the regiment was attached, withstood every assault of the enemy, and at the close of the two days' fight, retired deliberately to Mission Ridge and Chattanooga. The Eighty-Second lost in this battle twenty-one killed, seventy-two wounded, and twenty-nine missing, being a total loss of one hundred and twenty-two. The regiment was next engaged in skirmishing in front of Chattanooga, during the siege of that place, and also in a spirited affair at Brown's Ferry. It took part in the storming of Mission Ridge, on the 25th of November, losing twenty-six men in killed and wounded.

The Eighty-Second moved with the main army, early in May, 1864, upon the Atlanta campaign. On the 8th it took part in the assault at Buzzard's Roost, driving the enemy from that almost impregnable position, after a severe battle. Here the brave Lieutenant Colonel Slocum fell, mortally wounded. The regiment lost twenty-five in killed and wounded at this battle. On the 13th, in the sanguinary struggle among the wild hills of Resacca, the Eighty-Second lost twenty-five in killed and wounded. Then followed, in quick succession, the battles of Dallas, Kingston, and Kenesaw Mountain, in all of which the regiment took part. In fact, the Eighty-Second was constantly engaged in skirmishing or battle from Resacca to the crossing of the Chattahoochie river, covering a period of nearly two months. On the 20th of July it took part in the battle of Peach Tree Creek, and on the 22 l was present at the terrible battle in front of Atlanta. The regiment was almost constantly on the front line during the siege of Atlanta.

On the 7th of August, while upon the skirmish line, the regiment became engaged in a sharp fight, and suffered a loss of twenty-six men in killed and wounded, out of one hundred and five men engaged. On the 25th it moved with Sherman's army upon the southern communications of Atlanta, struck the West Point Railroad near Fairburn, aided in destroying that road, hetn moved to the Macon Railroad, near Jonesboro, and wa engaged in the battle of Jonesboro, on the 1st of September. The Eighty-Second accompanied Sherman's triumphant army in its march back to Atlanta, where it remained in camp until the 3d of October.

The rebel Gen. Hood having swung his army in Sherman's rear, and struck and destroyed his line of communications, upon the 3d of October, Sherman, leaving the Twentieth Corps to hold Atlanta, moved in pursuit. Hood's design was to destroy, and avoid a fight. And Sherman, whose object was subsequently developed, slowly pursuing, drove the enemy as far north as necessary, and having followed Hood to near Gaylesville, Alabama, suddenly ceased pursuit, concentrated his corps, detached the Fourth and Twenty-Third Corps to the command of General Thomas, left Hood, the obstinate, to the tender mercies of Thomas, the good; and, gathering his veterans well in hand, Sherman, the indomitable, marched for the blue and sparkling waters of the sea.

The Eighty-Second accompanied these movements, and entered Savannah December 21st, 1864, in time to partake of a Christmas dinner. From thence, after a brief halt, it accompanied the army in its march through the Carolinas, was present at the battle of Bentonville, North Carolina, after which it passed on to Goldsboro. The regiment remained at that place for a brief period, and then moved to the Capital of North Carolina. While there, the intelligence of the surrender of General Lee's army was received, and soon after General Johnston made propositions for the surrender of the armies under his command. An armistice followed. Pending this armistice, the Eighty-Second remained in camp, and, upon the final surrender of the rebel army under Johnson, it broke camp, and on the 30th of April, started on the homeward march. Leaving Raleigh, at that date, by rapid marches it reached Alexandria, on the Potomac, on the 19th of May, and was part of the column in the grand review at Washington, the Capital, on the 25th of May. The regiment was mustered out at Washington, on the 9th of June, 1865, and at once proceeded to Indiana.

The remaining recruits were transferred to the Twenty-Second Indiana Veteran Volunteers, with which regiment they continued until its muster-out, in July following.

The Eighty-Second left for the field with an aggregate of nine hundred and forty-seven. It returned with two hundred and eighty-nine men. Upon its arrival at Indianapolis it was, on the 15th of June, greeted with the honors due to the returning braves, at a cheerful meeting in the State-House Grove, welcomed with addresses from Governor Morton, General Hovey and others, and its members soon left for their respective homes.

EIGHTY-THIRD REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Eighty-Third Regiment was organized at Lawrenceburg in September, 1862, with Benjamin J. Spooner as Colonel, and, in a few weeks after, left the State for the Mississippi river. The organization was composed of nine companies of volunteers for three years, and one company of drafted men. The latter was discharged from service at the expiration of nine months from the 15th of November, 1862. Upon reaching Memphis the regiment was assigned to duty with the army then operating in West Tennessee, and participated in the march to the Tallahatchie and the first campaign against Vicksburg in December. In the latter campaign it was actively engaged in the assault upon the enemy's works at Chickasaw Bayou.

In January, 1863, it proceeded up the Mississippi with the expeditionary force sent into Arkansas, and was engaged in the storming and capture of Arkansas Post, on the 11th of January. After this it joined General Grant's army, then occupying Milliken's Bend and Young's Point, and took part in the preliminary operations that opened the campaign against Vicksburg. In the latter part of March it moved with the army in its march to the rear of Vicksburg, and after crossing to the east side of the Mississippi engaged in the battle of Champion Hills on the 16th of May. The regiment then went into the entrenched works fronting those of the enemy at Vicksburg, and remained therein, almost constantly on duty until the capitulation of the enemy on the 4th of July. While there it took part in the assaults upon the rebel works on the 19th and 22d of May. The regiment next marched to Jackson, and participated in the siege and capture of that place.

Upon the termination of the Vicksburg campaign the Eighty-Third proceeded up the Mississippi, with Sherman's army, to Memphis, and from thence marched across the country to Chattanooga, where, on the 25th of November, it participated in the great victory over the enemy at Mission Ridge. During the winter of 1863 the regiment remained in camp in the vicinity of Cleveland, Tennessee, and in the spring following engaged in the Atlanta campaign. Marching with the Army of the Tennessee southward to Atlanta, it was actively engaged in all the movements of that successful campaign, engaging in the battles at Resacca, Dallas, New Hope Church, Kenesaw Mountain, the repulse of Hood's army on the 22d and 28th of July, near Atlanta, and the battle of Jonesboro. After the occupation of Atlanta, the Eighty-Third moved northward, in pursuit of Hood's army, and after aiding in driving the enemy into Northern Alabama, returned to Atlanta.

In November Sherman's army commenced its march through Georgia to Savannah, and the Eighty-Third moved with it, reaching Savannah on the 21st of December. In the assault upon and capture of Fort McAllister, near Savannah, the regiment was engaged, thus opening Sherman's communications with the sea. It next proceeded to Beaufort, from whence it marched through the Carolinas to Goldsboro, engaging the enemy at Columbia, South Carolina, and Bentonville, North Carolina.

Upon the conclusion of active military operations in those States, the regiment moved to Washington City, marching through Raleigh, Petersburg, Richmond, and Fredericksburg. At Washington it formed a portion of the marching column at the grand review of Sherman's heroes, and on the 3d of June, 1865, was mustered out of service, and proceeded homeward. Reaching Indianapolis, it was present at a grand reception given to returned soldiers in the Capitol grounds on the 9th of June. On his occasion addresses were made by Governor Morton, General Hovey, and Col. Ben. Spooner, (now United States Marshal.)

The remaining recruits, upon the muster-out of the organization at Washington, was transferred to the Forty-Eighth Indiana, and continued to serve with that regiment until its muster-out at Louisville, Kentucky, on the 15th of July, 1865.

The Eihgty-Third has traveled over four thousand miles by land, eighteen hundred upon steamboats, and four hundred and eighty-five miles by rail, making a total of six thousand two hundred and eighty-five miles traveled during its term of service. It has been engaged in several minor battles and skirmishes in addition to those mentioned in this sketch, and has been under fire for over two hundred days.

EIGHTY-FOURTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Eighty-Fourth Regiment was organized at Richmond, and mustered into the service on the 3d of September, 1862, with Nelson Trusler, as Colonel. On the 8th it left for Covington, Kentucky, and upon its arrival there was assigned to the defenses of that city and Cincinnati, then threatened by the invading force of the rebel Gen. Kirby Smith. The arrival of Buell's army caused the invading force to fall back, and on the 1st of October the regiment started by rail for Point Pleasant, Western Virginia, and upon its arrival went into camp at that place, where it remained until the 13th. The regiment then broke camp and moved to Guyandotte, reaching there on the 17th. Here the Eighty-Fourth remained, occasionally employed in scouting duty, until the 14th of November. Upon that date the regiment left for Catlettsburg, Kentucky, and, after a short stay at that place, moved to Cassville, Kentucky. Here it remained in camp until the 7th of February, 1863.

The regiment then moved back to Catlettsburg, and embarking on board a steamboat, sailed down the Ohio river to Louisville, reaching there on the 17th, and was assigned to the Second Brigade, Third Division, Army of Kentucky. The regiment then proceeded to Nashville, and remained in camp at that place until the 5th of March. It then moved by rail to Franklin, where a camp was formed, and the regiment remained until the 3d of June. During this period it took part in several reconnoisances and skirmishes. On the 3d the regiment marched with its division to Triune, Tennessee. On the 8th the Eighty-Fourth was assigned to the First Brigade, First Division, Reserve Corps, commanded by Major General Granger. On the 11th the enemy made an attack upon Triune, and were repulsed, the Eighty-Fourth taking part in the fight. On the 23d the regiment left Triune and marched in pursuit of the retiring forces of Bragg. The command marched to Middleton, thence to Shelbyville, and thence to Wartrace, where it went into camp and remained there until the 12th of August. While stationed at this point, Brig. Gen. Whitaker was assigned to the command of the brigade to which the regiment was attached. On the 20th the march was taken up for Estell Springs, where the regiment encamped for a short time, and then moved to Tullahoma. Thence the march was taken up to Stevenson, from that point to Bridgeport, and thence to Chattanooga, where it arrived on the 13th of September. The Eighty-Fourth went into camp at Rossville, five miles south of Chattanooga, and remained there until the 18th. It then moved to the front, and took position on the left of the line of the Army of the Cumberland.

In the battle of Chicamauga, on the 19th and 20th of September, General James B. Steadman commanded the First Division, Reserve Corps, to which the Eighty-Fourth was attached. Upon the afternoon of the 19th this division held the extreme left of our line, and the key to Roseeran's retreat. Repeated assaults were made by the enemy to obtain this coveted position, but they were repulsed. On the 20th the enemy massed his troops and furiously assaulted Thomas; then the First Division rushed to the relief of the fighting heroes of the Army of the Cumberland, and fought so nobly as to materially aid Thomas in saving the army. The Eighty-Fourth lost in this battle one hundred and twenty-five in killed, wounded and missing.

Leaving the battle-field on the night of the 20th, the regiment bivouacked in its old camp at Rossville, and the next morning crossed the Tennessee river and went on picket duty opposite Lookout Mountain, where it remained nine consecutive days and nights, keeping up a constant skirmish with the enemy across the river. The regiment then moved to Moccasin Point, where it remained until the 1st of November. It then moved to Shell Mound, where it remained in camp until the 26th of January, 1864.

Meantime, the army being reorganized, the Eighty-fourth was assigned to the Second Brigade, (Whitaker's) First Division, (Stanley's) Fourth Army Corps, (Granger's) The regiment left Shell Mound on the 26th of January, and marched to Cleveland, arriving there on the 6th of February. On the 22d it started with a reconnoissance in force, to Buzzard's Roost, and was engaged in the battle at that place on the 25th. The regiment then returned to Cleveland, and remained in camp at that place until the 3d of May, 1864. It then moved with Sherman's army on its campaign towards Atlanta. During this campaign the regiment was engaged in action at the following places: Tunnel Hill, Rocky Face, Dalton, Resacca, Kingston, Pumkin-Vine Creek, Pine Mountain, Kenesaw Mountain, Neal Dow Church or Culp's Farm, Peach Tree Creek, in front of Atlanta, Shoal's Creek, Jonesboro, and Lovejoy's Station. With this glorious record of valor, the regiment marched with the army into Atlanta. Meantime the Eighty-fourth was transferred to the Second Brigade, Third Division (Grose's).

On the 3d of October the regiment left Atlanta and marched to Chattanooga, arriving there on the 30th. The Fourth Corps, to which it was attached, meanwhile, was assigned to the command of Gen. Thomas. From Chattanooga the regiment moved by rail to Athens, Alabama, and from thence to Pulaski, Tennessee, arriving at that place on the 4th of November. On the 23d the regiment left Pulaski and marched to Columbia, and on the 30th reached Franklin, and was present at the battle at that place. From Franklin the regiment marched to Nashville, arriving there on the 1st of December.

On the morning of the 15th of December, the army of Gen. Thomas moved upon the forces of the rebel Gen. Hood, then strongly entrenched on the southern approaches to Nashville. The regiment was not in action the first day. Upon the second day the regiment participated in a charge upon the enemy's skirmish line, and at 3 P. M. took part in a general charge upon the enemy's works, resulting in carrying his strongly entrenched position, and driving him in confusion from the field. The regiment lost in this battle twenty-three killed and wounded. Joining in the pursuit of Hood, it crossed the Tennessee river, and was then ordered to Huntsville, Alabama, which place it reached on the 5th of January, 1865. Here the regiment remained until the 13th of March, when it moved to Knoxville, and from thence to Strawberry Plains, Bull's Gap. and Shield's Mills. Here the regiment remained until the 18th of April. It then moved to Nashville, arriving there on the 23d.

On the 14th of June, 1865, the Eighty-Fourth was mustered out of the service of the United States, at Nashville, the remaining recruits being transferred to the Fifty-Seventh Indiana Veterans, with which regiment they continued to serve in Texas, until its muster-out in November, 1865. The Eighty-Fourth left Nashville on the 15th of June for Indianapolis, reached there on the 17th, was present at a public reception of returned heroes, in the State-House Grove on the 26th, were welcomed in behalf of the State of Indiana, by Gov. Morton, Gen. Hovey, Gen. Wilder, and others, and quickly found their quiet homes. The regiment left for the field with an aggregate of nine hundred and forty-four officers and men, and returned with three hundred and twenty-seven men and twenty-two officers.

EIGHTY-FIFTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Eighty-Fifth Regiment was organized at Terre Haute, on the 2d of September, 1862, with John P. Baird as Colonel, and at once proceeded to Covington, Kentucky, and marched thence to Falmouth. After the rebel army fell back from Kentucky the regiment marched to Lexington and Danville, and remained at the latter place until February, 1863. It then moved to Louisville and there embarked on boats and proceeded, by water, to Nashville, Tennessee, and from thence marched to Franklin. The brigade to which it belonged was composed of the Thirty-Third Indiana, the Twenty-Second Wisconsin, Nineteenth Michigan, and Eighty-Fifth Indiana, and was commanded by Col. John Coburn. On the 4th of March the brigade moved from Franklin, to forage and push Gen. Forest's forces back to Spring Hill. On the 5th of March, at Thompson's Station, Col. Coburn made an attack upon the enemy, driving him back some miles. Colonel Coburn now encountered Gen. Forrest with five brigades, who were strongly posted behind stone fences, when a desperate conflict ensued, the battle lasting five or six hours. Finally, after being surrounded and completely overpowered, the brigade was compelled to surrender, but not until all of its ammunition had been exhausted. This was the first engagement in which the Eighty-Fifth had taken part, and it fought most gallantly, changing front three times under a severe fire. The loss of the regiment was heavy in both killed and wounded. After the surrender the captured brigade was marched sixteen miles to Columbia, and thence to Tullahoma, suffering during the march from want of food, from exhaustion, and from exposure to rain and cold. The men were compelled to remain out uncovered one whole night, without food. From Tullahoma they were transported to Chattanooga, and thence to Richmond, where they were placed in Libby Prison. On the 31st of March they were released and returned to Indianapolis. During the twenty-six days of its captivity, the Eighty-Fifth suffered exceedingly from ill-usage, quite a number dying along the route of its march, and at Richmond.

In June, 1863, after the exchange, the regiment was again sent to Tennessee and stationed at Franklin, where it engaged in more or less skirmishing and fighting, until Bragg's army fell back. It then marched to Murfreesboro and remained in that vicinity all summer, fall and winter, guarding the railroad line from Nashville to Chattanooga, in the performance of which duty it was frequently upon the track of raiders and guerrillas. On the 20th of April, 1864, the regiment, then at Lavergne, began its march for Lookout Valley, with Coburn's Brigade, where it joined the Twentieth Corps, and immediately entered upon the campaign against Atlanta. It participated in every engagement of any importance during that campaign. It was in the terrible charge upon Resacca, in the battles at Cassville, Dallas Woods, Golgotha Church, Culp's Farm and Peach Tree Creek. At Peach Tree Creek Coburn's Brigade was the first to receive the charging forces of the enemy, deploying in single line, and when the Eighty-Fifth opened fire upon the rebels they were not over fifty feet from its front. The destruction of life was terrible to the enemy. When our line charged the enemy, sweeping him back to his works, the ground in front of the Eighty-Fifth was piled with dead and wounded rebels. Upon its front, between the place where it met the enemy and where it halted at the top of the hill, fifty-three rebels were buried in one grave. The regiment, also, took part in the struggle before Atlanta, and was present at the fall of that place.

On the 15th of November, Sherman's army moved from Atlanta on its campaign through Georgia, the Twentieth Corps forming a part of the left wing of that army. The Second Brigade of the Third Division of that Corps—being the same old Brigade of Coburn, under a new commander—participated in this campaign, and on the 12th of December came upon the enemy's lines at Savannah, and remained in front of the enemy's works for ten days. Upon the fall of Savannah it marched into the city, and on the 1st of January, 1865, the division to which it was attached was the first to cross into South Carolina, driving the enemy's cavalry before it. The Eighty-Fifth then lay in the swamps near the Savannah river, with its brigade, until the 1st of February, when it started on the campaign through South Carolina.

At Averysboro, North Carolina, on the 16th of March, two divisions of the 20th corps attacked the army of Johnson. The Second Brigade of the Third Division charged the rebel works through an open field, and in this movement the Eighty-Fifth was the directing regiment. The charge was most gallantly made, under a terrible fire, and under the eye of Gen. Sherman. Our forces swept in over the enemy's works, taking many prisoners and three pieces of artillery. The Eighty-Fifth suffered severely in killed and wounded.

In the arduous labors of this campaign the Eighty-Fifth never flagged. It could thoroughly destroy a half mile of railroad in forty minutes, and many miles of wagon road were corduroyed by this industrious regiment. It fell to the lot of the regiment, at the crossing of the Catawba river, to work all night, after a twenty miles march, in making a road up the steep, muddy bluffs of that stream; and for their success in this undertaking, the regiment was complimented by Generals Sherman and Slocum (who were present and gave directions to the men there laboring,) for the amount of labor performed, and the skill with which it was done.

At Bentonville the regiment moved with its division six miles to the field, where all seemed lost. This march was made without halting, though the road was obstructed by trains and the impediments of the army. After that long and hurried march, the troops deployed into line with precision, and during the day the Eighty-Fifth moved to four positions upon the field, under a severe fire, and aided in building a line of works to cover the flank. After this it moved to Goldsboro, from whence it marched in the campaign against Raleigh, and upon the surrender of Johnson marched to Richmond, looking as victors upon Libby Prison, and making its second tour of the Southern Confederacy more proudly, than it had done the first one in sorrow and mortification.

From Richmond the regiment moved to Washington, where it was mustered out of service on the 12th of June, 1865, and at once proceeded to Indianapolis, where it was finally discharged. The remaining recruits were transferred to the Thirty-Third Indiana, with which organization they continued to serve until its muster-out at Louisville, Kentucky, on the 21st of July, 1865. From the 15th of May, 1864, to the date of its discharge, the Eighty-Fifth lost in killed and wounded, one hundred and forty-seven.

EIGHTY-SIXTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Eighty-Sixth Regiment was recruited in the Eighth Congressional District, organized at Lafayette during the month of August, and mustered into the service on the 4th of September, 1862, with Orville S. Hamilton as Colonel. At that time Kentucky was penetrated by the invading columns of Kirby Smith and Bragg, the former threatening Cincinnati, and the latter Louisville. The Eighty-Sixth was at once hurried to Cincinnati, arriving there on the 7th, where it was assigned to duty on the defenses at Covington, Kentucky. On the 20th the regiment left, by steamboat, for Louisville, and remained at that place until the 1st of October, when it was assigned to the Fourteenth Brigade, Fifth Division, Army of the Ohio, and marched in pursuit of Bragg, through Kentucky. For two weary months the regiment toiled over dusty roads, marching almost constantly by day and night, frequently skirmishing with the enemy's rear guard, but never being able to force a battle in consequence of the slow strategic movements of the General commanding, until with half its men disabled by exhaustion, it reached Nashville on the 26th of November. The regiment, in this desultory pursuit and devious countermarch, passed through Bardstown, Danville, Springfield, Perryville, Crab Orchard, Mount Vernon, and reached Wild Cat; thence it retraced its course by the way of Mount Vernon, Somerset, Scottsville, Glasgow, Columbia, and Gallatin, to Nashville, gaining a good geographical knowledge of the country, but not much information of the art of war; this was to be learned thereafter, on other fields.

Upon the formation of the Army of the Cumberland the Eighty-Sixth was assigned to the Second Brigade, Third Division, (Van Cleve's,) Twenty-First Army Corps. The regiment was under command of Lieut. Col. George F. Dick at the battle of Stone River, December 31, 1862, and January 1st and 2d, 1863, and the division to which it was attached formed a portion of the left wing of the army, on that battle field. When the right of our army gave way, our division rushed rapidly to its support, and arrived in time to materially check the enemy. It was at this juncture that General Rosecrans led a charge in person, which drove the enemy for nearly a mile. The regiment lost in this battle, twenty-four killed, and twenty-four wounded; a total loss of forty-eight. The regiment moved with the main army into Murfreesboro, where it remained until the general forward movement was made upon Chattanooga. While at Murfreesboro, in April, Lieut. Col. Dick was promoted to the Colonelcy. The regiment reached Chattanooga early in September, and took an active part in the battle of Chicamauga, on the 19th and 20th of September. The regiment fell back with the main army to Chattanooga, and was on duty during the siege of that place.

Upon the re-organization of the army and the formation of the Fourth Corps, the Eighty-Sixth was assigned to the Third Brigade, (Beatty's) Third Division, (Wood's) of that corps. Upon the 23d of November a general advance was made upon the lines of the enemy besieging Chattanooga, resulting in the battles of Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge, on the 23d, 24th and 25th of November. In the assault on Mission Ridge the Eighty-Sixth was in the storming column, and aided in capturing eleven pieces of artillery and many prisoners. So determined was the onslaught, that the men swept up the rugged hill side and over the enemy's works, regardless of commands.

The regiment then marched with its division to East Tennessee, and passed the winter of 1863 and 1864 in long and fatiguing marches and scouts in that country. In the month of April, 1864, the division rejoined its corps near Chattanooga, and early in May moved with Sherman's army on the campaign of which Atlanta was the objective point. The regiment participated in all the operations of the main army on this long and arduous campaign. It was actively engaged at Rocky Face Ridge, Resacca, Adairsville, Kingston, Picket's Mills, (where Col. Dick was severely wounded,) Kenesaw Mountain, Chattahoochee River, Peach Tree Creek, battle and siege of Atlanta, Jonesboro and Lovejoy's. It returned with the main army to Atlanta, and after a short rest, was dispatched with its corps toward Chattanooga, to watch and pursue Hood. It being the policy of Sherman to drive that General and his army as far north as necessary, the pursuit was not very vigorous, and, upon reaching Gaylesville, was discontinued. The Fourth Corps was then assigned to the command of General Thomas, and moving northward, the Eighty-Sixth took part in the battle of Franklin, on the 30th of November, and in the battles of Nashville, on the 15th and 16th of December.

For a short time previous to the battles of Nashville, the enemy under Hood had been in position in front of Nashville, commanding its southern approaches. On the 15th of December Gen. Thomas assumed the offensive. Thomas' line was formed with Wilson's cavalry on the right, then A. J. Smith, Wood and Steadman, Schofield's Corps being in reserve. After an opening fire from our batteries, Steadman made a strong demonstration on the enemy's right, the real attack being designed for his center and left. Wood carried the strong works in the center. Our batteries then advanced, and Smith assailed the hostile left. Schofield came up on Smith's right, out-flanking the enemy, who began to give way. Our right was thus thrown between the river and the enemy's left, which was hurled back on the center. Wilson's cavalry now pushed forward, and our whole line advanced in the face of a hot fire. The enemy's works were carried, and he fell back in confusion. Night closed the action. The next morning the fight was renewed with decided success, the enemy being driven from each successive line of intrenchments, and falling back to Franklin. The pursuit was briskly pressed, and the defeated and demoralized enemy driven across the Tennessee river, when our army ceased pursuit.

After this battle the Eighty-Sixth camped at Huntsville, where it remained from the 1st of January, 1865, until the 16th of March; it then moved with its corps into East Tennessee. Beatty's brigade marched from New Market to Jonesboro, where it remained until the 20th of April, when the whole corps moved to Nashville, the Eighty-Sixth arriving on the 27th. The regiment remained in camp at Nashville until the 6th of June, 1865, at which date it was mustered out of the service of the United States, and at once left by rail for Indianapolis. Arriving at Indianapolis on the evening of the 7th, the Eighty-Sixth was greeted with an ovation on the morning of the next day, in the State House grove, and were welcomed by speeches from Governor Morton, General Wagner and others; and that afternoon the regiment was paid off, and finally discharged.

	ELIJAH N. COOPER	Hillsdale, Mich.	May 1, 1865		Mustered out as 1st Sergeant with Regiment.

The companies composing the Eighty-Seventh Regiment were recruited in the Ninth Congressional District. The regiment was organized at South Bend on the 28th of August, 1862, and at once moved to Indianapolis, where, on the 31st of August, it was mustered into the three-years' service, with Kline G. Shryock as Colonel. On the day of its muster it left Indianapolis and proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, where, on the 1st of September, it was assigned to Gen. Burbridge's Brigade. On the 1st of October it was transferred to the Third Brigade, Third Division, of the 14th Army Corps, and with it took part in Gen. Buell's campaign through Kentucky. It was under fire at Springfield on the 6th of October, and on the 8th of that month engaged in the battle at Perryville.

After marching and countermarching through Kentucky, the regiment encamped near Mitchellvile, Tennessee, in November. During this campaign the loss to the regiment was light, not exceeding six killed and wounded. After this the Eighty-Seventh occupied camps at Tunnel Hill, Pilot Knob, and Gallatin, Tennessee, and on the 29th of January, 1863, it moved to Concord Church, south of Nashville. On the 4th of March it engaged in a skirmish at Chapel Hill against General Forrest's command, after which it moved to Triune. On the 28th of March Col. Shryock resigned, whereupon Lieut. Col. Newell Gleason was promoted Colonel, which rank that officer held until the close of Sherman's last campaign, when he was brevetted a Brigadier General.

On the 23d of June, the Eighty-Seventh moved with the Army of the Cumberland, and engaged in the summer campaign against Tullahoma, being under fire at Hoover's Gap, and being with that part of the Army which entered Tullahoma. It then marched to Winchester, Tennessee, and thence over the mountains to Battle creek, on the Tennessee river. In the fall campaign against Chattanooga the regiment participated, crossing the Tennessee and marching over several high mountain ranges. It bore a conspicuous part in the bloody battle of Chicamauga, on the 19th and 20th of September, losing of its number forty killed, one hundred and forty-two wounded, and eight missing, among whom were eight officers killed and four wounded—being more than half of all the officers and men engaged. The regiment remained in Chattanooga during the siege of that place, and upon the reorganization of the Army of the Cumberland, it formed a part of the Second Brigade, Third Division, Fourteenth Army Corps. On the 25th of November the regiment was in the front line of its brigade in the storming of Mission Ridge, and lost, in killed and wounded, sixteen men. After the victory it engaged in the pursuit of the enemy to Ringold, Georgia. On the 22d of February, 1864, it participated in an expedition against Dalton, and skirmished with the enemy in front of Buzzard Roost, near that place. Returning from this expedition it went into camp at Ringold, where it remained until the 7th of May.

In the laborious campaign against Atlanta, the Eighty-Seventh participated in all the principal battles and skirmishes, confronting the enemy at Rocky Face, Resacca, Cassville, near Dallas, Kenesaw, Peach Tree Creek, and before Atlanta. In a charge upon the enemy's works at Utoy's Creek, in front of Atlanta, on the 4th of August, the loss of the regiment was seventeen killed and wounded. It also participated in the battle of Jonesboro, on the 1st of September, and then moved into Atlanta, where it went into camp for a brief period.

Moving with its corps from Atlanta on the 3d of October, it participated in the campaign in pursuit of Hood through Northern Georgia, marching to Resacca, and thence through Snake Creek Gap to the Chattooga Valley. From thence it marched to Gaylesville, Alabama, and then returned to Atlanta, going by way of Rome and Kingston, Georgia. On the 16th of November the regiment left Atlanta with the Fourteenth Corps, and marching through Decatur and Covington, took the road to Milledgeville. Passing through Shady Dale and Eatonton Factories, it went into camp on the 23d, in the vicinity of Milledgeville. On the 24th the march towards Savannah was resumed, the regiment moving by way of Black Spring, Fair Play, and Long's Bridge to Saundersville, which was reached on the morning of the 26th. The advance guard of Wheeler's cavalry was met near that place and skirmished with, but offered no serious opposition. Marching to the left of the Georgia Central Railroad, and crossing the Ogeechee, the regiment reached Louisville on the 28th, where it rested until the 1st of December. It then moved toward Jacksonboro, going by way of Reynolds, Thomas' Station and Waynesboro, destroying a portion of the railroad and skirmishing with Wheeler's cavalry, near the latter place. From Jacksonboro it marched to Hudson's Ferry on the Savannah river, reaching there on the 6th. On the 9th Ebenezer Church was reached, and on the 10th the immediate defenses of Savannah were approached, and the siege began. After the evacuation of Savannah, on the 21st of December, the Eighty-Seventh marched into the city and remained there until the 30th of January, 1865.

The regiment participated in the campaign made through the Carolinas, marching with the Fourteenth Corps to Goldsboro, North Carolina, where it remained in camp until the 10th of April, 1865. It then moved to Smithfield, and took part in the capture of that town From thence it proceeded to Raleigh and then to a point near Holly Springs, where it camped until after the surrender of Gen. Johnston's rebel army. From North Carolina the regiment marched to Richmond, Virginia, and thence to Washington City, where it participated in the grand review of Sherman's army. On the 10th of June, 1865, the Eighty-Seventh was mustered out of service at Washington and proceeded to Indianapolis, where, on the 21st of June, it was publicly welcomed home by Governor Morton, in behalf of the State, at a reception meeting held in the Capitol grounds, at which addresses were also made by Generals Hovey and Gleason.

The remaining recruits, whose terms of service would not expire until after the 1st of October, 1865, were, on the 10th of June, transferred to the Forty-Second Indiana, in which organization they continued to serve until its final muster out at Louisville, Kentucky, on the 21st of July, 1865.

The total casualties of the regiment have been as follows:—Killed in action, forty-seven; wounded in action, one hundred and ninety-eight; died from wounds and disease, two hundred and fourteen

EIGHTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Eighty-Eighth Regiment was recruited from the Fourth Congressional District, rendezvoused at Fort Wayne, and was mustered into the service on the 29th of August, 1862, with George Humphrey as Colonel. At this time great excitement existed in Louisville, Kentucky, in consequence of the approach of the rebel army under E. Kirby Smith, and every effort was being made by the Governor and military authorities to dispatch troops to the threatened points. The Eighty-Eighth was at once ordered to Louisville, and arrived there on the 30th. Here it was assigned to a position in the defenses of that city, and remained until the 1st of October, when it was assigned to the Seventeenth Brigade, Rousseau's Division, and marched with the Army of the Ohio in pursuit of Bragg. At the battle of Perryville, October 8th, its brigade formed the right of Rousseau's division, and against this the rebels directed their fiercest assaults. The brigade, though suffering a frightful loss, held the enemy in check until night closed the battle. The regiment was complimented by General Rousseau for its steadiness under fire.

The enemy retreated during the night following the battle, and the regiment joined in the pursuit as far as Crab Orchard. It then returned by the way of Lebanon, and marched to Tyree Springs and Nashville, Tennessee.

During the month of November the army was reorganized, and the Eighty-Eighth assigned to the Second Brigade, (Beatty's) First Division, (Rousseau's) Army of the Cumberland. The regiment moved with the main army, on the 26th of December, in the advance upon Murfreesboro, which resulted in the battle of Stone River, on the 31st of December, 1862, and 1st and 2d of January, 1863. In this battle it was severely engaged. Its division moved to the support of the right at its most critical moment, and meeting the exultant rush of the rebels with a withering fire, successfully checked his advance. Among the heroic deeds which crowned that battle none surpassed the grand efforts of Rousseau's splendid division. On the evening of the 3d Beatty's brigade advanced, drove the enemy from cover and carried his intrenchments, being the final charge of the battle of Stone River. That night the rebels abandoned Murfreesboro. The Eighty-Eighth lost in this battle eight killed and forty-eight wounded, a total loss of fifty-six. On the 5th of January, the regiment marched with its division into Murfreesboro.

The regiment remained in camp in the vicinity of Murfreesboro until the 24th of June; at this time the Army of the Cumberland commenced a forward movement, marching by the Shelbyville and Manchester roads. The rebel pickets were encountered a short distance from Murfreesboro, and fell back before the advance of the center to Hoover's Gap, where they held a strong position in a narrow, winding hollow, through a chain of hills. Here a brisk fight took place, and the rebels were handsomely whipped. The regiment was engaged in this fight, and also in the severe skirmishes at Tullahoma, Hillsboro and Elk River. The command crossed the Cumberland, Sand and Lookout ranges of mountains, and on the 11th of September its division had a severe engagement with the rebel General Polk at Dug Gap, Georgia.

On the 18th of September the regiment moved with its corps along Chicamauga creek to Crawfish Springs, and thence to Kelley's farm, arriving there at daylight on the 19th. This movement resulted in the battle of Chicamauga, September 19th, 20th and 21st. Our division advancing upon what was supposed to be an isolated force of the enemy, at first drove it some distance, taking many prisoners; but soon, with overwhelming numbers, the enemy forced us back, and the battle raged furiously along the whole line. For two days the corps of General Thomas, to which the regiment was attached, fought gallantly against the charging columns of the enemy, and on the third day formed the rear guard, and fell back toward Chattanooga, where the army concentrated.

On the night of the 24th of November the Eighty-Eighth moved with the command of Gen. Hooker, scaled Lookout Mountain and "fought among the clouds." On the following day it was engaged in the charge of Mission Ridge, being among the first to plant the Union flag on the rebel works. On the 27th the regiment was engaged at Graysville and Ringgold, and assisted in capturing a rebel battery. On the 22d of February, 1864, the regiment marched with a reconnoisance in force, under General Palmer, towards Dalton, and took possession of Tunnel Hill, Georgia.

Early in the month of May, 1864, Sherman's army, which had been grouped around Chattanooga, confronting the rebel army under the rebel Gen Johnson, moved on its campaign against Atlanta. The Eighty-Eighth marched with the army, and participated in the many battles, severe skirmishes and fatiguing movements, which crowned that campaign with success, and resulted in the occupation of Atlanta. The regiment was engaged at Buzzard Roost, Resacca, Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta and Utoy Creek, and accompanied the main army when it made its triumphal entrance into Atlanta.

On the 3d of October, the rebel General Hood, grown frantic with repeated defeats, made one of the most stupendous military blunders, swung his army in Sherman's rear, struck the railroad at Big Shanty, and, as Hood said, "fixed his claws upon the State Road," with a promise to "never let go his hold." And on the same date, a portion of Sherman's veterans moved to drive Hood gently north into the kind embrace of Thomas. The regiment joined in the pursuit, and after a march of over three hundred miles, returned to Kingston, Georgia, on the 12th of November. Upon arriving there, Gen. Sherman at once cut loose from his communications with the North, and commenced the famous "march to the sea." The Eighty-Eighth marched with the column that penetrated the enemy's country by the way of Milledgeville, Louisville and Millen, and, upon the 21st of October, the "lost army" entered the city of Savannah, having marched three hundred and sixty miles without serious resistance.

On the 26th of January, 1865, the Eighty-Eighth marched with its corps from Savannah, moving up on the Georgia side of the Savannah river, by way of Springfield, and on the 7th of February the crossing was completed with great difficulty and labor, owing to the "bottom" being three miles in width. It then marched for the Charleston and Augusta railway, passing through Blackville and destroying the railway west of Branchville. Crossing the South Edisto on the 13th, and the North Edisto on the 14th, the regiment marched to Lexington, and from thence moved to Winnsboro, crossing the Saluda river west of Columbia on the 17th, and the Broad river, near Allston, on the 19th. The Spartansburg railway was then destroyed for fourteen miles to the northward of Alston, and on the 20th Little river was crossed, and on the 21st Winnsboro reached. On the 22d the regiment marched in the direction of Charlotte as far as Blackstocks, and then, facing to the right, marched for the Catawba river, which was reached the same evening. Owing to the swelling of the river from heavy rains, the regiment was compelled to remain on the left bank of the Catawba for several days. Hanging Rock was reached on the 1st of March, from whence the Eighty-Eighth moved to Horton's Ferry on Lynch's Creek, and on the 5th crossed the Great Pedee at Sneedsboro, North Carolina. On the 6th it moved by Love's Bridge, over the Lumber river, in the direction of Fayetteville, crossing it on the 7th of March, and marched to within twenty miles of Fayetteville on the 9th, ten miles nearer on the 10th, and on the 11th entered the town. Here it remained until the 14th of March, when it moved in the direction of Goldsboro, taking Averysboro on the march. The regiment was present at the sanguinary battle of Bentonville, on the 19th of March. The command reached Goldsboro on the 22d of March, having marched five hundred and two miles, since leaving Savannah. On the 10th of April the regiment left Goldsboro, and marched by way of Raleigh to Cape Fear river, and was at the latter point at the time of Johnson's surrender to Gen. Grant. The regiment marched from Cape Fear river, by the way of Richmond, Virginia, to Washington City, making the distance marched from Goldsboro, North Carolina, to Washington, four hundred and fifty-two miles.

Upon the 7th of June, 1865, the regiment was mustered out of the service of the United States at Washington, D. C., and at once left for Indianapolis. Upon the 13th of June it was greeted with an ovation in the State House Grove, and welcomed by eloquent and able addresses from Governor Morton and others, and its members dispersed to their several homes.

EIGHTY-NINTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The companies composing the Eighty-Ninth Regiment were recruited in the Eleventh Congressional District, rendezvoused at Wabash, and organized at Indianapolis. The regiment was mustered into service on the 28th of August, 1862, with Charles D. Murray as Colonel. Proceeding to Louisville, Kentucky, in command of Liut. Col. Hervey Craven, the regiment was, on the 2d of September, sent to Munfordsville, to reinforce the garrison at that place. In the attack made upon the place by the advance of Bragg's invading army, under Gen. Chalmers, it bore an honorable part, losing two killed, fifteen wounded and one missing. After a long and stubborn resistance the garrison was compelled to surrender to vastly superior numbers, on the 16th of September, and on the next day the captured officers and men were paroled and marched within General Buell's lines, from whence they proceeded to Brandenburg, on the Ohio river, and thence to Jeffersonville, reaching there on the 30th of September.

After a furlough to their homes the officers and men of the regiment reassembled at Indianapolis on the 27th of October. The order for their exchange being received the regiment, on the 5th of December, proceeded to Memphis, arriving there on the 8th of December. It was at once assigned to the Brigade of Gen. Burbridge in the Division of General A. J. Smith, and on the 21st of December was placed on duty at Fort Pickering, near Memphis, where it remained, doing guard and fatigue duty until the 18th of October, 1863. It was then transferred to the city of Memphis where it was engaged on picket duty until the 26th of January, 1864. During this time, however, the regiment marched on an expedition to Hernando, Mississippi, leaving on the 16th of August, 1863, and returning on the 20th. A detachment of two hundred men, under command of Major Henry, also left Memphis on the 24th of December, 1863, skirmished with the rear of General Forrest's command, at Lafayette on the 25th, marched in pursuit to Coldwater, and returned on the 31st of December.

On the 26th of January, 1864, the Eighty-Ninth left Memphis on transports, with the First Brigade, Third Division, Sixteenth Corps, of Sherman's command, for Vicksburg, reaching there on the 31st of January. From this point it moved on the Meridian Raid, marching through Jackson, Hillsboro and other towns, and arriving at Meridian on the 14th of February, after having skirmished with the enemy at Quan's Hill and in the vicinity of Meridian, without causalty to the regiment. After tearing up the Mobile and Ohio Railroad track in that vicinity, it proceeded to Marion, where it went into camp and remained until the 20th, waiting the expected arrival of the cavalry force under Gen. W. S. Smith, by land, from Memphis. It then broke camp and marched by way of Canton for Vicksburg, reaching there on the 4th of March. The regiment lost, during the expedition, one killed, one wounded and captured, and three missing.

The Eighty-Ninth left Vicksburg on the 10th of March, with Gen. A. J. Smith's command, on steamers, for the mouth of Red river, reaching Semmesport on Atchafalaya Bayou on the 12th, and on the next day started for Fort De Russey. Here it joined in the assault on that Fort, which was captured on the 14th, the regiment sustaining a loss of one killed and nine wounded Resting at the Fort during the next day, and embarking on that night, it moved up the river and arrived at Alexandria on the 16th, On the 21st the regiment moved with Gen. Mower's command to Henderson's Hill, and there participated in the capture of two hundred and seventy rebels, and four pieces of artillery. Returning to Alexandria, it remained there until Banks' army came up, when it moved with the united armies to Grand Ecore, which place was reached on the 3d of April. Remaining there in camp until the 7th, it again moved with the balance of Gen. A. J. Smith's command. On the 9th it rested in line of battle awaiting the approach of the rebel army under Gen Richard Taylor, then in pursuit of the Thirteenth and Nineteenth Army Corps, which he had, the day before, met and defeated at Sabine Cross Roads. In the battle of Pleasant Hill, which was fought by A. J. Smith s command on the 9th, the Eighty-Ninth bore a conspicuous part, losing seven killed and forty-seven wounded, making a total loss of fifty-four.

On the 10th of April the regiment fell back towards Grand Ecore, arriving there on the 14th, where it remained until the 20th, awaiting the return of the gunboats and transports. It then marched to Nachitoches, and there lay in line of battle until the Army of the Gulf marched by, and then, from day to day, engaged in covering the retreat of that army to Alexandria, which place was reached on the 26th of April. From thence, on the 1st of May, it marched to Bayou Roberts, Gov. Moore's Plantation and Bayou La Moore, all within a few miles of Alexandria. On the 7th of May the regiment met the enemy at Bayou La Moore, and after a sharp engagement charged and repulsed him, with a loss to the Eighty-Ninth at four killed and eleven wounded; total, fifteen.

The dam to raise Red river, at the Falls at Alexandria, having been completed so as to allow the transports to pass below, the command of Gen. A. J. Smith resumed its march towards the Mississippi, the Eighty-Ninth leaving Moore's Plantation on the 14th of May, and reaching Yellow Bayou, three miles from Semmesport, on the Atchafalaya, on the 17th. During this march it engaged the enemy on the prairie, near Marksville, on the 16th, with but little loss on either side, the enemy retreating at the opening of the engagement. On the 18th the regiment recrossed the Yellow Bayou, and with other troops marched up Bayou De Glaise, to Smith & Norwood's Plantation, and there had a severe contest with the enemy under command of Gen. Poligniac, who was repulsed with great slaughter. The regiment lost eight killed and forty-five wounded; total, fifty-three. On the 19th of May the regiment reached Red River Landing on the Mississippi, and embarked the same evening for Vicksburg, which place was reached on the 24th of May. During the Red River Expedition the regiment was commanded by Lieut. Col. Hervey Craven.

The Eighty-Ninth remained in the vicinity of Vicksburg until the 4th of June, when it embarked for Memphis, arriving there on the 9th, and leaving there on the 23d, for Collierville. From there it marched as escort to a wagon train, to Moscow, and then moved to Lagrange, Tennessee. Here it remained until the 5th of July, and then marched to Pontotoc, Mississippi, reaching there on the 11th. From thence it moved to Harrisburg, near Tupelo, where, on the 14th of July it participated in the battle with the rebel troops under Generals S. D. Lee and Forrest, called the battle of Tupelo. The regiment in this engagement, lost one killed and twelve wounded.

Returning from this expedition, the Eighty-Ninth reached Memphis on the 23d of July, where it rested until the 8th of August. It then marched with Gen. A. J. Smith's command to look after Gen. Forrest in Northern Mississippi, passing through Holly Springs to Oxford, where news was received that Forrest had entered Memphis. The command was at once marched back to Memphis, arriving there on the 30th of August, where it lay in camp until the 8th of September. At that date the regiment proceeded on steamers up the Mississippi, landing at Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, on the 19th of September. From thence it made a brief expedition to De Soto, returning on the 1st of October. On the following day the regiment started with Gen. A. J. Smith's command in pursuit of the rebel Gen. Price, then invading Missouri. It marched into the interior of the State, passing through the towns bordering the Missouri river to Independence, and from thence to Oxford, Kansas. From there it moved to Harrisonville, Missouri, where the pursuit was abandoned, after which the regiment marched to St. Louis, going by way of Lone Jack, Lexington, Glasgow, Columbia, Warrenton and St. Charles. During this expedition it marched seven hundred and twenty miles, nearly all of which was on foot. The regiment was not in any engagement during the march, but had the misfortune to lose Major Henry, Assistant Surgeon Porter and Quartermaster Ashley, who were murdered by guerrillas on the 1st of November, at Greenton, ten miles south of Lexington.

The Eighty-Ninth remained with Gen. Smith's command at St. Louis until the 25th of November, when it proceeded by steamer to Nashville, Tennessee, reaching there on the 30th. Here it went into camp, and on the 15th and 16th of December participated in the battle near that place. On the first day of the engagement the regiment suffered no loss, but on the second, when it was conspicuously engaged, it lost two killed and fifteen wounded. On the 17th it started in pursuit of Hood's army, and arrived at Clifton, on the Tennessee river, on the 1st of January, 1865, from whence it proceeded on transports to Eastport, Mississippi. Here it remained until the 9th of February, when it proceeded by steamer to Vicksburg, and thence to New Orleans, arriving there on the 21st of February.

From New Orleans the regiment moved on transports to Dauphin Island, near Mobile, reaching there on the 8th of March. On the 19th it moved up Mobile Bay by steamer to the mouth of Fish river, and thence up Fish river to Don's Mills, where it disembarked and remained till the 25th of March. It then marched to a point between Spanish Fort and Blakely, where it lay, participating in the siege until the rebel fortifications were taken. The regiment lost during the siege two killed and eight wounded. On the 13th of April the Sixteenth Army Corps, under command of Gen. A. J. Smith, marched for Montgomery, Alabama, arriving there on the 27th of April. Here the regiment lay in camp, doing some picket duty, until the 1st of June, when it marched to Providence, on the Alabama river, and there took transports to Mobile, where it did patrol and guard duty until the 19th of July, 1865, when it was mustered out of service. Proceeding homeward, it reached Indianapolis on the 4th of August, where, after being publicly received by Governor Morton in the State House grove, it was finally discharged.

The remaining recruits of the Eighty-Ninth were transferred to the Fifty-Second Indiana. and continued to serve with that organization until the 10th of September, 1865, when they were mustered out with the regiment.

During its term of service the Eighty-Ninth has suffered losses as follows: Thirty-one killed, one hundred and sixty-seven wounded, and four missing; making a total loss of two hundred and two. It has marched two thousand three hundred and sixty-three miles on foot, traveled by steamer seven thousand one hundred and twelve miles, and by rail one thousand two hundred and thirty-two miles; making the total distance traveled ten thousand seven hundred and seven miles.

FIFTH CAVALRY (90th) REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Fifth Cavalry, Nintieth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, was organized at Indianapolis in August and September 1862. Four companies were mustered into service in August, five in September, and three in October of that year. Capt. Felix W. Graham was on the 2d of October commissioned Major, and on the 10th of December promoted to the Colonelcy. In October Companies "C" and "F." were sent to Carrolton, Kentucky, and Company "I" to Rising Sun, Indiana. These companies remained on duty at those places until December, when they moved to Louisville, and afterwards to Munfordsville and Glasgow, joining the regiment at the latter place in March, 1863. The other companies were, in December, sent to the counties of the First and Second Congressional Districts bordering on the Ohio river, and were distributed as follows: Companies "A" and "G" at Newburg, Company "B" at Rockport, Companies "D" and "L" at Mauckport, Companies "E" and "H" at Cannelton, Company "K" at Mount Vernon, and Company "M" at Evansville. On the 28th of February, 1863, these companies moved to Louisville, Kentucky, and on the 4th of March left that place for Glasgow, where they arrived on the 11th. The other companies that had been serving on detached duty, joined the regiment at Glasgow, and the whole command was kept busy in scouting the country in the direction of the Cumberland river, until the 17th of April. On the 18th it marched to the Cumberland river and skirmished with the enemy, and on the 19th crossed over and drove the rebels three miles. It then returned and burned the town of Celina, Tennessee, after which it recrossed the river and reached Glasgow on the 20th. From the return of the regiment until the 22d of June, it did heavy scouting and skirmishing with the enemy, capturing many prisoners and driving many beyond the river.

The regiment then marched to Scottsville, and thence to Tompkinsville. Leaving there on the 4th of July, it started in pursuit of the rebel General John Morgan's cavalry, reported to have crossed the Cumberland. The regiment was commanded by Lieut. Col. Thomas H. Butler, and marched through southern and central Kentucky. On reaching Louisville the command was placed on steamers and transported up the Ohio to Portsmouth. On the 19th of July it headed Morgan's forces at Buffington Island, and attacked and drove them from the river and adjacent hills in every direction, killing and capturing many, and also capturing five pieces of artillery. After this the regiment returned to Louisville, reaching there on the 27th of July, from whence it marched to Bardstown, Lebanon and Glasgow, going into camp at the latter place on the 9th of August.

On the 18th of August, the Fifth Cavalry started for East Tennessee, making the tedious march across the Cumberland Mountains and entering Knoxville, with Burnside's army, on the 1st of September, being the first regiment of Federal troops to enter that city. It then moved upon an expedition across the Smoky Mountains, returning from which to Sevierville, it again took up its line of march for Greenville. Here it was placed on out post duty, and during several days was constantly engaged in picket firing. After this the regiment joined its brigade on an expedition to Bristol, and on the 19th of September it had heavy skirmishing with the enemy. Near Zollicoffer, on the 29th, it engaged the enemy for over two hours, and then fell back to Jonesboro. On the 22d a forward movement was commenced in the direction of Blountsville, where a battle was begun. Near sundown the enemy's lines gave way, when Lieut. Col Butler, at the head of a portion of the Fifth Cavalry charged, capturing many prisoners and one twenty-four pounder howitzer.

The regiment next moved to Loudon, and back again towards Bull's Gap, and while on the return march near Henderson's Mill, on the 11th of October, the regiment met the enemy retreating from the forces of General Burnside and alone fought three thousand of them, with no hope of aid from any quarter. The enemy charged at every available and weak portion of the line, but, by the spirit and cool bravery of the officers and men, the rebels were held in check for awhile. The regiment being nearly surrounded, it was compelled to fall back, and in the effort to extricate it from its perilous position, a desperate hand-to-hand conflict ensued, the belligerants intermixing with each other, many of both sides being killed and many of our men being captured from the rear, where the hardest fighting was done. Finally the regiment cut its way through the strong lines of the rebel forces, and joined the brigade. It at once moved in the direction of Rheatown where it came upon the rear of the enemy, when the fighting was renewed, the rebels retreating slowly, until night closed the scene. For two days after the command camped seven miles east of Rheatown, and then moved towards Blountsville. On the evening of the 13th of October, the advance met the enemy near Blountsville, and early on the morning of the 14th, another engagement was commenced. The Fifth Cavalry fought the rebels all day until dark. After this it was moved to near Abington, Virginia, from whence it soon after returned to Jonesboro, in which vicinity it remained on active out-post duty until the 6th of November. It then marched by way of Henderson's Mill, Greenville and Bull's Gap to Cheek's Cross Roads, encamping there on the 8th. On the 18th it moved to Bean's Station, and on the next day crossed the Clinch river to Tazewell, where it remained until the 29th. Marching to Powell river, near Cumberland Gap, it then moved by a circuitous route, to Maynardsville, near which place it met a division of rebel cavalry, and during the evening of November 30th, and the whole day of December 1st, it kept up heavy skirmishing with the enemy. Falling back to Walker's Ford on the 2d, the command was there attacked, and from five o'clock in the morning till two o'clock in the afternoon, the regiment retreated three miles, fighting all the time. Reinforcements coming to its relief the regiment was enabled to cross Clinch river.

On the 5th of December the Fifth Cavalry marched to Log Mountain to harrass Longstreet's retreating column. After this it moved to Blain's Cross Roads, and from thence to Bean's Station, where, on the 14th of December, another hardly contested battle was fought, almost hand to hand, from noon on the 14th till three o'clock A. M. on the 15th. Retreating towards Rutledge, the regiment was engaged in skirmishing all day, and at night took up its line of march, reaching Blain's Cross Roads next day and going into camp. On the 23d of December the regiment marched in the direction of Mossy Creek, arriving there on the 24th, and remaining there until the 14th of January, 1864, during which time skirmishing and sharp fighting was of daily occurence. On the 17th of January the regiment, commanded by Major John Woolley, participated in the battle of Dandridge, fighting from ten o'clock in the morning until three o'clock in the afternoon. Then Major Woolley, at the head of his command, made a charge upon foot in advance of the main line of battle some three-fourths of a mile, driving the enemy before him until reaching the summit of a hill, where a rebel line of battle was discovered, reaching as far as the eye could see, of dismounted cavalry or infantry. The regiment was immediately marched back, reaching its original base safely. At midnight the whole command commenced retreating by way of New Market, Kinney's Ford and Strawberry Plains, toward Knoxville, which place was reached on the 19th of January, 1864. On the 24th the horses of the regiment were turned over to the Fourteenth Illinois Cavalry, and on the 26th the regiment made a scout on foot to Pigeon Creek, near Sevierville. Returning to Knoxville, it received orders to march on foot to Cumberland Gap, which place was reached on the 10th of February. After a scout on the Virginia road, it resumed its march on foot, leaving Cumberland Gap on the 17th of February, and arriving at Mount Sterling, Kentucky, on the 26th.

The companies of the Fifth Cavalry remained at Mt. Sterling, Paris and Nicholasville, until the 1st of May, during which time it was remounted and refitted. Under command of Col. Butler, it then began its long and tedious march across the mountains to Tunnel Hill, Georgia, reaching there on the 12th, and joining the command of Gen. Stoneman. On the 13th it entered upon the active campaign against Atlanta, and was constantly engaged in all the cavalry operations of that army from Dalton to Decatur, Georgia. On the 27th of July it marched on the "Stoneman Raid" toward Macon, reaching the enemy's lines near that place on the 30th, and attacked their main body, driving them about two miles. Finding that the river could not be crossed, and having accomplished the work of destroying the railroads, the whole command made a retrograde movement, marching that afternoon and night. When near Hillsboro, on the 31st, a large body of Wheeler's cavalry, under command of General Iverson, was met and an engagement at once ensued. The enemy were at first checked, but at two o'clock in the afternoon the whole command except the Fifth Cavalry left the field, Gen. Stoneman giving Col. Butler orders to hold the enemy until the last. This was done until the force that had ingloriously left the Fifth Cavalry was entirely out of danger, when the regiment was surrendered by Gen. Stoneman to the enemy, under the solemn protest of Col. Butler.

The portion of the regiment which had, from hard service, been dismounted, remained in the rear near Decatur, Georgia, under Major Leeson, and were, shortly after the surrender of the regiment, put upon duty by order of General Sherman, who exchanged their carbines for muskets. After the fall of Atlanta they remained there doing guard duty until the 13th of September, when they were transferred to Kentucky, where they were kept on guard and other duty until the regiment was remounted.

On the 17th of January, 1865, the regiment being mounted, armed and equipped, marched from Louisville for Pulaski, Tennessee, arriving there on the 12th of February. In this vicinity it remained, scouting the country, capturing bushwhackers and outlaws, until the 16th of June, 1865, when it was mustered out of service, and proceeded to Indiana. On the 21st of June it was publicly welcomed home at a reception meeting held in the Capitol grove, at Indianapolis, and greeted with speeches by Governor Morton and General Hovey.

Companies "G," "L" and "M," having been mustered into service after the 1st of October, 1862, under the orders of the War Department, were not entitled to be mustered out with the regiment. These, with the remainining recruits, were transferred to the Sixth Indiana Cavalry, and served with it until the 15th of September, 1865, when that regiment was mustered out at Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

The Fifth Cavalry has been in twenty-two battles and skirmishes, and during the month of June, 1864, in Georgia, it was engaged in skirmishing nearly every day. It has marched twenty-four hundred miles, and been transported one thousand miles by water. It has captured six hundred and forty prisoners during its term of service, and its casualties have been as follows: Killed in action, thirty-four; died from wounds, thirteen; died in rebel prisons, one hundred and fifteen; died in hospital, seventy-four; wounded in action, seventy-two; taken by the enemy as prisoners, four hundred and ninety-seven; officers wounded, six; officers killed, one; officers taken prisoners, seventeen—total casualties, eight hundred and twenty-nine.

NINETY-FIRST REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-First Regiment was recruited from the First Congressional District during the month of August, 1862, and rendezvoused at Evansville. Only seven companies were raised, and these were formed into a battalion, and mustered into service, with John Mehringer as Lieutenant Colonel, on the 1st of October, 1862. On the 10th, the battalion started for Henderson, Kentucky, and, upon its arrival there, detachments were sent to Madisonville and Smithland, where they remained, performing guard duty, and protecting that section of Kentucky from guerrilla raids, until the 15th of June, 1863, when the detachments joined the battalion, and marched to Russellville, and from thence to Bowling Green and Burksville, in pursuit of the rebel chieftain John H. Morgan, then making a raid through Kentucky. Being unable to march as fast as the fleet-footed horses of John Morgan's command traveled, the pursuit ceased, the battalion marched to Russellville, and went into camp.

In the summer of 1863, authority having been given to recruit four regiments of six months' men, for infantry service, forty-three companies were raised, which left an overplus of three companies, and, on the 11th of September, these companies, designated "H," "G" and "K," were assigned to the Ninety-First, and joined the command at Russellville, thus making the regiment complete. Lieutenant Colonel Mehringer was promoted Colonel. On the 25th, the regiment moved to Nashville, and, after a short stay at that point, returned to Russellville, arriving there on the 20th of November. On the 23d, the regiment moved to Camp Nelson, and from thence to Point Burnside. Kentucky, where it remained until January, 1864.

On the 3d of January, 1864, the Ninety-First broke camp and marched toward Jonesboro', East Tennessee, and from thence moved to Cumberland Gap. On the 22d of February, company "A," under command of Captain Wise, had a sharp fight with a rebel force, twelve hundred strong, near the Gap. On the 17th of May, the regiment marched for Knoxville, and from thence moved to Cleveland, and then to Kingston, Georgia, to join Sherman's army, then moving upon the Atlanta campaign.

On the 3d of June, the regiment was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, Twenty-Third Army Corps, (General Schofield,) and left Kingston to join its corps, then near Acworth. On the 15th, the regiment was engaged in the fight that caused the enemy to abandon his strong position on Pine Mountain. Generals Thomas and Schofield advancing, found the enemy again strongly posted along a line of hills connecting Kenesaw and Lost Mountains. Our army pressed forward, constantly skirmishing in dense underbrush and forests, until the 22d, when two rebel corps sallied forth at New Hope Church and precipitated themselves upon a part of Hooker's and Schofield's corps. A desperate battle ensued, the enemy being finally repulsed, leaving his dead and wounded in our hands. The regiment took an active part in this battle. Until the 1st of July the regiment was constantly engaged in skirmishing with the enemy in his strong position on Kenesaw Mountain.

On the 7th, the regiment crossed the Chattahoochee river, with its corps, and effected a lodgement on its east bank, the advance of the corps capturing a gun and surprising the rebel guard while laying a pontoon bridge. The enemy, being thus threatened on his line of communications, crossed the Chattahoochee on the night of the 9th burning the bridges in his rear. Atlanta was now only eight miles distant, and our whole army safely on the right bank of the Chattahoochee. The men needed rest. So Sherman dispatched a cavalry force to strike the enemy's communications at important points. This was accomplished. On the 19th, the regiment was engaged at Decatur, Georgia, the whole line skirmishing heavily. On the 20th, the enemy made a sudden assault, resulting in the battle of Peach Tree Creek, in which the regiment was engaged. Another battle took place near Atlanta on the 22d, the enemy being repulsed.

The siege of Atlanta was vigorously pressed, our forces constantly advancing by parallels, until within easy artillery range of the besieged city. On the 3d of August demonstrations were made along the whole line, and on the 6th a severe engagement took place near Utoy Creek, the Ninety-first being engaged. On the 12th the regiment was transferred from the 1st to the 3d brigade, in the same division and corps, in which it had served since June 3d, 1864. On the 27th the regiment marched with the army in executing the grand movement by the right, which caused the evacuation of Atlanta. Gen. Schofield's corps struck the railroad a mile below Rough and Ready, and destroyed it for a great distance. The corps then moved toward Lovejoy's Station, and, upon arriving in front of that position, received definite intelligence that Atlanta had been abandoned by the enemy on the night of the 1st of September. The regiment then marched with its corps toward Atlanta, and, on the 8th of September, went into camp at Decatur, a few miles east of Atlanta. The parallel line of the rebellion had been broken by the force of the perpendicular blow struck by Grant at Vicksburg. Another perpendicular blow was struck upon part of the line by Sherman at Atlanta. It now only remained to strike with vigor the shattered remnants of the line.

On the 4th of October the regiment started with its corps in pursuit of Hood. It marched by the way of Kingston, Rome, Resaca, Snake Creek Gap, to Gaylesville, and Cedar Bluffs, when the pursuit ceased and the corps was detached from Sherman's army, and ordered to report to General Thomas. Moving north the regiment arrived at Chattanooga on the 5th of November, and moved from thence to Nashville, Columbia and Centerville, and then back to Nashville. The regiment took part in the battle of Franklin on the 30th of November, and in the battles in front of Nashville on the 15th and 16th of December.

From Nashville the regiment marched to Clifton, Tennessee. On the 17th of December it left Clifton, by steamer, for Cincinnati, Ohio, From thence the troops were conveyed by rail to Washington. D. C., where they arrived on the 28th of January, 1865. From Washington the regiment moved by steamers to Wilmington, North Carolina, and reached the mouth of Cape Fear River, February 9th, where its corps landed upon the peninsula near Fort Fisher, and after a few engagements captured Wilmington. The regiment marched thence with its corps to Goldsboro and Raleigh, reaching the latter place on the 14th of April. Here it remained in camp until the 3d of May, when it moved for Salisbury, where it arrived on the 8th.

The Ninety-First remained in camp at Salisbury, until the 26th of June, 1865, when it was mustered out of the service of the United States, at that place, and left for Indianapolis. Its remaining recruits were transferred to the 120th, 124th and 128th Indiana regiments, with which organizations they continued to serve till their muster out.

The Ninety-First left for the field with an aggregate of 635 officers and men. The three companies of six months men, assigned to the regiment in September, 1863, were discharged upon the expiration of their term of service. The regiment then numbered but seven companies until the winter of 1864, when three companies were recruited for one year's service, and assigned as companies "H," "I," and "K." These companies were among the remaining recruits that were transferred to other regiments upon its final muster out. The regiment has lost eighty-one in killed and wounded, and returned to the State with nineteen officers and three hundred and fifteen men. Upon its arrival at Indianapolis, the regiment was greeted with an ovation in the State House Grove, and welcomed with addresses by Governor Morton and others, partook of a sumptuous dinner at the Soldier's Home, and retired from "war's stern alarums."

NINETY-SECOND REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-Second Regiment was ordered to be recruited from the Second Congressional District, under the call of July, 1862, and its place of rendezvous fixed at New Albany. The attempt to recruit a sufficient number of men to form a regiment was, however, unsuccessful, and the companies recruited for the Ninety-Second Regiment were merged into and consolidated with the Ninety-Third Regiment, then organizing in the Third Congressional District, and rendezvousing at Madison. Four companies were thus transferred to the Ninety-Third Regiment, and served with that organization until its muster out at Memphis, Tennesse, on the 10th of August, 1865.

NINETY-THIRD REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-Third Regiment was organized in the Third Congressional District, rendezvoused at Madison, and was mustered into the service in the months of September and October, 1862, with De Witt C. Thomas as Colonel, and George W. Carr as Lieut. Colonel. On the 9th of November the regiment moved by rail for Cairo, Illinois, and from thence proceeded to Memphis, Tennessee, where it was assigned to Buckland's brigade, and, on the 26th, moved with the army of General Sherman to Hurricane creek, near Oxford, Mississippi. While at Hurricane creek the brigade to which the Ninety-Third was attached, was transferred to the Eighth Division, Sixteenth Army Corps. On the 20th of December the regiment marched with its division for Lagrange, Tennessee, arriving there on the 28th. On the 8th of January the regiment broke camp at Lagrange, and marched for Corinth, Mississippi, reaching there on the 14th. From Corinth the regiment moved by rail to the vicinity of Memphis, Tennessee, and upon reaching that point, on the 22d of February, were assigned to guard duty along the railroad, and detailed to build block houses. The regiment was engaged in the performance of these duties until the 13th of March, when it moved to Memphis, and embarking on a steamer, sailed to Helena, Arkansas, and from thence to Duckport, Louisiana. Here the troops landed, and the regiment was transferred, with its division, to the Fifteenth Army Corps, then commanded by Gen. Sherman,

On the 2d of May the regiment marched with its corps across the Peninsula opposite Vicksburg, which was the opening movement of General Grant that culminated in the capture of Vicksburg. Marching by the way of Richmond and Carthage, Louisiana, the command reached Hard Times Landing, and crossed the Mississippi river at Grand Gulf on the 7th. The corps then pressed forward, by the way of Rock Ford and Raymond, to Jackson, Mississippi, and, on the 14th, after a sharp artillery duel, the command entered Jackson, the capital of Mississippi. The Ninety-Third lost in this affair, which was its first engagement, three killed and seven wounded. The two following days were passed in tearing up the railroad tracks centering at Jackson. On the afternoon of the 16th the whole force moved towards Vicksburg, and, crossing the Big Black river, reached the rear of the enemy's stronghold on the evening of the 18th. On the 19th and 22d the regiment participated in the assault upon the defenses of Vicksburg, and, intrenching in front of the enemy's works were actively engaged in pushing the line of investment until the 22d of June During these operations the regiment lost three killed and fourteen wounded.

At this time the rebel General Johnson had crossed the Big Black river with a portion of his force, and threatened our rear. General Sherman was dispatched to attend to Johnson, with orders to move upon the enemy the moment Vicksburg was in our possession. The regiment marched with its Division on this movement, and reached Little Bear Creek on the 23d. Here it remained, throwing up works, until the 4th of July, when Vicksburg surrendered. Sherman at once moved his army toward Jackson, and on the 10th arrived in front of that place and proceeded to invest it. For six days there was sharp skirmishing and artillery firing, and on the night of the 16th the enemy evacuated, and our forces entered the city the next morning In the siege of Jackson the regiment lost one killed and three wounded. The regiment remained at Jackson until the 23d, engaged in destroying the railroads, and then moved to a camp near the Big Black river, where it remained until the 5th of September. It then moved to Oak Ridge, where it encamped until the 14th of October, when the brigade moved on an expedition to Brownsville, Mississippi, and. on the 17th, had a sharp engagement with the enemy near that place. The regiment then marched to the vicinity of Vicksburg and went into camp.

On the 7th of November the Ninety-Third marched to Vicksburg, embarked on a steamer, and sailed for Memphis, Tennessee, and upon arriving there was assigned to picket and provost guard duty, which it performed until the 10th of May, 1864. During this period it accompanied several expeditions into Mississippi, having occasional skirmishes with the enemy. On the 1st of June the regiment started on the Gun Town expedition. Upon reaching Brices' Cross Roads, on the 10th, the cavalry of the enemy were encountered. The infantry, exhausted with rapid marching and the heat of the weather, were rushed to the front. The battle was severe for a short time, when our forces were driven from the field, and a stampede ensued sorrowful to contemplate. The regiment lost in this affair thirteen killed, fifty-six wounded, and one hundred and eighty-four taken prisoners, a total loss of two hundred and fifty-three. The remainder of the regiment reached Memphis on the 12th. On the 22d the regiment moved by rail to Moscow, and from thence marched to Pontotoc and Harrisburg, Mississippi, where, on the 15th of July, the enemy, under S. D. Lee, made an assault upon our position, which was repulsed with great loss to the enemy. The regiment then returned to Memphis, reaching there on the 23d, having several skirmishes with the enemy on the return march.

On the 29th the regiment started on another expedition; reached the Tallahatchie river on the 8th of August, crossed the river on driftwood, and was engaged in skirmishing with the enemy until the arrival of the main army; then marched to Oxford, Mississippi, and, returning, arrived at Memphis on the 29th. On the 2d of September the regiment embarked on transports, sailed down the Mississippi and up the White river to Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas, where it disembarked and marched to Cape Girardeau, Missouri; then it proceeded by the way of Jefferson City to Little Santa Fe, Kansas. The regiment then moved to St Louis, reaching there on the 14th of November, and then embarked on transports and proceeded to Nashville, Tennessee. Here it remained until the 15th of December, engaged in picket duty and preparing defensive works. On that day it moved, with General Thomas' army, upon the enemy's position, and took a brisk part in the assault and defeat of Hood's army on the 15th and 16th of December, 1864, at the battle of Nashville. Joining in the pursuit of the demoralized foe, until the Tennessee river was reached, the regiment then took transports and sailed to Eastport, Mississippi, where it went into winter quarters and rested until the 6th of February, 1865.

The Ninety-Third then embarked on transports and made the long voyage to Dauphin Island, Alabama, arriving there on the 3d of March. On the 19th it again embarked, and sailed up the Fish river to Danby's Mills, where the regiment landed and marched to the Spanish Fort, and reaching that position on the 27th, at once took part in its investment. The regiment was actively engaged in the siege of Spanish Fort until the 9th of April, when, the enemy having evacuated, the command moved promptly on Fort Blakely, and, on the afternoon of the same day, carried that fort by storm, thus compelling the surrender of Mobile. The regiment then marched towards Montgomery, Alabama, arriving there on the 20th. Here it remained until the 10th of May. It then moved to Selma, and from thence to Gainesville, at which place it was stationed until ordered home. Arriving at Memphis, Tennessee, the Ninety-Third was mustered out of the service at that place, to date August 10th, 1865. The regiment left at once for Indianapolis, and upon reaching there, on the 11th of August, was greeted with a public ovation in the State House Grove, and welcomed by addresses from Governor Baker and others. The regiment left for the field with an aggregate of nine hundred and twenty-three. It returned with eighteen officers and two hundred men. It has traveled, during its term of service, one thousand and sixty miles by rail, three thousand nine hundred and seventy-two miles by river, and marched two thousand four hundred miles, making a grand total of seven thousand four hundred and thirty-two miles. On the muster-out of the regiment, Companies "I" and "K" were ordered to remain in service with the remaining recruits. This battalion was finally discharged in October, 1865.

NINETY-FOURTH AND NINETY-FIFTH REGIMENTS INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-Fourth Regiment was ordered to be recruited from the Fourth Congressional District, under the call of July, 1862, and its place of rendezvous fixed at Lawrenceburg. All efforts, however, to recruit, proved unavailing.

The Ninety-Fifth Regiment was authorized to be recruited in the Fifth Congressional District, under the call of July 1862, its rendezvous being designated at Richmond. The attempt to fill its quota was, however, unsuccessful.

NINETY-SIXTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-Sixth Regiment was authorized to be recruited from the Sixth Congressional District, under the call of July, 1862, and ordered to rendezvous at Indianapolis. The attempt to raise a regiment, however, failed. Three companies only were recruited, and these were assigned to fill up the Ninety-Ninth Regiment, then organizing in the Ninth Congressional District, and in rendezvous at South Bend.

NINETY-SEVENTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-Seventh Regiment was organized in the Seventh Congressional District, during the month of August, rendezvoused at Terre Haute, and was mustered into the service on the 20th day of September, 1862, with Robert F. Catterson as Colonel. Soon after its muster the regiment proceeded to Memphis, Tennessee, and upon its arrival there was assigned to the Third Brigade, First Division, Seventeenth Army Corps. The regiment was assigned to duty near Memphis, and accompanied Gen. Grant's movement towards Vicksburg by the overland route. But the disaster at Holly Springs delayed the movement and rendered it unsuccessful, The regiment then returned to Moscow, Tennessee, and were on duty at that place until it joined Gen. Sherman's army, then in the rear of Vicksburg, near the Big Black river, watching the movements of the rebel Gen. Johnson, who with a large army threatened to break our investing lines and raise the siege of Vicksburg.

On the 4th of July, 1863, Vicksburg surrendered, and Sherman's column at once pushed for Jackson, marching fifty miles, through dust and heat, in a country almost destitute of water, to meet the foe. Our advance reached the works in front of Jackson on the 9th, and soon invested the place. Constant skirmishing took place, the regiment taking an active part, until the 16th, when the enemy evacuated, and our army entered the city. The regiment then returned to the Big Black and rested for a short time.

On the 13th of September, orders were sent to Generals Grant and Sherman, at Vicksburg, to send all available forces to Corinth and Tuscumbia, to co-operate with Gen. Rosecrans in case Bragg should attempt to turn Rosecrans' right flank, and invade Tennessee. In accordance with these orders the regiment moved with its division to Memphis, and on the 27th of October the advance of our corps entered Tuscumbia, Alabama. The column then pushed on towards Bridgeport, and after a march of over four hundred miles, with no rest for three successive nights, crossed the Tennessee river and took part in the battle of Chattanooga on the 25th of November. The regiment took an active part in this battle. Immediately after the battle of Chattanooga the army of General Sherman moved to the relief of General Burnside, in East Tennessee, which result was accomplished. The Ninety-Seventh marched with the column over one hundred miles. The regiment then returned with its corps to Scottsboro, Alabama, and remained there until the opening of the Atlanta campaign, in May, 1864.

On the 6th of May the Army of the Tennessee, commanded by Gen. McPherson, was near Gordon's Mill, on Chicamanga creek. The Ninety-Seventh belonged to the Third Brigade, Fourth Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, under command of Gen. John A. Logan, and was a portion of the Army of Tennessee. On the 8th McPherson reached Snake Creek Gap, and the next day approached within a short distance of Resacca, but finding that place strongly fortified, retired to the Gap. On the 12th the whole army moved on Resacca, and Gen. McPherson occupied a ridge of bald hills, with his right resting on the Oostanaula river, and his left abreast of the town. General McPherson made a lodgment close to the enemy's works, driving the rebel General Polk's corps from the hill that commanded the railroad and bridges. Other portions of the army pressing on, resulted in the battle of Resacca, on the 14th and 15th of May, the regiment being engaged. The enemy was defeated, and retreated during the night.

The corps to which the regiment was attached moved in pursuit by the way of Lay's Ferry, and crossed the river at that point. On the 27th the enemy was again encountered, at Dallas, and repulsed, the Ninety-Seventh taking part in the fight. On the 1st of June an encounter took place with the enemy at New Hope Church, and on the 15th a sharp affair was had at Big Shanty, the regiment being engaged. On the 27th an assault was made upon the enemy's works on Kenesaw Mountain, which resulted disastrously, the regiment being engaged in the assault. On the 2d of July McPherson moved to Turners' Ferry, and threatened the enemy's rear. The rebels at once abandoned their position on Kenesaw, and fell back to Smyrna Church.

On the 9th the rebel army crossed the Chattahoochie river. Our army moved in pursuit, and on the 18th the advance of our corps reached the Augusta railway, seven miles east of Decatur, destroyed the works and then marched toward Decatur. On the 22d the enemy made a fierce assault along our whole front, and after a terrific and sanguinary battle, were repulsed. In the battle the brave and noble General McPherson was killed. On the 27th General O. O. Howard assumed command of the Army of the Tennessee, in which the regiment had so long been serving.

NINETY-SEVENTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS—Continued.

On the morning of the 28th of July, Logan's Fifteenth Corps formed the extreme right flank of the army before Atlanta, being in position along a wooded and commanding ridge. At noon the rebel army sallied forth from Atlanta and advanced in parallel lines against the Fifteenth Corps, with the hope of crushing it. The rebel attack was met with a severe and galling fire and driven back in confusion. Rallying, he essayed another assault, but was firmly met and checked, until at four o'clock in the afternoon, after a desperate struggle, he was utterly routed, and fell back to his entrenchments at Atlanta. General Logan's Fifteenth Corps, to which the regiment was attached, was conspicuous in this battle, being chiefly engaged in the fight.

On the 29th of August the Ninety-Seventh moved with its corps on the flanking march around Atlanta, and was engaged in the battle of Jonesboro on the 21st. On the 1st of September it reached Lovejoy's Station, and, upon the evacuation of Atlanta, returned to East Point, where it encamped.

On the 3d of October the regiment joined in the pursuit of Hood, and had a sharp fight at Little river, Georgia, on the 26th. It then returned to its old camp.

On the 12th of November the regiment started with the right wing of Sherman's army on its march to the sea. On the 22d it participated in a fight at Griswoldville, Georgia, repulsing a large body of the enemy. On the 8th of December it was again engaged at Little Ogeechee river, and on the 21st entered the city of Savannah. The regiment rested a short time at Savannah, and then moved with Sherman's army through the Carolinas, being present at the capture of Columbia, South Carolina, on the 15th of February, 1865, and at the battle of Bentonville, North Carolina, on the 21st of March. It then moved to Goldsboro, and thence marched by the way of Richmond, Virginia, to Washington City, District of Columbia, where, on the 9th day of June, 1865, the Ninety-Seventh Regiment was mustered out of the service of the United States.

The regiment has lost in killed 46, wounded 146, died of disease 149. It has lost three color bearers, killed in important assaults on the 15th and 27th of June, 1864. The regiment has marched over 3,000 miles.

After its muster out the regiment proceeded to Indianapolis, and was welcomed by an ovation in the State House grounds, on the 13th of June, and addressed by Governor Morton and General Hovey. After which the regiment ceased to exist as an organization, and its members went home to enjoy in peace the honors they had so fairly won.

NINETY-EIGHTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-Eighth Regiment was ordered to be recruited in the Eighth Congressional District, under the call of July, 1862, with its place of rendezvous at Lafayette. But two companies, however, were recruited for this organization. These were assigned and merged into the One Hundredth Regiment, then organizing in the Tenth Congressional District, with its place of rendezvous at Fort Wayne.

NINETY-NINTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The Ninety-Ninth Regiment was organized during the months of August and September, 1862, in the Ninth Congressional District, and rendezvoused at South Bend. Three companies, recruited in the Sixth Congressional District for the Ninety-Sixth Regiment, were assigned to the Ninety-Ninth, completing its organization and it was mustered into the service on the 21st of October, 1862, with Alexander Fowler as Colonel. The regiment moved in November to Memphis, Tennessee, and, upon its arrival there, was assigned to the Third Brigade, First Division, Sixteenth Army Corps. On the 26th the regiment moved with its corps on the Tallahatchie campaign, and, returning, was placed on duty on the Memphis and Charleston railroad, at Lagrange and Moscow, Tennessee, where it remained during the winter of 1862 and 1863.

On the 6th of May, 1863, the regiment moved to Memphis, and, embarking on steamers, sailed down the Mississippi river, and joined the besieging forces of General Grant, in the rear of Vicksburg. On the 4th of July the regiment marched with Sherman's command for Jackson, Mississippi, and was engaged in a skirmish on the Big Black river during that march. Our advance reached Jackson on the 9th, and its investment was complete on the 12th. The siege progressed vigorously, and for three days the regiment laid under a heavy artiliery fire from the enemy, and was engaged in skirmishing. On the night of the 16th the enemy evacuated Jackson, and Sherman's command moved into the place, and destroyed the railroads and public buildings. Expeditions were at once sent to the surrounding country, and the railroads centering at Jackson destroyed. The regiment assisted in capturing Brownsville, Mississippi.

The regiment remained in camp at Big Black river until the latter part of September, when it moved with its corps to Memphis, and from thence, in October, marched by the way of Corinth, Iuka, Florence, Decherd, and Stevenson, to Chattanooga, arriving at the latter place on the 24th of November. The Ninety-Ninth at once took possession of Indian Hill, the eastern extremity of Mission Ridge, and worked all the following night throwing up works. By daylight the next morning the regiment had improvised a fine line of defenses, being compelled to use sticks, tin plates and cups as intrenching tools, no shovels or picks being convenient. On the 25th the regiment was engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge. Immediately after the battle the regiment marched with Sherman's army, in pursuit of Bragg's, in the direction of Graysville. The road was lined with broken wagons, abandoned caissons, and the debris of a retreating army. As the head of the column emerged from a swamp it encountered the rear guard of the enemy. A sharp fight ensued, but night closed further operations. Upon reaching Graysville, the column moved east, for the purpose of cutting communications between Bragg and Longstreet, and to relieve Gen. Burnside, then besieged at Knoxville. The regiment accomplished this dreary march, almost entirely destitute of clothing, blankets and shoes, and without regular rations or supplies of any kind, and marched barefoot through mud and over rocks, and compelled Longstreet to raise the siege of Knoxville. Returning with its command, the regiment reached Scottsboro, Alabama, on the 26th of December, having made a march of more than four hundred miles, and fought its part of the battle of Chattanooga.

At Scottsboro the regiment remained in camp until the 11th of February, 1864. It then moved into East Tennessee, and was engaged at Rocky Face Ridge, on the 25th. The regiment then returned to Scottsboro, and encamped until the 1st of May.

Sherman's army then moved on its campaign, of which Atlanta was the objective point. The Ninety-Ninth marched and fought with the dashing Army of the Tennessee, and was engaged in every skirmish, assault and battle, in which that army took part, under the gallant McPherson. The regiment was engaged at Resacca May 14th. At Dallas, on the 28th, the enemy made a bold assault upon our column, but met a bloody repulse. On the 15th of June the regiment participated in a charge at Big Shanty. Subsequently it was engaged in skirmishes for seven days, near Kenesaw Mountain.

The regiment also took part in skirmishes at Nickajack creek, and also at Decatur, on the 20th and 21st of July. On the morning of the 22d Gen. McPherson had gained a high hill which gave him a commanding position within view of the heart of Atlanta. At noon Hood's forces made a desperate assault, and a terrible battle raged along the whole front, and after four hours' fierce fighting the enemy were checked and driven back. In this battle the noble McPherson was killed. On the 28th another battle was fought in front of Atlanta, in which the corps to which the Ninety-Ninth was attached was chiefly engaged; the result was victory to our arms. In both these sanguinary fights the regiment was an active participant. The Ninety-Ninth was engaged every day in skirmishing from August 3d to the 15th.

The regiment marched with Sherman's army on its flank movement around Atlanta, and had a slight engagement at Jonesboro on the 31st of August, also a skirmish at Lovejoy's Station on the 1st of September. It then returned with the main army to Atlanta, and went into camp at East Point. On the 3d of October it joined in the pursuit of Hood, and had a fight at Little river, Georgia, on the 26th. After a march of two hundred miles it again reached Atlanta.

On the 15th of November the Ninety-Ninth marched from its camp, and with its colors pointing to the South, moved with Sherman on his great march to the sea. The regiment moved with the right wing of the army, under General Howard. On the 7th of December it had a sharp skirmish with the enemy at a crossing on the Cannouchee river, and on the 9th a sharp fight on the Ogeechee river. After having marched over three hundred miles in twenty-four days, our army reached the front of Savannah.

On the 15th of December the regiment took part in the charge upon Fort McAllister, which, after a desperate hand-to-hand struggle with its garrison, surrendered, and opened Sherman's communications with the sea. After a short rest at Savannah the regiment marched with Sherman's army through the Carolinas, was engaged in a skirmish at Duck Creek and Edisto river, and occupied Columbia, South Carolina, on the 17th of February, 1865. From Columbia the march was continued through Camden, Cheraw and Fayetteville. On the 19th of March the regiment reinforced the Twentieth Corps at the battle of Bentonville. The march was then made to Goldsboro, from thence to Raleigh and thence by the way of Warrenton, Petersburg and Richmond, Virginia, to Washington, District of Columbia, where, on the 5th of June, 1865, the regiment, then commanded by Col. Farrar, was mustered out of the service of the United States. Six companies of the regiment were only entitled to discharge, but, by a special order, the remaining four companies were mustered out with the regiment. The remaining recruits were transferred to the Forty-Eighth Indiana Veterans, with which organization they served until its muster out.

The Ninety-Ninth left for the field with 900 men, and returned from its campaigns with 425 officers and men. It has marched, during its term of service, over 4 000 miles. Upon arriving at Indianapolis, the regiment was present at a reception to returned soldiers on the 11th of June, in the State House grounds, and, were welcomed by Governor Morton and others. Its members then went home.

ONE HUNDREDTH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The One Hundredth Regiment was organized in the Tenth Congressional District during the month of August, 1862, and rendezvoused at Fort Wayne. Two companies, recruited for the Ninety-Eighth regiment, in the Eighth Congressional District, were assigned to the One Hundredth Regiment, completing its organization, and the regiment was mustered into the service on the 10th of September, 1862, with Sanford J. Stoughton as Colonel. On the 11th of November the regiment left for Memphis, Tennessee, and arrived there on the 16th. The regiment was assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, Army of the Tennessee, and on the 26th moved with an expedition through Northern Mississippi, having Vicksburg for its objective point. The movement, however, was unsuccessful, owing to the surprise and capture of Holly Springs by the rebels. The column then returned to the vicinity of Memphis, and the regiment was assigned to garrison duty at Collierville, and as guards along the Memphis and Charleston Railroad.

On the 9th of June, 1863, the regiment embarked on transports, and joined the army of Gen. Grant at the siege of Vicksburg, arriving in front of the rebel works on the 14th. The regiment took part in the siege of Vicksburg, and after its surrender, moved with Sherman's army upon Jackson, Mississippi, arriving in front of that place on the 11th of July. Five days were occupied in the seige of Jackson, the regiment being constantly engaged. On the 16th the rebel army evacuated and our forces entered the place and destroyed its military resources. During these movements, the regiment was commanded by Lieut, Col. Albert Heath, and formed part of the First Brigade, First Division, Sixteenth Army Corps. From Jackson the regiment marched to the Big Black river, where it remained in camp during the summer.

On the 28th of September the regiment marched to Vicksburg, embarked on transports, and sailed to Memphis, arriving there on the 9th of October. The regiment, at this time, belonged to the Fourth Division, Fifteenth Army Corps. The regiment moved with its division, on a rapid march across the country, to Stevenson and Bridgeport, Alabama; thence over Sandstone Mountain, and down Lookout Valley to Trenton, Georgia, and succeeded in turning the left flank of Bragg's army, then in position upon Lookout Mountain. This column secured a foothold on the Mountain, and drove the enemy from position, but without following in pursuit, pushed for Chattanooga, and, after a rapid march, reached that place on the 23d of November. On the 25th the column moved upon the enemy's stronghold on Mission Ridge, and took part in that severe battle. Its division gained the crest of the hill and held the position, notwithstanding the concentric fire of the enemy's artillery and his repeated assaults. The fight lasted from 10 o'clock in the morning until dark, and the attack on the enemy's left was so persistent as to draw vast masses of the enemy to that flank, and enable General Thomas to break through the enemy's centre. In this battle the regiment lost one hundred and thirty-two killed and wounded. Lieutenant Colonel. Heath was severely wounded early in the action, and Major R. M. Johnson assumed command of the regiment. The next morning the command moved in pursuit of Bragg's army as far as Graysville. It then moved towards Knoxville, for the purpose of relieving General Burnside. This was accomplished, the head of our column reaching Knoxville on the 6th of December. The regiment then returned with its division to Scottsboro, Alabama, arriving there on the 26th of December. But a few weeks before this army had left the banks of the Tennessee river, with only two day's rations, and no extra clothing, and during that time had fought a severe battle, and marched over eight hundred miles, through mud, rain and snow, part of the command barefooted, and yet all was endured without a murmur. The regiment remained in camp at Scottsboro until the 1st of May, 1864.

The entire army of General Sherman moved from Chattanooga early in May, 1864, on its campaign against the "Gate city of Georgia" — Atlanta. The two hostile armies were separated by Rocky Face Ridge, cloven by Buzzard's Roost Gap, through which runs the railroad. This pass was so fortified as to render it unapproachable. Sherman decided to turn the position. The Army of the Tennessee moved through Snake Creek Gap and threatened the enemy's rear at Dalton. The regiment was attached to this army and took part in all its movments and battles, being engaged at Dalton, Snake Creek Gap, Resacca, Dallas, New Hope Church, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, Nickajack Creek, Chattahoochee River, Decatur, Atlanta, Cedar Bluffs, Jonesboro, and Lovejoy's Station. The regiment then moved with its corps to Atlanta, and camped at East Point, after marching and fighting nearly one hundred days.

On the 3d of October the regiment marched with its corps in pursuit of Hood, and after forced marches through Northern Georgia and Alabama, drove Hood across the Tennessee river, left Gen. Thomas to meet and check his further career, and returned to its old camping ground near Atlanta.

At daybreak on the 14th of November the regiment moved with the column for Savannah and the sea. Atlanta lay behind, a mass of smouldering ruins—before was an untrodden path, an unknown enemy and adventure. The march of that army was marked by destroyed railroads and a ruined country. The regiment was assigned to the Second Brigade, (Walcott's,) First Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, in this march. On the 22d of November, near Griswoldville, Georgia, its brigade was engaged in a desperate fight. Our position was defended by a slight barricade. The enemy made an assault with a largely superior force, and four pieces of artillery; he was, however, completely repulsed. The action continued four hours, and the enemy made several assaults, only to be met with severe loss. General Walcott was wounded, and Col. Catterson, of the Ninty-Seventh Indiana took command of the brigade Forty-nine prisoners were captured, and the regiment complimented by the commanding General. After a perilous march through almost impassable swamps, morasses and over swollen streams, the column debouched in front of Savannah on the 10th of December, which city our army entered on the 23d.

From Savannah the regiment moved with its corps by steamer to Beaufort, South Carolina, and thence through the Carolinas, capturing successively Branchville, Columbia, Georgetown and Cheraw, South Carolina, and met the enemy at Bentonville, North Carolina, where a severe battle ensued, and the enemy were defeated and driven from the field. The column then moved to Goldsboro, reaching that place on the 26th of March, 1865, having marched thirteen hundred miles and fought seventeen battles since leaving Chattanooga in May, 1864.

The regiment remained at Goldsboro until the 10th of April. It then moved with the army to Raleigh, where it remained until after the surrender of Johnston's army. The regiment then marched by the way of Richmond, Virginia, to Washington, District of Columbia, reaching that place on the 20th of May, 1865. The regiment remained in camp near Washington until the 9th of June, 1865, when it was mustered out of service, the remaining recruits being transferred to the Forty-Eighth Indiana, with which organization they continued to serve until its muster out at Louisville, Kentucky, on the 15th of June, 1865.

The regiment left for the field with an aggregate of nine hundred and thirty-seven men, and returned with six hundred and eighteen men for muster out. It has lost in killed in action and died from wounds, eighty-nine; discharged for disability by reason of wounds, or otherwise, two hundred and twenty-five; died from disease, one hundred and fifty—total casualties, four hundred and sixty-four.

The One Hundredth has marched, during its term of service, four thousand miles, been engaged in twenty-five battles, and has been engaged as skirmishers nearly one-third of the time it has been in the field. After its muster out it started for Indianapolis, and upon its arrival there was present at a public reception in the State House grounds on the 14th of June, and welcomed with addresses by Governor Morton and others. Its members then dispersed to their respective homes.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIRST REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The One Hundred and First Regiment was organized in the Eleventh Congressional District during the month of August, 1862, rendezvoused at Wabash, and was mustered into service on the 7th of September, 1862, with William Garver as Colonel. Troops were at that time being rapidly thrown into Kentucky to repel the invasion of Kirby Smith, and the regiment, as one of the new levies, moved at once to Covington, Kentucky, where it was assigned to a brigade, took position in the defenses, and remained until the threatening column of the enemy withdrew. On the 23d of September the regiment sailed on a steamboat to Louisville, Kentucky, and from thence marched with the command of General McCook, on the 1st of October, in search of the retiring forces of General Bragg. The column marched through Jefferson, Taylorsville, Bloomfield, and Berryville, reaching Maxwell, Kentucky, on the 7th. There the regiment took charge of the Tenth Division train and escorted it to Springfield, Kentucky. Thence moved with the train to Crab Orchard. From thence the regiment marched to Lebanon; thence to Munfordsville, and was employed in guarding the railroad bridge at that place until the 30th of November. The regiment then moved to Glasgow, and from thence to Castillian Springs, Tennessee, where it remained until the 26th of December, 1862. The regimont then marched in pursuit of John Morgan, who was making a raid through Kentucky. The march was rapid but unsuccessful, and, after a week's journey through mud and rain, fording rivers and creeks, the command returned to its camp at Castillian Springs, on the 2d of January, 1863. From thence the regiment moved to Murfreesboro', Tennessee, arriving there on the 11th and going into camp. While stationed here the regiment was assigned to the Second Brigade, (Colonel Hall,) Fifth Division, (Reynolds,) Fourteenth Army Corps, (Thomas.) The regiment marched with a reconnoisance in force to Lebanon, on the 3d of February, and again, on the 4th of March, to Woodbury, accomplishing the object sought for, and returning to camp at Murfreesboro'.

On the 18th of March our brigade marched from Murfreesboro' for the purpose of beating up certain rebel hiding places, and dispersing guerrilla bands infesting Wilson county, Tennessee. Moving by the way of Gainesville and Milton, at the latter place the rebel General John Morgan was encountered with a force of 3,700 men. Col. Hall resolved to give battle. He therefore posted his brigade on Vaught's Hill, near Milton, placing the One Hundred and First on the left. The rebels made several desperate assaults upon our position, and, after six hours' severe fighting, were repulsed with loss. The regiment lost in this fight forty-three killed and wounded. Lieut. Col. Doan was in command of the regiment. After defeating Morgan, the regiment marched with its brigade back to Murfreesboro'.

On the 29th of April the regiment moved with its division to McMinnville, captured seventy prisoners, some stores, and destroyed the railroad in that vicinity. The division then returned to Murfreesboro', where the regiment remained in camp until June. On the 31st of May, Lieut. Col Doan assumed command of the regiment, Col. Garver having resigned.

On the 24th of June the whole army made a forward movement. At Hoover's Gap, at 4 P. M., Wilder's brigade became engaged. The Second Brigade moved to its support, under a heavy artillery fire, and for two days were on the skirmish line. After driving the enemy from the Gap, the regiment moved with its brigade to Manchester, Tullahoma and Elk river. The army halted at Decherd, and the regiment went into camp on University Hill, and remained there until the 17th of August. It then marched by the way of Battle Creek, Jasper and Sequatchie Valley to Shell Mound Ferry, crossed the Raccoon and Lookout Mountains, and reached the battle field of Chicamauga on the morning of the 19th of September, having marched all night.

The Second Brigade, at once became engaged with the enemy. It took position on General Palmer's right, and the battle raged with great fury Twice the enemy were repulsed; but, being reinforced, rallied and forced us from position. Our brigade fell back to a strong position, and bivouacked. On the morning of the 20th, the battle commenced far to our left, and reached our front about noon. The enemy surged upon our line with greatly superior numbers, and with obstinate fury, but, protected by slight breastworks, our line repulsed every assault, and firmly held the position. The enemy's loss in the immediate front of the Second Brigade, largely exceeded ours. At sundown the enemy had broken the extreme right of our army, and was threatening the Chattanooga road. The division to which the regiment was attached, was ordered to cut its way through to Rossville. The charge was successfully made, but with considerable loss, our line being raked by grape and canister. Our division then halted for rest. The Fourteenth Corps was filing past for Rossville. General Thomas ordered two regiments to cover the retreat. The One Hundred and First and Sixty-Eighth Indiana, were selected. After marching one mile and a half toward the enemy, the command reached Brannan's Brigade, which was holding the front with fixed bayonets, having no ammunition. The enemy were in force over the crest of a hill within speaking distance. Our movements were covered by darkness. Taking ground in front of Brannan's line, he quietly withdrew, and ordered us to follow, which was done, the command reaching Rossville at midnight. The gallant Colonel Edward A. King, commanding our brigade, was killed. The regiment lost thirteen killed, eighty-five wounded, and sixteen missing. A total loss of one hundred and fourteen. The regiment remained at Rossville during the next day, and, at night, moved to Chattanooga; thence went on picket, and, on the 22d, had a sharp picket fight, losing nine wounded and two prisoners. The regiment then retired to Chattanooga.

On the 9th of October, the regiment was assigned to the Second Brigade, Third Division, Fourteenth Army Corps. On the 22d of November, it moved out of camp, and prepared for the assault on Mission Ridge. The regiment took part in the storming of Mission Ridge on the 25th, and moved with our pursuing column to Ringgold, Georgia, losing in the battle thirty-four in killed and wounded. Until the first week in May, 1864, the regiment remained near Chattanooga.

Upon the 7th of May, the regiment moved with Sherman's army, on its Atlanta campaign. The command of General Thomas occupied Tunnel Hill. A demonstration was then made upon Buzzard's Roost. After two days' fighting, the regiment moved with its corps through Snake Creek Gap, and thence to Resacca, where it was engaged. It then moved with the pursuing column to Adairsville and Cassville, participating in fights at each place. Then moved to the right, forded the Etowah river, and moved by the way of Burnt Hickory to Dallas; then took position in line of battle near Pine Hill; then changed to the left near Lost Mountain, and then to Kenesaw Mountain, skirmishing from day to day. The regiment was in support of the Second Division in the assault on Kenesaw Mountain on the 27th of June.

On the 3d of July, the enemy having withdrawn from Kenesaw, the pursuit was pressed, and on the 18th the regiment crossed the Chattahoochee river. On the 22d, crossed Peach Tree Creek and engaged in skirmishing until the 28th of August. Then marched with the army, on the flank movement around Atlanta, and took part in the battle of Jonesboro, on the 1st of September. The regiment then marched to Atlanta. On the 3d of October it joined in the pursuit of Hood. Reaching Gaylesville, the pursuit ceased. The regiment then marched to Kingston, and thence to Atlanta.

On the 17th of November, the regiment started from Atlanta with the left wing of Sherman's army, on its march to Savannah. Marching by the way of Decatur, Oxford, Covington, New Eatonton and Milledgeville, with but a few skirmishes with the enemy's cavalry, the column reached and entered Savannah on the 23d of December.

On the 20th of January, 1865, the regiment moved with its division, on the campaign through the Carolinas, and reached Goldsboro on the 23d of March. From thence moved to Raleigh, arriving there on the 14th of April. On the 30th, marched by the way of Richmond, Virginia, for Washington, D. C., reaching there on the 19th of May. On the 14th of June it left Washington for Louisville, and arrived there on the 19th. On the 24th of June, 1865, the regiment was mustered out of service at Louisville, Kentucky, and proceeded to Indianapolis, arriving on the 25th, and was greeted with a public ovation in the State House Grounds, after which it was finally discharged and its members retured home.

During its term of service the regiment has marched three thousand five hundred and seven miles, traveled by railroad seven hundred and fifty-nine miles, and by steamer six hundred and fifty miles, being a total of four thousand nine hundred and sixteen miles.

MORGAN RAID REGIMENTS—MINUTE MEN.

Late on the evening of the 8th of July, 1863, intelligence was received at Indianapolis, that a rebel force, estimated to be six thousand cavalry, with four pieces of artillery, under command of Gen. John H. Morgan, had crossed the Ohio river, near Mauckport, and was moving on Corydon, Indiana. Governor Morton at once issued a patriotic call upon the citizens of the State, to leave their various occupations and organize for defence.

Under this call, within the short space of forty-eight hours, sixty-five thousand men had tendered their services. Of this force, thirteen regiments and one battalion were organized specially for this emergency, and the regiments designated numerically, from One Hundred and Second to One Hundred and Fourteenth, inclusive, the battalion being assigned to the One Hundred and Seventh Regiment.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND SECOND REGIMENT—Consisted of companies of the Indiana Legion, organized as Minute Men, from Boone county, with designations as follows: A, Boone County Buck Tails; B, Loyal Guards; C, Jefferson Guards; D, Hoosier Guards; E, Rough and Readys; F, Boone Independents; G, Indiana Light Guards; I, Morton Guards; K, Harrison and Perry Guards. It was organized with Benjamin M. Gregory as Colonel, on the 10th of July, 1863, and contained an aggregate of six hundred and twenty-three rank and file. The regiment left Indianapolis on the Madison railroad on the afternoon of July 11th, and reached North Vernon at three o'clock on the morning of the 12th; thence marched to Vernon, in which vicinity the rebel force had encamped the previous day. A number of horses were impressed, and Company "K" mounted and dispatched in pursuit of the enemy. The regiment then moved to Dupont, and thence to Osgood. On the 14th the regiment marched to Sunman's Station, and on the 17th returned to Indianapolis and was mustered out.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRD REGIMENT—Was composed of seven companies from Hendricks, two from Marion, and one from Wayne counties, all belonging to the Legion, and denominated Minute Men, for the emergency. The companies were named: A, Plainfield Guards; B, Lincoln Guards; C, Cartersburg Union Guards; D, Shuler Guards; E, Marion Guards; F, Washington Guards; G, Noble Guards; H, Richmond Guards; I, Perry Township Zouave Guards; K, Pleasant Run Home Guards. It was organized with Lawrence S. Shuler as Colonel, on the 10th of July, 1863, and contained an aggregate of six hundred and eighty-one rank and file. The regiment left Indianapolis by rail, on the evening of July 11th, and reached Vernon the next morning at three o'clock. Here Col. Shuler impressed a number of horses, and mounting one hundred and forty-six men from his own command and that of Colonel Gregory's, moved at four o'clock on the afternoon of the 12th, in pursuit of Morgan. In a short time General Hobson's pursuing column was overtaken, and Colonel Shuler's detachment placed in the advance. These troops came in sight of Morgan's rear guard on the afternoon of the 13th, captured several stragglers, skirmished with detachments of the enemy near Harrison, Ohio, and entered that town shortly after Morgan's rear guard had departed. Next morning the pursuit was resumed, and continued as far as Batavia, Ohio, when the command returned to Indianapolis. The regiment moved with General Wallace's command to Sunman's Station, and returned to Indianapolis after Morgan had escaped into Ohio, and was mustered out on the 16th of July, 1863. The detachment under Colonel Shuler subsequently returned and was mustered out.

The One Hundred and Fourth Regiment—Consisted of six companies of Minute Men, and four of the Legion. Six companies were from Decatur county, and Fayette, Madison, Marion and Rush counties furnished one company each. The companies of the Legion bore the following titles: A, Milroy Grays; B, Stevens' Rifles; D, Newport Rifles; I, Acton Guards. The regiment was organized at Greensburg, with James Gavin as Colonel, on the 10th of July, 1863, and contained an aggregate of seven hundred and nineteen rank and file. From Greensburg it moved to Sunman's Station; from thence it proceeded to Lawrenceburg, and then marched toward Harrison, Ohio. After Morgan's escape into Ohio, the regiment returned to Greensburg, and was mustered out on the 18th of July, 1863.

The One Hundred and Fifth Regiment—Was composed of seven companies of the Legion, and three of Minute Men. Henry county furnished two companies; Randolph, two; and Union, Putnam, Hancock, Wayne, Clinton and Madison counties, each one company. The companies of the Legion were named as follows: A, Union Guards; B, Union Defenders; D, Liberty Tigers; E, Hancock Guards; F, Abington Home Guards; G, Union Guards; H, Green Township Rangers. The regiment was organized on the 12th of July, 1863, and contained an aggregate of seven hundred and thirteen rank and file, with Kline G. Shryock as Colonel. It at once left Indianapolis for Lawrenceburg. Upon reaching Morris Station, the command disembarked from the cars, and, throwing out pickets, bivouacked for the night. Next morning the march was made to Sunman's Station, where great alarm existed among the citizens, caused by the approach of the enemy. The regiment pushed on to Van Wedden's Station, where the rebels were reported to be, but found that the enemy had left, after destroying the railroad. The regiment joined in the pursuit of Morgan, until near Harrison, Ohio. It then marched to Lawrenceburg. There being a report that Morgan's forces were returning to capture Lawrenceburg, the regiment moved out to check him, and while getting into position an indiscriminate firing took place among the men, resulting in killing eight and wounding twenty. The regiment returned to Indianapolis on the 18th of July, 1863 and was mustered out.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTH REGIMENT—Consisted of nine companies of Minute Men, and one company of the Legion, called the Anderson Guards. Five companies were from Wayne county, two from Randolph, and one company each from the counties of Hancock, Howard and Marion. The regiment was organized on the 12th of July, 1863, containing an aggregate of seven hundred and ninety-two rank and file, with Isaac P. Gray as Colonel. It left Indianapolis on the night of the 13th by rail, and arrived at Hamilton, Ohio, at eight o'clock the next morning. Thence it proceeded to Cincinnati, and from thence returned to Indianapolis, and was mustered out on the 18th of July, 1863.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTH REGIMENT—Was organized in Indianapolis on the 12th of July, 1863, with DeWitt C. Rugg as Colonel. Its companies were from the city of Indianapolis, and all belonged to the Legion. The following are the designations of the companies: A, First Ward Guards; B, Ninth Ward Guards; C, Seventh Ward Guards; D, Eighth Ward Guards; E, Third Ward Guards No. 1; F, Third Ward Guards No. 2; G, Second Ward Guards No. 1; H, Second Ward Guards No. 2; I, City Greys; K, Sixth Ward Guards; L, Fifth Ward Guards; M, Fourth Ward Guards. Companies were so promptly tendered that a battalion of eight companies was organized and assigned to the regiment, the companies of which were mustered in as the Legion, and were designated as follows: A, Iron Guards; B, Indianapolis Iron Clads; C, Silver Greys; D, Independent Guards; E, Police Guards; F, Indianapolis Independent Minute Men; G, Wilcox Battery; H, Indianapolis Cavalry. The regiment was not called into the field, and was mustered out on the 18th of July, 1863.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTH REGIMENT—Consisted of ten companies of Minute Men. Tippecanoe county furnished five companies; Howard county two companies; Carroll, Montgomery and Wayne counties each furnished one company. The regiment was organized on the 12th of July, 1863, with Wm. C. Wilson as Colonel, and contained an aggregate of seven hundrod and ten rank and file. On the night of the 13th of July the regiment left Indianapolis by rail, and reached Hamilton, Ohio, at daybreak the next morning. Thence it proceeded to Cincinnati, and on the 18th of July, 1863, returned to Indianapolis and was mustered out.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND NINTH REGIMENT—Was composed wholly of Minute Men. Two companies from Coles county, Illinois, offering their services to the Governor, were accepted and assigned to this regiment. Laporte county furnished two companies; Hamilton county two; Miami county two; Randolph and Miami counties, one company each. The regiment was organized on the 10th of July, 1863, with John R. Mahan as Colonel, and contained an aggregate of seven hundred and nine rank and file. It left Indianapolis by rail on the 13th, arriving at Hamilton, Ohio, the next morning. Thence it proceeded to Cincinnati, when, the emergency being passed, the regiment returned to Indianapolis, and on the 17th of July, 1863, was mustered out.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND TENTH REGIMENT—Was composed of Minute Men. Henry county furnished two companies; Madison county three; Delaware county two; Cass and Monroe counties each one company. It was organized on the 12th of July, 1863, with Graham N. Fitch as Colonel, and contained an aggregate of eight hundred and thirty-six rank and file. The regiment was not called into the field, and was mustered out of the service at Indianapolis on the 15th of July, 1863.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND ELEVENTH REGIMENT—Was composed of Minute Men. Delaware county furnished four companies; Fayette two companies, one of which was cavalry. Montgomery, Rush, Miami, Monroe, and Hamilton counties each furnished one company. The regiment was organized at Indianapolis on the 13th of July, 1863, with Robert Conover as Colonel, and contained an aggregate of seven hundred and thirty-three rank and file. It was not called into the field, and was mustered out at Indianapolis, on the 15th of July, 1863.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND TWELFTH REGIMENT—Comprised nine companies of Minute Men and one company of the Legion, called Mitchell Light Infantry. Lawrence county furnished six companies; Orange two; Monroe and Washington counties each one company. The regiment was organized on the 10th of July, 1863, with Hiram F. Braxton as Colonel, and contained an aggregate of seven hundred and three rank and file. The regiment was assigned to General Hughes' brigade; moved from Mitchell to Seymour; thence to North Vernon; held that place against Morgan's forces; and thence to Sunman's Station. The enemy having escaped, the regiment proceeded to Indianapolis, where it was mustered out on the 17th of July, 1863.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTEENTH REGIMENT—Was composed of Minute Men. Lawrence county furnished three companies; Daviess, three; Washington, Martin and Monroe counties, each furnished one company. The regiment was organized on the 10th of July, 1863, with George W. Burge as Colonel, and contained an aggregate of five hundred and twenty-six rank and file. It was assigned to General Hughes' brigade, moved from Mitchell to North Vernon, arriving there in time to hold that place against the rebel force, thence the regiment marched to Sunman's Station, and subsequently proceeded to Indianapolis, where it was mustered out on the 16th of July, 1863.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FOURTEENTH REGIMENT—Consisted of six companies of Minute Men, organized in Johnson county. It was mustered in on the 9th of July, 1863, with Samuel Lambertson as Colonel, and contained an aggregate of three hundred and eighty-three rank and file. The regiment moved to Columbus, thence to Vernon, and thence to Sunman's Station. After Morgan had escaped into Ohio, the regiment proceeded to Indianapolis and was mustered out on the 21st of July, 1863.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTEENTH REGIMENT.

In June, 1863, the President made a requisition on the Governor of Indiana for a number of regiments for six months' service, and a call was made for one regiment from each Congressional District. When the call was issued, a harvest was near at hand, and a great deficiency of labor was likely to be experienced in the agricultural districts, causing delay and an abatement in enlistments, so that only four regiments were organized.

The One Hundred and Fifteenth Regiment was organized at Indianapolis on the 13th of August, 1863, and mustered into service on the 17th of the same month, with John R. Mahan as Colonel. On the 16th of September it left the Capital and proceeded through Central Kentucky to Nicholasville, where it joined the command of General O. B. Willcox, then on its way to East Tennessee. By his order the four regiments of six months' men were placed in a brigade, and Colonel Mahan assigned to the command of the same, after which Lieutenant Colonel, A. J. Hawn had the immediate command of the regiment.

On the 24th of September the regiment moved with its brigade from Nicholasville for Cumberland Gap, passing through Crab Orchard, Mount Vernon, London and Barboursville, Kentucky, and reaching Cumberland Gap on the 3d of October. Remaining there till the 6th, it then marched southward, passing through Tazewell and crossing the Clinch river, Clinch mountains and Holston river, and entering Morristown on the 8th. On the 10th the regiment reached Blue Springs, when the enemy was engaged and driven from his position on a commanding hill, and then pursued some fifteen miles. The regiment then moved to Greenville, where it remained until the 6th of November, when it marched to Bull's Gap, where it was engaged for sometime in fortifying the mountain passes. While here the command suffered for want of food and clothing, the men subsisting on quarter rations, without sugar or coffee, and frequently living on parched corn. Many of the soldiers were thinly clad, and without shoes, and their sufferings from exposure to the cold, were exceedingly severe.

From Bull's Gap the regiment moved to Clinch Gap and Clinch river, reaching Sycamore about the middle of December, from whence it marched to Walker's Ford. During the winter the One Hundred and Fifteenth was kept on duty in the mountains of East Tennessee, marching, almost shoeless, over rough roads, and enduring many hardships. The result of this campaign was, that the hospitals at Cumberland Gap were filled with sick and exhausted soldiers, who were subsequently transferred to Camp Nelson, and from thence sent to Louisville and Indianapolis.

Returning to Indianapolis for discharge on the 10th of February, the regiment was publicly welcomed by the citizens at a reception meeting held in the State House grounds on the 12th of February, 1864, and addressed by Governor Morton, General Carrington and Mayor Caven, to which responses were made by Lieutenant Colonel Hawn and Chaplain Summerbell. In a few days afterwards the regiment was finally discharged from service.

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTEENTH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Sixteenth Regiment was organized at Lafayette, the companies being mustered into the six months' service on the 17th of August, 1863. On the 31st of August, and before the appointment of field officers, the regiment was moved to Dearborn, near Detroit, Michigan, where it was placed on duty, guarding the United States Arsenal. While there, on the 4th of September, Colonel William C. Kise, who had organized and temporarily commanded the regiment, was mustered in as Colonel. From Dearborn, it moved to Nicholasville, Kentucky, where it was assigned to Colonel Mahan's brigade of General Willcox's command, and with it marched to Cumberland Gap, reaching there on the 3d of October.

After a brief stay at Cumberland Gap, the regiment moved to Tazewell, and thence to Morristown. On the 10th of October it fought the rebels at Blue Springs and drove them from their position. Marching to Greenville, the regiment remained there until the 6th of November, when it moved with the brigade to Bull's Gap. Here it was occupied for sometime in constructing fortifications and defending the passes, enduring many privations on account of short rations and scanty clothing. Marching across the Clinch mountains to Clinch river, it participated in the battle at Walker's Ford on the 2d of December. Arriving at the Ford near noon, the regiment waded across the Clinch river in the face of a heavy musketry fire and took a position commanding the approach through a gorge to the river. Here it held the enemy in check, until the cavalry and infantry had all retired from the field in front and crossed the river. During this time the regiment was under almost constant fire. About three o'clock in the afternoon, after the last of our forces had crossed, the skirmishing between the One Hundred and Sixteenth and a whole brigade of the enemy became very brisk and, indeed, severe, the firing on both sides continuing until after five o'clock. Just before dark the regiment commenced to recross the river, and with the assistance of the Twenty-First Ohio Battery, the enemy was kept in check for three hours, at the expiration of which time the entire command reached the north side of the river. In this action four hundred and sixty-three men and officers of the regiment were engaged, of which number one was killed and four wounded.

After the battle of Walker's Ford the regiment moved to Tazewell, and in January, 1864, marched to Maynardsville. During the balance of this month it was engaged in most arduous duty in the mountain regions of East Tennessee, during which the regiment was much reduced by sickness caused by exposure and privations. From East Tennessee the regiment marched homeward by way of Cumberland Gap and Camp Nelson, reaching Indianapolis on the 7th of February, and, moving thence to Lafayette, the place of its organization. On the 24th the regiment was present at a welcoming meeting held at the latter place, on which occasion Governor Morton delivered an address, which was responded to by Colonel Kise,

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTEENTH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Seventeenth Regiment was organized for six months' service at Indianapolis in July and August, 1863, and mustered into service as an organization on the 17th of September, with Thomas J. Brady as Colonel. On the same day it left Indianapolis for Kentucky, and reaching Nicholasville in a few days after, went into camp near that place until the 24th of September. With the brigade of Indiana six months' troops, it left Nicholasville, and marched to Cumberland Gap, by way of Lancaster, Crab Orchard and Barboursville.

Cumberland Gap was reached on the 3d of October and, after a few days' rest, the regiment moved into East Tennessee, passing through Morristown and marching thence to Greenville. In the vicinity of that place it remained until November, when it marched to Bean's Station, and during the attack made upon General Hascall's command by Longstreet's forces, on the 14th of November, it was stationed at Clinch Mountain Gap, three miles from Bean's Station. From the latter place a road ran to and through the Gap, and another road ran north along the side of the mountain to its top, intersecting the first named road at a point between the regiment and the other forces under General Willcox. Along these two roads Longstreet ordered a brigade of cavalry to attack and intercept the retreat of the regiment if it should attempt to fall back on the main body under Willcox. Colonel Brady, perceiving the object of the enemy, and knowing that his men were greatly outnumbered, and that their communications would be cut off and his regiment captured should he remain in his position, ordered a retreat. Finding it impossible to fall back by the road leading to General Willcox's command, he abandoned all his baggage and endeavored to unite with General Hascall at Bean's Station, which movement was accomplished during the night, over unfrequented roads and by-paths, and the regiment brought to Bean's Station in time to report for duty to General Hascall before the fight was over.

After this affair the regiment moved to Cumberland Gap where it remained for a brief period, and then marched to Tazewell, and thence over the Clinch mountains to Knoxville. The latter part of December it moved to Strawberry Plains, and, in the following month, marched to Maynardsville, after which it returned to Cumberland Gap, on its march homeward, reaching that place the latter part of January, 1864. The winter campaign of the six months' men in East Tennessee, for hardships and real suffering, was, perhaps, more severe than that of any winter campaign of the war. The One Hundred and Seventeenth suffered its share of these privations, marching over mountains, crossing streams and enduring the severest exposure, without shoes, and, at times, living upon quarter rations.

Moving from Cumberland Gap across the country, it reached Camp Nelson, and there rested a few days, after which it proceeded to Indianapolis, reaching there on the 6th of February. On the 9th the regiment partook of a sumptuous dinner at the Soldiers' Home, after which it marched to the Capitol Grounds where it was publicly welcomed home by General Carrington and Mayor Caven, Colonel Brady responding. In a few days afterward the regiment was discharged from service.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTEENTH REGIMENT.

Most of the recruits for the One Hundred and Eighteenth Regiment were rendezvoused at Wabash, during the months of July and August, 1863, and moved to Indianapolis on the 31st of August, where the companies were fully organized on the 3d of September, and the regimental organization mustered into the six months' service, on the 16th of September, with George W. Jackson as Colonel. On the same day it left Indianapolis and proceeded to Kentucky, joining the other six months regiments at Nicholasville. Being assigned to General Willcox's command, it moved with it towards East Tennessee, reaching Cumberland Gap on the 3d of October. After a few days' rest, the regiment marched to Morristown and thence to Greenville. After remaining at Greenville for over a month it marched to Clinch river, and there participated in the battle of Walker's Ford on the 2d of December. At this time Colonel Jackson was in command of a brigade of infantry sent to the relief of the Fifth Indiana Cavalry, which had engaged a heavy force of the enemy two miles south of the river, and was falling back because of the exhaustion of its ammunition. Lieutenant Colonel Henry C. Elliott, in command of the One Hundred and Eighteenth, reached the Clinch river about eleven o'clock in the morning. The stream was waded and the regiment sent forward and formed in line of battle on both sides of the road, and then advanced in relief of the cavalry, which was found, as reported, almost destitute of ammunition. This movement enabled the cavalry to fall back and cross the river. The retreat of the cavalry was covered by the One Hundred and Eighteenth, which gradually fell back, though strongly pressed by a full brigade of the enemy moving in heavy force on both flanks of the regiment. At one time the enemy made a charge on the right, which was met and repelled with coolness, and soon after the regiment re-crossed the river in safety. Its loss was one killed and fourteen wounded.

After this battle the regiment moved to Tazewell and other portions of the mountainous regions of East Tennessee, doing most arduous duty, and suffering many privations. In January, 1864, it marched to Maynardsville, from whence it moved to Cumberland Gap, and thence homeward by way of Camp Nelson. Reaching Indianapolis about the middle of February, it was finally discharged there, and the men and officers returned to their respective homes.

SEVENTH CAVALRY (119th) REGIMENT.

During the month of June, 1863, by authority of the Secretary of War, another regiment of cavalry was authorized to be raised in Indiana for three years, or during the war. Measures were at once taken to recruit the Seventh Cavalry, One Hundred and Nineteenth Regiment. The place of rendezvous was fixed at Indianapolis, and recruiting progressed briskly during the months of July and August, companies being mustered in as fast as their organizations were completed, and, on the 1st of October, 1863, the organization of twelve companies was perfected, with John P. C. Shanks (under whose superintendence the regiment was recruited and organized) as Colonel, and Thomas M. Browne as Lieutenant Colonel. Under the orders of the War Department, a number of volunteers who had enlisted for six months, were permitted to change their term of service, and volunteer for three years in the Seventh Cavalry. The regiment numbered one thousand two hundred and thirteen men, and, for two months, were stationed at Camp Shanks, Indianapolis, engaged in learning the various evolutions necessary to make cavalry effective in the field.

On the 6th of December the Seventh Cavalry left Indianapolis under orders to report at Louisville, and, upon arriving there, was sent, by the way of Cairo and Columbus, to Union City, Tennessee, where, upon its arrival, it formed a camp. On the 14th, a detachment, under Major Beck, moved toward Paris, Tennessee, by the way of Dresden and Como. Upon nearing Paris, the rebel cavalry were found in large force, under Colonel Faulkner, holding that town. There being no hope of success against the strong force of the enemy, the detachment countermarched for Union City. While returning, they were met by Colonel Shanks with a force of three hundred, and again moved for the enemy's position, but a peremptory order was soon received from the General commanding to return. The command accordingly proceeded to its old camp at Union City. The regiment at this time was assigned to the First Brigade, Sixth Division, 16th Army Corps, Brigadier General B. H. Grierson commanding the cavalry division.

On the 24th of December the regiment moved with a force under command of General A. J. Smith into northern Mississippi, for the purpose of cutting off the retreat of the rebel General Forrest, from Jackson, Tennessee. During that long and dreadful march, the thermometer standing below zero, the soldierly bearing and conduct of the officers and men of the regiment, elicited the praise of the commanding General. The regiment took position in front, flank or rear, as danger threatened, was the first in the fight and the last to cover the retreat. The enemy were encountered near Paris, Tennessee, and a brisk skirmish ensued. The enemy fell back, and our forces pursued. At Egypt Station, Mississippi, the rebel rear guard was overtaken, and a sharp fight took place, the regiment losing in killed and wounded. Near Okalona, Mississippi, on the 22d of February, 1864, the enemy was encountered in force. A severe battle ensued, lasting all day. The Seventh Cavalry had eight hundred and thirteen of its members engaged in this battle. The overpowering forces of the enemy drove our forces from the field. When the rest of the division had fled, the Seventh Cavalry met and held in check the pursuing and exultant rebels, saved the train, and prevented an utter rout. Late in the evening it made a sabre charge upon the enemy, saved a battery that had been abandoned by its support, and, being driven back, was compelled to leave sixty of its brave men on the field. The loss of the regiment was eleven killed, thirty-six wounded, and thirty-seven missing, a total loss of eighty-four. The regiment, after this disastrous battle, returned with its division to Memphis. Generals Smith and Grierson complimented the regiment for its efficiency and valor. It remained some time near Memphis engaged in scouting in the vicinity and preparing for another campaign.

General Sherman was at this time moving toward Atlanta, and was dependent for the supply of his forces upon the railroad from Nashville to the point where he was operating. This railroad passed through a hostile country, and had to be guarded by our troops. A cavalry force of the enemy, in northern Mississippi, under Forrest, was waiting to destroy Sherman's line of communications beyond the possibility of further use during that campaign, so soon as Sherman had advanced far enough into the mountains of Georgia to make a retreat disastrous. To guard against this danger, Sherman left a sufficient force in West Tennessee to operate against Forrest. General Sturges was directed to take command of this force and move upon Forrest.

Upon reaching Guntown, Mississippi, on the 10th of June, 1864, the enemy's cavalry were met in large force. A desperate fight ensued, and our forces were badly beaten, and driven back in utter rout to Memphis. The Seventh Cavalry took part in this battle, losing eight killed, fifteen wounded and seventeen missing, and notwithstanding the battle resulted disastrously, the regiment was complimented by General Grierson, commanding cavalry division, for its gallantry. The General said: "Your General congratulates you upon your noble conduct during the late expedition. Fighting against overwhelming numbers, under adverse circumstances, your prompt obedience to orders and unflinching courage, commanding the admiration of all, made even defeat almost a victory. For hours, on foot, you repulsed the charges of the enemy's infantry, and again, in the saddle, you met his cavalry and turned his assaults into confusion. Your heroic perseverance saved hundreds of your fellow soldiers from capture. You have been faithful to your honorable reputation, and have fully justified the confidence and merited the high esteem of your commander."

After this battle the regiment remained near Memphis some time, engaged in protecting the railroad, and doing guard duty. On the 18th of August a detachment of the regiment was engaged in a fight with the enemy at La Mavoo, Mississippi. On the 4th of October seven men of company "F" were killed by guerillas near Memphis.

In November, 1864, the regiment left Memphis, crossed into Arkansas, and, with General Mower's division of the Sixteenth Corps, marched north through Arkansas, in pursuit of the rebel General Price, then invading Missouri. The pursuit was continued through south-east Missouri as far as Cape Girardeau. At this place the regiment embarked on steamers, moved up the Mississippi river to St. Louis, and thence up the Missouri river, landing in the interior of that State. The pursuit was resumed, the Seventh Cavalry marching by land, until the western border of Missouri was reached, when further pursuit was abandoned and the regiment returned by the way of St. Louis, to Memphis.

On the 21st of December, the Seventh Cavalry moved from Memphis with a cavalry expedition under General Grierson. On the 28th Forrest's dismounted camp at Vernon, Mississippi, was surprised and captured, and a large quantity of rebel stores destroyed, including sixteen railroad cars, loaded with pontoons for Hood's army, and four thousand new English carbines. On the 28th the enemy was attacked at Egypt Station, his forces captured or dispersed, and a train of fourteen cars destroyed. General Grierson continued on his raid through Mississippi, inflicting great damage on the enemy, and reached Vicksburg, January 5th, 1865. The Seventh Cavalry, meanwhile, after the fight at Egypt Station, returned to Memphis.

The regiment remained near Memphis actively engaged in scouting and doing provost duty along the Memphis and Charleston railroad, until June, 1865, when it proceeded to Alexandria, Louisiana. On the 21st of July the regiment was consolidated into six companies and supernumerary officers mustered out. From Alexandria the regiment proceeded to Hempstead, Texas. On the 10th of October, Colonel Shanks was mustered out on account of disability, and Lieutenant Colonel Thomas M. Browne appointed Colonel. The regiment was at Hempstead, Texas, at the time of preparing this sketch, (December, 1865,) and was the only remaining Indiana cavalry regiment in service at that date. In the spring of 1865 a number of its members, while returning from rebel prisons, were lost on the steamer Sultana. The regiment has seen hard service, and proved itself an efficient organization.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTIETH REGIMENT.

During the month of September, 1863, Governor Morton received authority from the War Department to raise eleven regiments of three years' volunteers. Under this authority the following infantry regiments were organized: One Hundred and Twentieth, One Hundred and Twenty-Third, One Hundred and Twenty-Fourth, One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth, One Hundred and Twenty-Ninth, and One Hundred and Thirtieth. Their organization having been perfected, they were armed, equipped and turned over to the command of Brigadier General Alvin P. Hovey, who had been ordered from Chattanooga, by Major General Sherman, to proceed to Indianapolis and take charge of the forces. General Hovey at once organized the above regiments into a division. In the month of April this division was sent by rail to Nashville, and from thence joined the Twenty-Third Corps in East Tennessee, and was styled the First Division of that Corps. The military history of these regiments will be found embodied in the sketches which follow:

The One Hundred and Twentieth Regiment was recruited from the First, Third, and Eighth Congressional Districts, during the winter of 1863 and 1864, rendezvoused at Columbus, and was mustered into service on the 1st of March, 1864, with Richard F. Barter as Colonel. On the 20th it left Indianapolis for Louisville, Kentucky, and, upon its arrival there, was assigned to the First Brigade, General Hovey's division. The command then moved by rail to Nashville, where it was equipped for active service. On the 5th of April the regiment moved with its division for the front, and, after a march of over two hundred miles, reached Charleston, Tennessee, where Hovey's division was assigned, as the First Division, to the Twenty-Third Army Corps, (General Schofield.) On the 2d of May the regiment moved with its division on the campaign against Atlanta, and its subsequent history is identified with that of the Twenty-Third Corps.

General Sherman had issued orders for all the troops that were to form part of his moving columns to concentrate towards Chattanooga early in May, 1864. The Twenty-Third Corps, on the 6th of May, was near Red Clay, Georgia, on a line directly north of Dalton. On the 9th a demonstration was made by Schofield upon the enemy's position at Rocky Face. The column then pushed through Snake Creek Gap, and on the 15th of May encountered the enemy at Resacca. The regiment took a conspicuous part in this battle, and, in conjunction with its division, gallantly charged and routed the enemy.

On the 15th of June, our columns found the enemy strongly entrenched near Lost Mountain. Preparations were made for an assault, but on the 17th the works were found abandoned. The column pushed on and participated in the assault on Kenesaw Mountain on the 27th of June. On the 7th of July the advance of our corps crossed the Chattahoochie river, and on the 10th Sherman's whole army had effected a passage. On the 17th of July a general forward movement was made on Atlanta. On the 22d a severe battle was fought, and, after a desperate struggle, the enemy was defeated.

From this time until the 29th of August the siege of Atlanta was vigorously pressed, with almost constant skirmishing by day and by night. On the 29th the bulk of Sherman's army moved by the right flank around Atlanta, encountered the enemy at Jonesboro' on the 31st, defeated his assault, and thence pursued his column to Lovejoy's Station, where further pursuit was abandoned and the army marched to Atlanta, which had been evacuated by the enemy on the night of the 1st of September. The Twenty-Third Corps went into camp at Decatur.

In all the movements of the campaign just recited, in which its corps was engaged, the One Hundred and Twentieth took part. It was at Resacca, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta, July 22d, and Jonesboro', and lost in killed and wounded in each battle, and in the heavy skirmishing in front of Atlanta. On the 15th of September Lieutenant Colonel A. W. Prather was promoted to the Colonelcy, vice Colonel Barter, resigned. Major Reuben C. Kise was promoted Lieutenant Colonel, and Captain E. B. Brasher, of company A, promoted Major.

On the 3d of October the regiment moved with its division in pursuit of Hood. By a forced march our column reached Kingston on the 11th, and proceeded thence to Rome; thence the march was continued to Resacca, the enemy constantly retiring; thence to Dalton, and thence through the mountains until Summerville was reached, when further pursuit ceased.

On the 30th of October the Twenty-Third Corps was detached from Sherman's army, and ordered to report to General Thomas at Nashville. The regiment marched with its corps by the way of Chattanooga and reached Columbia, Tennessee, on the 24th of November. Skirmishing was had with the enemy during the two subsequent days. On the 27th our corps withdrew to the north bank of Duck river. On the 29th our forces made a night march of twenty-five miles and reached Franklin at an early hour the next morning.

On the 30th was fought the battle of Franklin. The enemy repeatedly assaulted our lines, but was firmly met and repulsed. The battle raged furiously until ten o'clock at night. The One Hundred and Twentieth was warmly engaged, losing its gallant Major, E. B. Brasher (who fell mortally wounded) and forty-eight men killed and wounded. Our army fell back during the night, after the battle, to Nashville, and formed line of battle the next day on its surrounding hills. The regiment took position on the left.

On the 15th and 16th of December, the regiment took part in the battle of Nashville, which resulted in the utter defeat of Hood's army. The regiment joined in the pursuit until the rebel fugitives had crossed the Tennessee river, when it went into camp with its division at Clifton, Tennessee.

On the 15th of January, 1865, the regiment embarked at Clifton on steamers, and sailed with its corps down the Tennessee and up the Ohio river, to Cincinnati, and were transported from thence by rail to Washington City. From Washington, the division to which the regiment was attached, proceeded to Newbern, North Carolina, part of the corps landing at Wilmington.

On the 6th of March, the regiment left Newbern with its division, and marched along the line of the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad, towards Kingston. Upon the 8th the enemy was encountered in force at Wise's Forks, and a sharp fight ensued. On the 10th, the enemy being largely reinforced, made a furious attack upon our left and center, but was decisively repulsed with heavy loss. The regiment moved rapidly to the front at the commencement of this battle and took position in the center, which position it held during the whole engagement, being much exposed, and losing seven killed and forty-eight wounded. The enemy retreated in confusion from the field, leaving his killed and wounded.

On the next day the march was resumed and a junction formed at Kingston with the forces of General Cox, which had marched from Wilmington. The united command of General Schofie'd's corps marched from Kingston on the 20th of March, and entered Goldsboro' on the evening of the following day. The entire army was now in communication, General Sherman's army having reached Goldsboro' from Fayetteville. Thus, after four months' separation, the regiment again met the veterans of the Army of Georgia with whom it had so long served. The regiment remained in camp at Goldsboro' until the 10th of April, when it moved with the main army towards Smithfield. The enemy having fallen back, our corps was directed to hold Goldsboro' and be ready, at any moment, to move forward.

On the 13th of April our advance entered Raleigh. On the 26th af April the rebel General Johnson surrendered all the forces under his command to General Sherman, and further warlike operations ceased upon that line.

The regiment then marched to Raleigh, and was placed on provost duty in that city, while the whole grand army of General Sherman encamped in the country round. On the 10th of May the regiment moved to Charlotte, North Carolina, where it remained on duty for three months. It then moved to Greenboro'. On the 21st of August the regiment was ordered by the Department to proceed to Raleigh for the purpose of performing garrison duty.

On the 9th of September, Lieutenant Colonel Reuben C. Kise was promoted Colonel, to fill a vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Colonel A. W. Prather. Major Barcus was promoted to the Lieutenant Colonelcy, and Captain Albert Knowles, of Company "D," appointed Major. On the 2d of December, Colonel Reuben C. Kise was promoted by the President to Brevet Brigadier General of Volunteers, for distinguished and gallant services during the war.

The One Hundred and Twentieth yet remains at Raleigh engaged in garrison duty, and has the reputation of one of the most perfectly disciplined organizations that ever left the State. At the time of preparing this sketch, December, 1864, the officers and men were in a high state of health and discipline, and doing effective service for the country.

NINTH CAVALRY (121st) REGIMENT.

The Ninth Cavalry, One Hundred and Twenty-First Regiment, was recruited during the fall and winter of 1863, was organized as a regiment on the 1st of March, 1864, at Indianapolis, with George W. Jackson as Colonel, and remained in the State, under drill, until the 3d of May. Without completing the mount (partially accomplished,) the regiment, armed with Enfield rifles, left the State on the 3d of May, and proceeded to Nashville, by rail, and thence to Pulaski, Tennessee, where it was kept on post duty until the 23d of November. During this time, it participated in the skirmishes incident to the Forrest and Wheeler campaigns of that period. On the 25th of September, 1864, a portion of the regiment, under command of Major Lilly, was in an engagement at Sulphur Branch Trestle, Alabama, with Forrest, losing one hundred and twenty men in killed, wounded and missing.

At the time of the opening of Hood's campaign in Tennessee, the regiment fell back from Pulaski to Nashville, and was immediately mounted and sent to the front. On December 17th, in an engagement with Forrest's cavalry at Franklin, it lost twenty-six men and officers killed, wounded and prisoners. After the defeat of Hood's army and its retreat from the State, the regiment went into winter quarters at Gravelly Springs, Alabama, remaining there from January 16th to February 6th, 1865, when, under orders, it embarked on transports, and with its brigade organization, proceeded to New Orleans, arriving there on the 10th of March. At that place the brigade was broken up, and the Ninth Cavalry turning over its horses, left on steamer and arrived at Vicksburg on the 25th of March. Here it remained on post duty until the 3d of May, when it was again mounted, and sent, by detachments, into the interior of the State of Mississippi, to garrison posts, on which duty it continued until the order for muster out of service was received.

On the 22d of May, the regiment moved to Vicksburg for the purpose of being mustered out of service, but this was not done until the 28th of August, 1865. Soon after it proceeded up the Mississippi, homeward bound, and arrived at Indianapolis on the 5th of September. On the following day the regiment was publicly received, with other returned regiments, and welcomed home at a meeting held in the State House grounds, by speeches from General Mansfield, of Governor Morton's staff, Hon. John H. Farquhar and others. In a few days afterward the officers and men were finally discharged from service and returned to their homes.

On leaving the State the regiment was eleven hundred and fifty strong. It returned with three hundred and eighty-six men and officers. On the 26th of April, 1865, by the explosion of the steamer Sultana on the Mississippi, the Ninth Cavalry lost fifty-five men. Those who were saved from the steamer reached Indianapolis early in May, and were there mustered out as paroled prisoners, under instructions from the War Department.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

Under the call of September 14th, 1863, for four regiments of cavalry, and seven regiments of infantry, commandants of the camps of rendezvous in each Congressional district were instructed to raise five companies of cavalry and seven companies of infantry. These instructions were not carried out, for the reason that the popular arm of service with volunteers, was the cavalry, and in most of the districts the preponderance of enlistments was greatly in favor of the cavalry organizations. As a consequence, when the time came to perfect the regimental organizations, it was found that enough companies were raised in the whole State to form eleven regiments, but of these, five were for cavalry and six for infantry. Authority was afterwards received from the War Department for the acceptance of the additional cavalry regiment in lieu of the infantry regiment failed to be recruited. The Second Congressional District furnished no infantry companies, and the numerical designation of the One Hundred and Twenty-First, intended for the infantry organization from that district, was given to the Ninth Cavalry, (raised in different portions of the State,) and the recruits for cavalry were placed in the Thirteenth Cavalry, One Hundred and Thirty-First Regiment.

The companies for the One Hundred and Twenty-Second Regiment, which were raised in the Third Congressional District, were consolidated with the One Hundred and Twentieth Regiment, directed to be raised in the First Congressional District, and the numerical designation of One Hundred and Twenty-Second Regiment was dropped.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-THIRD REGIMENT.

The One Hundred Twenty-Third Regiment was recruited during the winter of 1863 and 1864, from the Fourth and Seventh Congressional Districts, rendezvoused at Greensburg, and was mustered into service on the 9th of March, 1864, with John C. McQuiston, as Colonel. On the 18th, the Regiment left for Nashville, and upon arriving there was assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, Twenty-Third Army Corps. On the 4th of April the regiment marched with its division for Charleston, Tennessee, and, after twenty days steady marching, reached that place and camped.

On the 3d of May the regiment marched with its corps on the campaign against Atlanta, passing through Cleveland, Tennessee, and Red Clay, Georgia, and on the 9th were engaged at Rocky Face Ridge. The Second Brigade was on the extreme left of Sherman's army, and facing a conical peak surmounted by heavy guns and surrounded by formidable works at its base. A detachment, supported by the One Hundred and Twenty-Third and One Hundred and Thirtieth Indiana, charged and captured this position and drove the enemy into his works on Rocky Face Ridge. On the 14th the regiment moved with its division through Snake Creek Gap, and on the day following moved to the extreme left of the army, arriving in time to take part in the battle of Resacca, and received and repulsed a dashing assault of the enemy on our exposed flank. The enemy retreated during the night, and the regiment joined in the pursuit, passing through Resacca, Calhoun and Cassville, skirmishing almost constantly with the enemy's rear guard. On the 24th the regiment crossed Etowah River and advanced to the support of General Hooker near Dallas. During the last week of May, a detachment of rebel cavalry captured a portion of the division supply train and several men belonging to the regiment.

The month of June opened with heavy rains, which flooded our camps, almost destroyed the country roads, and spread disease among the men. Rations were short for want of transportation, and the men worn out by marching, fighting and exposure. On the 9th of June the Second Brigade was transferred to the Second Division (Hascalls') of the same corps. On the 12th, the regiment was detailed to guard the ordnance train, and on the 16th rejoined its brigade.

The enemy held position near Lost Mountain, and the second division was ordered to dislodge him. Early on the morning of the 17th, the command advanced in line of battle, its front covered by a strong skirmish line, driving the enemy for some distance, until within range of his artillery. A furious fire of grape and canister tore through our ranks, but, with a yell, the line charged, drove the enemy from position, and captured many prisoners. The regiment lost one killed and twelve wounded in this battle.

On the 23d, Hood's rebel corps was demonstrating on the Sandtown road, near Pine Mountain, threatening the flank of the Twentieth corps. Hacall's division moved rapidly to the threatened point. The regiment had scarcely got into position, when heavy columns of the enemy swarmed in front of its division, and made a fierce assault. The rebel charge was met and decisively repulsed with great loss to the enemy. The regiment lost but one killed.

General Sherman determined to make an assault on the enemy's position on Kenesaw Mountain. To conceal his real intention, General Schofield was ordered to demonstrate vigorously on our right.

On the morning of the 27th the regiment moved to its allotted position, and rapidly advancing drove the enemy into his intrenchments. Several attempts were made by the enemy to drive the regiment from its advanced position, but without success, and the regiment held its place until midnight of the 30th, when it was relieved by another regiment. The regiment lost in this battle six killed and forty wounded. At daybreak the regiment was again marching in pursuit of the enemy, who fell back slowly, skirmishing sharply, and making obstinate resistance at every favorable point of defense. At sundown the regiment joined in an impetuous charge, driving the enemy from his works and establishing a line far in the advance. Support soon arrived, and the men lay down to rest, having been under fire for four days and nights, and without rations for thirty hours, appeasing the pangs of hunger by eating blackberries gathered on the field of battle.

On the 4th of July, certain demonstrations on the enemy's line of communications, and the capture of his entire line of rifle pits, caused him to abandon his works and fall back to the Chattahoochee river. On the 7th the advance of our corps captured a bridge and effected a crossing of the Chattahoochee. The enemy, finding his rear threatened, crossed the river on the 9th. On the 17th the forward movement was continued, Hascall's division taking the road to Decatur. On the 19th, our brigade being in the advance, encountered the enemy near Decatur, assaulted his position, captured it, and drove his flying troops through that town. A portion of the railroad was then destroyed.

The siege of Atlanta was now fairly begun. Fighting and skirmishing were of constant occurrence. The roar of artillery or the constant dropping of rifle balls, were familiar sounds. The enemy had extended his works southwest of Atlanta to the vicinity of East Point. General Schofield determined to dislodge him from two hills that commanded the extreme right of our position. One brigade from each division was selected for this work. In our division the choice fell on the brigade to which the One Hundred and Twenty-Third was attached. On the 6th of August the movement was made. Pushing through a dense thicket of pines and oaks, the command emerged into an open field, upon the further side of which were the enemy's works, containing a battery, supported by a heavy force. The order was given to charge! With a cheer the line swept forward, its ranks torn with a heavy artillery and musketry fire from the enemy, and carried the position. The regiment lost in this charge twenty-seven killed and wounded. Captains Fletcher G. Owens and Franklin F. Swain fell mortally wounded. Two color sergeants were shot down, and the colors seized by private Bruce Hicks, of Company G, who carried them triumphantly through the fight. The regiment was constantly under fire until the 29th of August, when it moved with its corps on the flank movement which resulted in the evacuation of Atlanta by the rebel army. The regiment then returned, with its corps, and went into camp at Decatur. During this campaign the regiment lost twenty-eight killed and one hundred and five wounded.

The rebel General Hood having crossed the Chattahoochee river, and interrupted our communications, striking the railroad at Big Shanty, and capturing the small detachments in the block houses, our forces moved in pursuit. On the 4th of October the regiment left Decatur, and marching with its corps, proceeded to Rome, thence to Resaeca, and thence, through Snake Creek Gap, to Gaylesville, Alabama, where further pursuit ceased. On the 30th the Twenty-Third Corps was ordered to report to General Thomas at Nashville. The regiment marched with its corps to Chattanooga, and thence moved by rail to Columbia, Tennessee.

On the 16th of November the regiment was sent down Duck river. Six companies under Colonel McQuiston were stationed opposite Williamsport, the rest of the regiment, under Lieutenant Colonel Walters, fortified a commanding eminence at Gordon's Ferry. The enemy menaced these points for several days. On the 30th it was ascertained that the enemy had passed our left flank and was marching on Franklin. Orders were received to rejoin Schofield at Franklin. The Ninety-First and One Hundred and Twenty-Third Indiana, numbering, in the aggregate, seven hundred men, under Colonel Mehringer, of the Ninety-First, marched that night in the direction of Franklin. They had proceeded but a short distance when they found themselves in the rear of Forrest's rebel cavalry, fifteen thousand strong. Their only mode of escape was by moving cautiously, and with great celerity, around the enemy's left. There were but two alternatives, if unsuccessful—capture or destruction. The command moved silently and rapidly forward, and, after sixty hours continuous marching, succeeded in eluding the enemy, and rejoined the brigade beneath the ramparts of Fort Negley, in the suburbs of Nashville.

During the first two weeks in December the regiment was engaged in strengthening the defenses of Nashville. On the 15th the regiment moved with the army upon the rebel forces of General Hood, and took part in the battle of Nashville, on the 15th and 16th of December, losing in killed and wounded. The regiment then joined in the pursuit of Hood until the 27th, when it halted at Columbia, Tennessee, and went into camp. Here the regiment remained until the 3d of January, 1865, when it marched to Clifton, and, embarking on a steamboat, sailed for Cincinnati, where it took the railroad cars and was rapidly carried to Washington City.

On the 18th of February the regiment embarked with its brigade on a steamship, at Alexandria, Virginia, and, after a pleasant passage, landed at Fort Anderson, on the banks of Cape Fear river, North Carolina, which post was occupied until the 1st of March. The command then re-embarked and sailed to Moorhead City, and from thence proceeded, by railroad, to Newbern, North Carolina.

From Newbern, the command, (consisting of the First Division, Twenty-Third Army Corps, and two provisional divisions,) marched on the 3d of March. Advancing slowly along the line of the railroad toward Raleigh, constructing rail and wagon roads as they moved, the advance encountered the enemy, under Bragg, at Wise's Forks, on the 7th, and skirmishing commenced. At ten o'clock the next day the enemy made a furious assault. The First Division moved rapidly to the front, and in a short time the regiment, with its brigade, was engaged in a severe battle. The rebel onset was very determined, but, being firmly met, the enemy was driven back, and retreated to his works, which were flanked by impassable swamps For two days and nights the fighting continued, the enemy assaulting the slight works our troops had erected, but being repeatedly repulsed. At noon of the 10th, Hoke's rebel division, the flower of Bragg's army, having made an extensive detour, suddenly appeared in three lines of battle on our left flank, advancing with the customary demoniac yell. The Second Brigade changed front, and in a short time formed a new line nearly a mile distant. Major Robbins was placed in command of the skirmish line of four companies, and advanced through a dense thicket, on double-quick, supported by the brigade. They had moved but a few rods when the enemy was met, also advancing. A withering volley was poured into his ranks, and our brigade rushed on with a cheer. The enemy recoiled, and our lines extending, overlapped those of the enemy, and poured in an enfilading fire, which completed his discomfiture.

After resting on the battle field two days the Twenty-Third corps moved on Kingston, which was evacuated by the enemy upon our approach. The movement was continued, and Goldsboro reached on the 21st of March. Here General Sherman's forces were met. The regiment was stationed at Lenoir Institute and employed in guarding the railroad. On the 9th of April the regiment marched for Goldsboro, and from thence moved with the army to Raleigh, arriving there on the 21st. On the 3d of May the regiment marched for Greenboro, arriving there on the 7th. The regiment moved by rail to Charlotte on the 15th, and went into camp with its division. The regiment remained at Charlotte, North Carolina, during the summer of 1865 and then moved to Raleigh. On the 25th of August, the regiment left Raleigh for Indianapolis, and reached that place on the 4th of September, with an aggregate of five hundred rank and file. On the 5th, the One Hundred and Twenty-Third, as the guests of the ladies of Indianapolis, partook of a sumptuous dinner at the Soldier's Home, and proceeding from thence to the State House greve, were welcomed with addresses from General Manfield, and Colonel Trusler. The regiment was mustered out of the service of the United States on the 25th of August, 1865, at Raleigh, North Carolina, and after its arrival and reception in Indianapolis, received final payment and discharge.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOURTH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Twenty-Fourth Regiment was formed by the consolidation of three companies raised for the One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth Regiment, (which was originally intended as an infantry organization,) in the Sixth Congressional District, and seven companies recruited from the Fifth Congressional District. The regiment rendezvoused at Richmond, and was mustered into service on the 10th of March, 1864, with James Burgess as Colonel. The regiment left Indianapolis by rail on the 19th, and arrived at Louisville the same day. From Louisville the regiment moved by rail to Nashville, reaching that place on the 24th. At Nashville the regiment was assigned to the division of General Hovey, consisting of six regiments from Indiana.

On the 5th of April the regiment left Nashville for the front, and marched by the way of Murfreesboro', Shelbyville, Tullahoma, Stevenson, Bridgeport, Chattanooga, Cleveland and Charleston, to Athens, Tennessee. Upon arriving at Athens, the left wing of the regiment was detached and sent to Columbus, Tennessee. For a short time the regiment remained at Athens. Early in May the regiment moved with its corps toward Red Clay, Georgia, and, on its march, was joined by its left wing at Columbus. The Twenty-Third Corps, to which the regiment was assigned, arrived in front of Buzzard's Roost on the 8th of May. A demonstration was made by General Schofield upon that formidable position, the regiment losing one killed and two wounded. A portion of Sherman's army having penetrated Snake Creek Gap, the regiment moved with its division through the Gap, and crossed the Oostanaula river near Tilton.

Our column then passed to the left of Resacca. On the 18th the regiment marched to Calhoun. The next day it moved to the right of Kingston, skirmishing along the railroad. On the 21st the regiment moved to the right, encountered the enemy, and brisk skirmishing ensued. The two subsequent days were also passed in feeling the enemy and pressing his retiring columns, the regiment reaching a point near Cassville, on the 24th, and bivouacking. The country was very rugged, mountainous and wooded, with but a few obscure roads.

On the 25th the regiment moved to the left of Cartersville, and, throwing up temporary works, remained three days. On the 29th the regiment crossed the Etowah river, and marched to Burnt Hickory, where it again constructed works. On the 1st of June the regiment moved by the way of Alatoona and Pumpkin Vine Creek, and, after sharp skirmishing, took position opposite to and near Lost Mountain. Temporary works were constructed, and, for two days, sharp fighting was had with the enemy. The skirmish line then moved close to the formidable works of the enemy, the regiment advancing in support under a heavy fire of artillery and musketry. The next morning at daylight the regiment moved upon the enemy's works and found them evacuated. The regiment then took position on the right of Kenesaw Mountain. During these operations the rain fell almost continuously, rendering the narrow roads mere mud gulleys, and making a general movement of the army impossible. The men, however, daily worked closer to the entrenched enemy, and kept up an incessant picket firing, greatly annoying him. On the 23d the regiment advanced close up to the enemy's works on Kenesaw Mountain, and skirmished with his sharpshooters. The picket firing and skirmishing continued until the morning of the 3d of July, when the rebel General Johnson, finding his left turned, and, being in danger of being cut off from Atlanta, suddenly abandoned his strong position on Kenesaw Mountain, and fell back to Smyrna Church.

On the 4th of July the regiment moved towards the Chattahoochee river, and, on the 8th, effected a crossing of that river, fifteen miles above the Atlanta railroad bridge, and at once built defensive works.

On the 9th Colonel Burgess resigned, and Lieutenant Colonel John M. Orr was promoted to the Coloneley. On the 15th the forward movement was continued, the regiment taking the road to the right of Decatur Before reaching that point the enemy was encountered, and brisk skirmishing ensued, resulting in the enemy being driven through Decatur, and the capture of that town. Until the 21st the usual skirmishing was carried on, obstinate resistance being encountered from the enemy. On the 21st the regiment reached a position where the hills and steeples of Atlanta were plainly in view.

On the 22d General Dodge's Sixteenth Corps was moving toward the left flank of the army in order to strengthen it, when the rebel army under Hood, made a sudden onslaught. Hardee's rebel corps penetrated a portion of our lines, and the battle raged furiously along the whole front. General Dodge received and held in check the rebel corps of Hardee, and finally repulsed him with great slaughter. The regiment moved with its division to the support of General Dodge, and aided materially in the repulse of the confident enemy.

The siege of Atlanta progressed vigorously. Digging and skirmishing were the labors of the day and night. Our men, always on the alert to accomplish a movement, found themselves opposed by a vigilant and untiring enemy. The crack of our rifles elicited answering replies. The smoke of our artillery brought forth shot and shell from the enemy's gunners. Thus, day followed day, until the 30th of August, when a new and bold movement developed, resulting in obtaining possession of the communications of Atlanta, and forcing its evacuation. The regiment marched with its division on this movement, crossed the Macon railroad near Rough and Ready, aided in destroying the railroad for several miles. Then moved in the direction of Lovejoy's, taking position on the left of Jonesboro', skirmishing and fortifying. The regiment then withdrew with its corps to Decatur, arriving there on the 8th of September. Here, in clean, pleasant camps, the men rested for a few weeks, proud of having aided in the capture of Atlanta.

The uneasy enemy did not let us rest long. The rebel General Hood, whose sole object seemed to be to have his army destroyed as soon as possible, moved north on the 1st of October, and struck our line of communications. On the 4th the regiment marched with its corps in pursuit. The column moved by the way of Marietta to Alatoona, and thence, through Cassville and Kingston, to Rome; and, crossing the Oostanaula river at that place on the 12th, a sharp skirmish was had with a portion of the enemy's forces, his main body having marched with great rapidity towards Resacca and Dalton. The column then headed for Calhoun and Resacca, but the rebel army had disappeared before our arrival. The pursuit was continued, through Snake Creek and White's Gaps to Summerville, and down the Chatooga Valley to Gaylesville, Alabama, where the pursuit was discontinued.

On the 23d of October the regiment moved with its division to Cedar Bluffs. On the 28th the march was taken up through Cave Springs, Rome, Calhoun, Resacca and Tilton, to Dalton, where the regiment embarked on railroad cars, and was transported to Nashville, arriving there on the 9th of November. The Twenty-Third Corps was now part of the command of General Thomas.

On the 10th the regiment moved by rail to Thompson's Station, and from thence marched to Pulaski, reaching that place on the 15th. The rebel army under Hood was now advancing toward Nashville, and General Schofield commenced falling back toward Columbia. On the 21st the regiment marched to Lynnville, and on the 23d arrived at Columbia. Temporary breastworks were constructed, and for two days the regiment was engaged in brisk skirmishing with the enemy. On the night of the 26th the regiment crossed to the north bank of the Duck river, and took position at Rutherford's creek. During this time the enemy's infantry was pressing General Schofield's line, and frequently threatened an assault.

Communications with our cavalry having been cut by the enemy, and the line of retreat towards Franklin being imperilled, General Schofield commenced falling back. The regiment, with its brigade, covered the roads by which our army was marching to Franklin. At Spring Hill the enemy's cavaly was encountered, and severe skirmishing ensued. After a brisk fight the regiment forced its way through, losing company "C," which was captured by the enemy. The regiment reached Franklin on the morning of the 30th, and immediately took position in line of battle on the southern edge of that town. Slight breastworks were hastily constructed. The enemy soon appeared in force, and made several attempts to carry the position by assault. His successive attacks were met and most decisively repulsed. During the night the regiment fell back with the army to Nashville, and took position to the right of Fort Negley, where it was employed in erecting defenses until the 15th of December.

On the 15th of December the army of General Thomas advanced from its fortifications around Nashville, upon the rebel army of General Hood, and, after two day's severe fighting, inflicted a ruinous defeat upon the rebel foe. The regiment took part in this battle, and joined in the pursuit of Hood's demoralized army. Marching down the Granny White Pike, the regiment reached Franklin on the 18th, crossed the Harpeth river the next day; then marched to Spring Hill, and, crossing the Duck river, arrived at Columbia. The remnants of the rebel army having escaped across the Tennessee river at Bainbridge, the pursuit was discontinued.

On the 3d of January, 1865, the regiment left Columbia, and marched by the way of Mount Pleasant to Clifton, where it embarked on transports and proceeded to Cincinnati; thence, by rail, it was carried to Washington City, arriving there on the 30th. Again embarking on transports, the regiment sailed to Morehead City, North Carolina, and landed at that place on the 27th of February. The next day the regiment reached Newbern.

On the 6th of March the regiment marched with General Scofield's column along the railroad toward Kingston. Upon reaching Wise's Forks the enemy was encountered in a strong position in force. Heavy skirmishing was kept up during the first day. On the 9th, the enemy, being largely reinforced, made an assault upon our left and center, and, after a severe battle, was repulsed and retreated in much confusion. The regiment took an active part in this battle. On the 15th the regiment crossed the Neuse river and marched to Kingston. Thence to Goldsboro', reaching there on the 21st, where the junction was formed with the victorious columns of Sherman, who had marched from Atlanta to the sea, and from the sea through the strongholds of the rebel hiding places, halting in the "Old North State" only long enough to greet their old comrades of the Twenty-Third Corps, and press forward to final victory.

For a short time the regiment was stationed at Lenoir Institute. On the 3d of May the regiment marched to Greensboro', reaching there on the 7th. After remaining a few days at Greensboro', the regiment proceeded to Charlotte, and went into camp. On the 13th of July the regiment left Charlotte and returned to Greensboro', and on the 31st of August, 1865, the regiment was mustered out of the service of the United States at that place. Leaving for home, it arrived at Indianapolis on the 10th of September, with five hundred and thirty-two men and thirty-three officers, under command of Colonel John M. Orr. The regiment was present at a reception given to returned soldiers in the State House Grove, and was addressed by General Mansfield and others. The regiment then received final payment and discharge, and with quiet satisfaction, at having done their whole duty, the members of the regiment returned to their homes.

TENTH CAVALRY (125th) REGIMENT.

The Tenth Cavalry—One Hundred and Twenty-Fifth Regiment—was recruited during the fall and winter of 1863, its first camp of rendezvous being at Vincennes, and the next at Columbus—the companies composing the regiment being from the First and Third Congressional Districts. On the 2d of February, 1863, the regiment was organized, with Thomas N. Pace as Colonel, but remained in the State until the 3d of May, when it moved (dismounted and armed as infantry) to Nashville, and thence to Pulaski, Tennessee. During the progress of the Atlanta campain the regiment was stationed at Pulaski, Tennessee, and Decatur, Alabama, and was engaged in guarding the Northern Alabama Railroad, it being one of the roads over which supplies were transported to Sherman's army. During that time it had several skirmishes with the forces under Roddy, Wheeler and Forrest.

On the 28th of September, the Tenth Cavalry fought the battle of Pulaski, with Forrest, losing one commissioned officer killed and two wounded, and seven men killed and forty woundad. The detachment stationed at Decatur, under Major Williamson, fought Hood's forces four days, commencing on the 26th of October. The loss to the detachment, in this engagement, was four killed and eight wounded. A portion of the regiment, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Gresham, fell back on Nashville, and was engaged in the battles of Nashville, Little Harpeth, Reynold's Hill, and Sugar Creek, losing three field officers wounded, including the commanding officer, and eight men killed, forty wounded, and seventy-five captured. On the other hand the regiment, in these several engagements, captured from the enemy four stands of colors and three hundred men and officers, with their arms. In December, 1864, and January, 1865, the detachment under Major Williamson, at Decatur, after Hood had retreated across the river, participated in the battles of Flint River, Indian Creek, Courtland, and Mount Hope. It also succeeded in capturing ten pieces of artillery, and one hundred and fifty officers and men, and a supply train consisting of one hundred and fifty wagons and five hundred mules. This ended the campaign for the winter.

In February the detachments were again brought together, and the regiment, under command of Major Swallow, proceeded, on steamers, down the Tennessee, Ohio, and Mississippi, to New Orleans, and thence to Mobile Bay. After landing, it participated in the reduction of Spanish Fort and Fort Blakely, which resulted in the surrender of Mobile. After the occupation of that city, the Tenth Cavalry proceeded on an expedition northward to Eufaula and Montgomery, Alabama. After this it marched to Columbus, Mississippi, and from thence moved across the State to Vicksburg, reaching that city early in July. From that time until its muster-out of service, the regiment was engaged in garrisoning and patroling the counties of Holmes and Attalla, in Mississippi. On the 28th of April, 1865, the regiment lost Captain Gaffney, Lieutenants Twigg and Reeves, and thirty-five men, by the explosion of the ill-fated steamer Sultana. These officers and men had been paroled at Vicksburg, and were on their way home. The regiment, also, lost five men killed and seventy wounded by railroad collision on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, while being transported in May, 1864.

On the 31st of August, 1865, the Tenth Cavalry was mustered out of service at Vicksburg, Mississippi. On the 5th of September it arrived at Indianapolis with twenty-eight officers and five hundred and nineteen men, for final payment and discharge. On the following day, after partaking of a dinner prepared for them at the Soldiers' Home, the officers and soldiers of the command marched to the State grounds, where they were publicly welcomed home in addresses delivered by General John L. Mansfield and Hon. John H. Farquhar. The next day the regiment was finally discharged from service.

ELEVENTH CAVALRY (126th) REGIMENT.

The Eleventh Cavalry—One Hundred and Twenty-Sixth Regiment of Indiana Volunteers—was recruited under the call of September 14th, 1863, the several companies being raised and organized during the fall and winter of 1863. On the 1st of March, 1864, the regimental organization was perfected at Indianapolis, and the command given to ROBERT R. STEWART, who was taken from the Second Cavalry, in which organization he held the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and promoted Colonel of the Eleventh Cavalry. On the 1st of May the regiment left the general camp of rendezvous at Indianapolis, and moved thence, by rail, to Nashville, Tennessee, but a small portion of the regiment being mounted. Arriving there on the 7th of May, it went into camp of instruction, and remained therein until the 1st of June. It then marched into Northern Alabama, and was placed on duty along the line of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, with headquarters at Larkinsville, Alabama. The regiment was kept on this duty until the 16th of October, when it marched back to Nashville, where it was mounted and sent to the front.

In the campaign in front of Nashville, in November and December, the Eleventh Cavalry was actively engaged, and, after the defeat of Hood's forces, joined in the pursuit, going as far as Gravelly Springs, Alabama, arriving there on the 7th of January, 1865. It was then dismounted and placed on duty in that vicinity until the 7th of February, when it crossed the Tennessee river to Eastport, Mississippi, and there remained until the 12th of May.

In obedience to orders to report to Major General Dodge at St. Louis, the regiment then embarked on steamers and proceeded to that city, arriving there on the 17th. After being re-mounted it marched to Rolla, Missouri, arriving there on the 26th of June and reporting to Colonel Morell, commanding that District. From Rolla the regiment moved to Fort Riley, Kansas, arriving there on the 8th of July. From there it moved to Council Grove, Kansas, and was stationed along the Santa Fe route across the plains, with headquarters at Cottonwood Crossing. The Eleventh Cavalry was continued on this duty until the 1st of September, when it was ordered to march to Fort Leavenworth, where it arrived on the 11th. On the 19th of September, 1865, the regiment was mustered out at that place in compliance with telegram orders received from the General Commanding the Department of Missouri.

On the 26th of September, the regiment reached Indianapolis with thirty officers and five hundred and seventy-nine men, under command of Colonel Abram Sharra, for final discharge and payment. On the 28th of September, after partaking of a sumptuous dinner at the Soldier's Home, the Eleventh Cavalry marched to the State House, where it was publicly welcomed by speeches from General Mansfield, Colonel Stewart and Surgeon Read, to which responses were made by Colonel Sharra, Majors Crowder and Showalter, and Chaplain Barnhart After the reception the regiment was marched out to Camp Carrington, where the men and officers were paid and discharged from the service of the United States.

TWELFTH CAVALRY (127th) REGIMENT.

The Twelfth Cavalry—One Hundred and Twenty-Seventh Regiment—was organized at Kendallville, Indiana, in the Tenth Congressional District, on the 1st of March, 1864, eight companies of which were recruited by Colonel Edward Anderson in the Ninth Congressional District, in the fall and winter of 1863, and were rendezvoused at Michigan City; and four companies were recruited in the Tenth Congressional District, in the fall and winter of 1863, and were rendezvoused at Kendallville; subsequently the companies which were at Michigan City, were removed to Kendallville, for the purpose of completing the regimental organization, and Colon Edward Anderson was made Colonel of the regiment. Early in May, 1864, it left camp at Kendallville, and proceeded to Indianapolis, and, on the 6th of the same month, the regiment left Indianapolis for the field, under orders to proceed to Nashville, Tennessee. But six companies of the regiment were mounted, and all of the companies were armed as infantry, for want of cavalry arms, until the regiment arrived at Louisville, where the infantry arms were turned over by the six mounted companies, and cavalry arms were issued instead. The mounted portion of the regiment, also the mounted portion of the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry Regiments, marched from Louisville to Nashville, under the command of Colonel Anderson, while the dismounted portion of the regiment proceeded to Nashville by rail, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Alfred Reed.

The regiment remained at Nashville in camp of instruction for about three weeks, when it was ordered to Huntsville, Alabama, for which place it started on the 29th of May, the dismounted portion proceeding thence by rail, under command of Colonel Anderson, and the mounted portion marching from Nashville under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Reed. Colonel Anderson was assigned to the command of the railroad defenses from Decatur, Alabama, to Paint Rock, Alabama, a distance of about sixty miles, and to the command of all that district of country lying between Huntsville and Paint Rock, and between the Tennessee river and the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, that portion of the country being, at the time, infested with several bands of guerrillas and "bushwhackers."

The dismounted companies were assigned to the especial defense of the railroad, and to the erection of block-houses, under the command of Major Orris Blake, and the six mounted companies (which were the only mounted cavalry then at or near Huntsville,) under command of Colonel Anderson, were employed very actively in fighting and ridding the country of guerrillas and "bushwhackers," in which numerous skirmishes and engagements were fought, and quite a large number of the regiment were killed and wounded.

For about a month after the arrival of the regiment at Huntsville, the headquarters of the regiment were at that place, when they were removed to Brownsborough, where they remained until the 15th of September, 1864, when the regiment was ordered to Tullahoma, Tennessee, to garrison that post, where it arrived on the night of the same day, and reported to Major General Milroy. Colonel Anderson was assigned to the command of the post, and also retained command of the regiment. On the 23d of September, Colonel Anderson was relieved by orders from the Secretary of War, and was ordered to Indianapolis to report to Governor Morton for special service, soon after which, he joined his command in the field. In the absence of Colonel Anderson, Major Blake was assigned to the command of the post of Tullahoma and of the regiment, during which time the regiment was constantly employed in watching the movements of the rebel General Forrest, who, with a large force, was then threatening Tullahoma and several other points along the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad In the meantime the regiment had several skirmishes with a part of Forrest's command, and with bands of guerrillas. In the month of October, 1864, Major Blake was ordered by the Secretary of War to report for duty to the Acting Assistant Provost Marshal General at Indianapolis as assistant.

Three mounted companies, viz: "C," "D," and "H," stationed at Huntsville, under the command of Captain Major D. Williams, of Company "C" participated in the defense of that place, with the Thirteenth Cavalry, on the 1st of October, 1864, against the attack of a portion of the rebel Forrest's command. These companies subsequently joined the regiment at Tullahoma, and, on the 26th of November, upon the evacuation of that post, the regiment proceeded to Murfreesboro, Tenn., and participated in the battle of Wilkinson's Pike and Overall's Creek, and was employed in the several skirmishes in the defense of Murfreesboro against the command of Forrest, in December, 1864, Lieutenant Colonel Reed commanding the regiment, and Colonel Anderson commanding the brigade to which the regiment was attached. Soon after which the regiment proceeded to Nashville and went into winter quarters, and there received new arms, and was assigned to the Second Brigade, Seventh Division, Cavalry Corps.

On the 11th of February, 1865 the regiment embarked on board transports and steamers, under orders to proceed to New Orleans, Louisiana, which orders were subsequently countermanded, and the regiment disembarked at Vicksburg, Mississippi, by order of Major General Canby, to engage in a raid along the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. These orders were subsequently countermanded and the regiment was newly mounted, arms changed, and embarked again for New Orleans, where it arrived on the 12th of March, 1865, whence it proceeded to Navy Cove, Mobile Bay, reported to Major General Canby, and participated in the operations against the forts and defenses of Mobile, Alabama, a portion of the regiment acting as escort to Major General Canby, and the balance engaged, also, in running a courier line into Florida, from near Fort Blakely, Alabama.

After the fall of Mobile, the regiment reported, on the 17th of April, to Major General Grierson, and under the command of Major Wm. H. Calkins, participated in the raid of over eight hundred miles through Alabama, into Georgia, and then across the State of Alabama, to Columbus, Mississippi, where it arrived on the 20th day of May, 1865. The regiment was highly and specially complimented by Major General Grierson, in a letter to Governor Morton, for its gallant conduct and military discipline. Here the regiment remained under the command of Major Blake, until about the middle of July, when Colonel Anderson rejoined his command after a temporary absence, and proceeded with a portion of the regiment to Grenada, Mississippi, establishing the headquarters of the regiment there. Three companies, viz: "D," "K" and "L," proceeded to Austin, on the Mississippi River, in command of Captain D. M. Graves, where they remained about two months, employed in protecting Government cotton and other property, and again reported for duty to Colonel Anderson, at Grenada, where that portion of the regiment remained until orders were received for muster out.

The remaining six companies remained at Columbus, Mississippi, and vicinity, engaged in protecting Government cotton &c., under the command of Major Blake, until they were ordered to proceed to Vicksburg, Mississippi, to join the balance of the regiment which had preceeded them. These companies arrived on the 2d day of November, and on the 10th of November, 1865, the regiment was mustered out of the service at Vicksburg, and ordered to proceed to Indianapolis, where it arrived on the 16th of November, and on the next day was honored with a public dinner by the citizens of the city, and was welcomed home by a public reception at the State House grove, where addresses were delivered by Governor Baker and Colonel Trussler, Secretary of State, and were responded to by Colonel Anderson, Lieutenant Colonel Reed, Major Calkins and Major Blake. The regiment was finally paid off, and its members received their discharges on the 22d of November, 1865.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth Regiment was recruited from the Ninth Congressional District, during the fall and winter of 1863, rendezvoused at Michigan City, and was mustered into service on the 18th of March, 1864, with Richard P. De Hart as Colonel and Jasper Packard as Lieutenant Colonel. On the 23d the regiment left Michigan City by rail, and proceeded, by the way of Indianapolis and Louisville, to Nashville, where the division commanded by General Hovey was organized, and the regiment assigned to the 1st brigade. On the 6th of April the regiment started on a march for the front, and, moving by the way of Stevenson, Bridgeport and Chattanooga—through a section of country famed for the beauty of its mountain scenery, where the hills kiss the clouds, and the silver streams laugh in the sunshine—reached Charleston, East Tennessee, on the 21st. General Hovey's division was then designated as the First Division, and assigned to the Twenty-Third Army Corps, under command of General Schofield.

On the 4th of May the regiment marched with its corps from Charleston, and entered immediately on the campaign against Atlanta. Sherman's moving columns were concentrating in the vicinity of Chattanooga, preparatory to moving with determined vigor upon the forces of the rebel General Johnson, who, apparently secure behind the inaccessible ridges of Rocky Face, challenged our advance through the dangerous defile of Buzzard's Roost Gap, leading to Dalton. But Sherman decided to take another route, and not expose his men to certain destruction from the fire of plunging shot, or the deep waters of the creek by which the enemy flooded the Pass. The Pass was unapproachable, and the "Great Flanker" turned to the left—and left the enemy in position.

On the 9th of May General Schofield moved with his corps close to Dalton, while General Thomas demonstrated with vigor against Rocky Face Ridge. Meanwhile McPherson reached Snake Creek Gap, surprised a force of the enemy, and held the Gap. On the 12th the whole army, save one corps, moved through the Gap on Resacca. The battle of Resacca resulted. Thus, constantly moving, threatening, flanking and fighting, the approaches to Atlanta were won—the One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth taking part in the principal movements, culminating in such battles as Resacca, Dallas, New Hope Church, Lost Mountain, Kenesaw Mountain, Atlanta and Jonesboro.

From the 8th of May until the 5th of September, under the broiling sun by day and the pestilential dews by night—through difficult ravines; skirmishing in dense forests; drenched by heavy rains; struggling through mud and mire—our troops pressed on. Some portion of the regiment was on the skirmish line nearly every day for four months.

On the 9th of June General Hovey retired from the command of the First Division, and the First Brigade was assigned to the Third Division (Cox's) of the same corps. On the 6th of June, Colonel De Hart having been disabled by wounds, Lieutenant Colonel Packard assumed command of the regiment. On the 9th of August the First Brigade was re-organized, and the One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth assigned to the Third Brigade of the same division, the brigade being under command of Colonel I. N. Stiles, of the Sixty-Third Indiana. After the fall of Atlanta the regiment marched from Jonesboro to Decatur, Georgia, where it went into camp with the rest of the corps.

On the 1st of October the rebel General Hood crossed the Chattahoochee river with his army, and marched north, by the way of Dallas. Sherman's army, with the exception of the Twentieth Corps, moved in pursuit. The regiment left Decatur with its corps, on the 4th, and, crossing the Chattahoochee, moved toward Dallas, threatening the flank and rear of the enemy's forces then assaulting Alatoona. The rebels being defeated at Alatoona, moved rapidly to the northwest, striking the railway at Resacca, on the 12th, and capturing Tilton and Dalton. The army of Sherman meanwhile made a march to Rome, where the Twenty-Third Corps crossed the Oostaunaula and drove a brigade of the enemy through the narrow entrance of the valley of the Chattooga, capturing two guns. Then learning that the enemy had moved for Resacca, the pursuit was continued through Resacca, Snake Creek Gap, Villanow, Dirt Town and Gover's Gap, to Gaylesville, Alabama, which place was reached on the 20th. The regiment marched, in this pursuit, over three hundred miles.

On the 30th of October, the Twenty-Third Corps was detached from Sherman's army, and ordered to proceed to Chattanooga and report to General Thomas. The regiment marched with its corps to Chattanooga, and was moved from thence by rail to Pulaski and Nashville. So soon as it was ascertained that Hood was moving to invade Tennessee, the regiment moved with its corps to Columbia. On the 24th of November, the skirmishers of the One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth encountered the advance of the enemy. For six days severe skirmishing was had with the enemy's line at Columbia, one-half of the regiment being alternately on the skirmish line. The enemy's line pressed our line strongly, but did not assault. Meantime General Schofield made preparations to fall back to Franklin. During the night of the 29th, the regiment marched twenty-six miles, and reached Franklin at daybreak of the 30th. The enemy followed closely, and repeatedly assaulted our line at Franklin as soon as we had formed, but General Schofield had chosen an excellent position, and repulsed the rebel onslaught with decisive results. The regiment lost several officers and men in this battle, which was fought with great fury and obstinacy, the enemy continuing his assaults until late on the night of the 30th. The battle of Franklin was the first severe check of Hood's invasion of Tennessee.

The regiment fell back the night after the battle to Brentwood Hills, and the next morning marched to Nashville and took position in its defenses. For two weeks the army of General Thomas faced the rebel force of General Hood, who occupied the southern approaches to Nashville.

On the 15th of December, General Thomas' army moved upon the enemy in his chosen position, and, after two days' fighting, utterly defeated the boastful foe, and drove his demoralized command beyond the waters of the Tennessee. This battle closed the existence of Hood's army. From that time it ceased to exist as an organized body. The regiment was actively engaged in the closing up of Hood, and joined in the pursuit as far as Columbia, Tennessee, arriving at that place on the 26th. Here the command rested for a short time preparatory to another campaign which was to strangle the last army of the rebellion.

On the 5th of January, 1865, the regiment left Columbia and marched by the way of Mount Pleasant and Waynesboro, to Clifton, on the Tennessee River, where it embarked on transports and sailed to Cincinnati, Ohio. From thence the regiment moved by rail to Washington City, and thence to Alexandria, Virginia. On the 20th of February, the regiment embarked on the steamer Atlantic, and sailed to Fort Fisher, North Carolina, and from thence, without landing, sailed to Morehead City, North Carolina, where the regiment disembarked and was conveyed by rail to Newbern.

Early in March the regiment set out with its division, and marched along the Atlantic and North Carolina railroad in the direction of Kingston, repairing the railroad as the column moved. On the 8th of March, the enemy was encountered in force at Wise's Fork, four miles below Kingston. The enemy had met with success in capturing two regiments of Eastern troops by surprise, and was pushing on, confident of easy victory, when he was met and checked by Rugers' division just arriving on the field. For two days heavy skirmishing resulted, and on the 10th, the enemy made a heavy assault, but was repulsed and fled in great disorder from the field. The regiment took an active part in this fight, losing severely in killed and wounded. The whole command then moved to Kingston, which was occupied without resistance from the enemy.

On the 20th the regiment left Kingston, and after a march of thirty miles, reach Goldsboro, on the evening of the next day. On the 25th it left Goldsboro and marched to Le Noir Institute, where the regiment was employed in protecting the railroad until the 9th of April. The regiment then returned to Goldsboro, and was assigned to duty in that city. The regiment was yet stationed at Raleigh, North Carolina, in January, 1866, at the time this sketch was written. The regiment was commanded by Colonel DeHart until the 6th of June, 1864, when being wounded, Lieutenant Colonel Jasper Packard assumed command and has led the regiment ever since. On the 29th of April, 1865, Colonel DeHart being mustered out by order of War Department, Lieutenant Colonel Jasper Packard was promoted to the Colonelcy. Subsequently Colonel Packard was promoted to the rank of Brevet Brigadier General of Volunteers, by the President, to date March 13, 1865.

	JAMES ROBERTS	Clinton	April 22, 1865		Mustered out as 1st Sergeant with Regiment.

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-NINTH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Twenty-Ninth Regiment was recruited from the Tenth Congressional District during the winter of 1863 and 1864, rendezvoused at Michigan City, and was mustered into service on the 1st of March, 1864, with Charles Case as Colonel, and Charles A. Zollinger as Lieutenant Colonel.

On the 30th of March, the regiment left its camp at Michigan City, and was conveyed by rail via Louisville to Nashville, where it arrived on the 7th of April. Lieutenant Colonel Zollinger was in command of the regiment. Upon its arrival at Nashville the regiment was assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, Twenty-Third Army Corps.

On the 5th of April, the regiment took up its line of march for Loudon, East Tennessee, but, before reaching that point, its orders were changed, and the regiment marched for Charleston, East Tennessee, arriving there on the 24th. Thus was accomplished a march of two hundred miles by a regiment fresh from the hamlets and towns of Indiana. As the column wound through the fertile valleys and over the rugged mountains that characterize the country through which it passed, the men were enthusiastic in their admiration of the natural beauty of the country. There was but a little time for rest, however, for, so soon as the first division had joined its corps at Charleston, orders came to move on a campaign that was to strike a formidable blow at the rebel strongholds guarding Atlanta.

On the 3d of May, the regiment moved with its corps towards Dalton, reaching there in time to participate in the initiatory demonstration that opened the campaign against Atlanta. On the 12th, the regiment marched through Snake Creek Gap, and, breaking through a dense forest, took position near Resacca. On the 15th, a heavy battle ensued at Resacca, the enemy being defeated and driven across the Oostanaula river. The regiment joined in the pursuit, moving over blind roads on the left, and, crossing the Oostanaula river above Resacca, found the enemy strongly entrenched near Cassville. On the 20th, the rebel army fled across the Etowah river. The regiment reached the banks of the Etowah, and encamped for two days, waiting for supplies. On the 25th, the regiment crossed the Etowah river, and moved upon the enemy's position at New Hope Church. Before reaching there, however, the enemy, after a severe engagement with a portion of our army, had fallen back to Lost Mountain. The regiment, for several weeks afterwards, was almost constantly skirmishing with the enemy, pushing through deep defiles and heavy underbrush. During this period the rain fell almost continuously, rendering the roads almost impassable. On the 15th of June, Lieutenant Colonel Zollinger was promoted Colonel, having had active command of the regiment ever since its departure for the field. Colonel Case resigned early in June.

On the 19th of July, the regiment was engaged in a severe fight near Decatur, Georgia, losing very heavily in killed and wounded. Sherman's army was now closing around Atlanta, and brisk skirmishing met our advance in every new movement. On the 5th of August, a brigade of Schofield's corps tried to break through the enemy's line about a mile below Utoy creek, but failed to carry the position. The next day General Hascall, commanding the division to which the regiment was attached, attacked and turned the position, resulting in the engagement at Strawberry Run, in which the regiment lost twenty-five in killed and wounded.

On the 29th of August, the regiment marched with its corps round East Point, and came into position near Rough and Ready, on the railroad, which was at once destroyed. Other portions of Sherman's army were doing similar work, and, on the 1st of September, it was ascertained that the enemy had abandoned Atlanta. The regiment then marched with its corps to Decatur, and went into camp. Thus, after four months' campaign, our army gained possession of the mountain regions of the center of the rebel dominion, and the Atlantic and Gulf slopes were open to the movements of our veterans.

On the 4th of October the regiment moved with its corps in pursuit of Hood, who had cut Sherman's communications at Big Shanty, and was demonstrating on the garrisons guarding our supplies along the railroad that formed our only line of supply. Moving by the way of Marietta, Alatoona, Cassville, Kingston, Rome, Resacca, and Snake Creek Gap, the regiment arrived at Gaylesville, Alabama, where further pursuit of Hood's flying columns ceased. The Twenty-Third Corps was then detached to the command of General Thomas, and the regiment marched with its corps to Chattanooga, and from thence was transported by rail to Nashville and Johnsonville where it remained until the 20th of November. The regiment then moved to Columbia, and occupied the crossings of Duck River. For three days the enemy pressed our position at Columbia, and heavy skirmishing was carried on. On the 29th the regiment fell back across the Duck River, burning the railroad bridge in its rear. The enemy's column having passed our flank, the regiment marched rapidly with its corps to Franklin. The enemy followed closely, and, on the 30th, assaulted our position at Franklin. Our ground was well chosen, and, after several severe assaults, the enemy was decisively repulsed with great loss. The regiment met with heavy loss in killed and wounded at the battle of Franklin, Our army fell back during the night to Nashville, and the regiment took position in the suburbs of that city, and threw up defensive works.

On the 15th of December the regiment moved from Nashville, and advancing with General Thomas's army on the fortified position of the rebel army of General Hood, participated in the two days' battle which resulted in the utter rout of the enemy, and his disastrous retreat across the Tennessee river. The regiment joined in the pursuit until it was discontinued.

On the 5th of January, 1865, the regiment marched with its division to Clifton, and embarking in transports, sailed to Cincinnati. Thence it was conveyed by railroad to Washington City, and from thence by steamer to Cape Fear inlet. Fort Fisher being already captured and Wimington secured by General Schofield, the regiment, without landing, sailed by sea to Morehead City, to reinforce the column about to move from Newbern. The regiment landed at Morehead City, and proceeded by rail to Newbern.

On the 6th of March the regiment moved with the main column from Newbern, and marched along the railroad in the direction of Kingston, repairing the railroad as it advanced. On the 8th the enemy encountered our advance, and captured two regiments of Connecticut volunteers. Flushed with success his columns rapidly advanced, and endeavored to check our further progress; but he was met and checked by Ruger's division of the Twenty-Third Corps, to which the regiment was attached. Very heavy skirmishing at once ensued, the enemy making bold attempts to drive our line from position. On the 10th, the enemy being largely reinforced, the heavy skirmishing culminated in a battle. The enemy made several desperate assaults, all of which were met and repulsed, with great loss to the enemy, and during the following night the enemy fled in great disorder leaving his killed and wounded. Thus ended the engagement at Wise's Forks, in which the regiment took an active part, losing very heavily. Our way was now open to Kingston, and the regiment pushed on with the main column to Kington, and from thence to Goldsboro', reaching there on the 21st. From Goldsboro' the regiment moved to Mosley Hall, where it remained until the 5th of April. It then moved to Goldsboro,' rejoined its corps, and marched to Raleigh. From Raleigh the regiment moved to Charlotte, reaching there on the 9th of May. Here the regiment was engaged in provost duty during the summer of 1865. On the 29th of August, 1865, the regiment was mustered out of the service of the United States at Charlotte, North Carolina, and started for home. The regiment reached Indianapolis early in September, with five hundred and three officers and men, was present at a reception to returned soldiers in the State House Grove, and welcomed by addresses from General Mansfield and others. The regiment soon received final payment and discharge, and its members returned to the peaceful vocations of life.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTIETH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Thirtieth Regiment was recruited from the Eleventh Congressional District during the winter of 1863 and 1864, rendezvoused at Kokomo, and was mustered into service on the 12th of March, 1864, with Charles S. Parrish as Colonel. The regiment left its camp at Kokomo on the 16th, and, moving by rail by the way of Indianapolis and Louisville, arrived at Nashville, where it was assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, Twenty-Third Army Corps. On the 5th of April the regiment left Nashville, and took up its line of march for Charleston, East Tennessee, passing through Murfreesboro, Shelbyville, Tullahoma, Stevenson, Chattanooga and Cleveland, and arriving at Charleston on the 24th. On the 3d of May the regiment broke camp, and took up its line of march for the front, passing through Cleveland, Tennessee and Red Clay, Georgia, and on the 9th first came into the presence of the enemy at Rocky Face Ridge. The regiment was in front of a conical peak, surmounted by heavy guns, and surrounded by formidable works at its base. This elevation was known by the name of "Tater Hill." The regiment was engaged in support of a detachment, which advancing on this position of the enemy, drove him into his works. From that time until the 15th of May there was a continual series of skirmishes, terminating in the decisive battle of Resaca, during which the regiment received and repelled a charge of the enemy. After the battle the regiment joined in the pursuit, and crossed the Etowah river on the 24th. Skirmishing was almost constant, as day followed day. The rain fell in torrents, and the men were destitute of shelter, and for a long time short of rations. On the 17th of June the regiment was engaged with the enemy at Lost Mountain. On the 22d an engagement took place at Pine Mountain, during which the rebels were repulsed. On the 27th the regiment was engaged upon the left of Kenesaw Mountain, and the rebels driven into their works. The advanced position obtained by the regiment in this bold movement was held for several days. Upon being relieved the regiment moved with its division in pursuit of the enemy, who had fallen back to the Chattahoochee river. On the 11th of July the regiment crossed the Chattahoochee river, and fortified a strong position on its banks. On the 17th the regiment advanced toward Decatur, and, encountering the enemy, drove him through Decatur, and assisted in destroying the railroad.

The siege of Atlanta was now vigorously pressed. The regiment was constantly under fire. On the 6th of August, the regiment moved with its brigade upon a rebel battery, which was annoying our flank. The column moved through a dense woods, and, emerging into an open field, came in full view of the rebel guns, strongly supported by infantry, on the opposite side of the field. A charge was at once made, the enemy driven from his position, and a few prisoners captured. On the 29th of August, the regiment moved with Sherman's army on its flank movement around Atlanta, and was engaged in the battle of Jonesboro'. From thence it moved to Lovejoy's station, and, returning with its corps, went into camp at Decatur.

On the 4th of October, the rebel General Hood moved north, in feeble imitation of General Sherman's flank movement. The regiment marched with its corps in pursuit, and having followed his devious course as far as Gaylesville, Alabama, halted for a short time, while Hood, bent upon certain destruction, pushed on North.

On the 30th of October the Twenty-Third was assigned to the command of General Thomas at Nashville, and the regiment marched with its corps to Chattanooga, and was conveyed by rail from that place to Columbia; thence it marched to Centreville, where the regiment was engaged in watching the fords of Duck river, threatened by the advance of Hood's army. On the 30th of November it was ascertained that the enemy had passed the left flank of our army, and was moving on Franklin. The regiment then abandoned its position at Centreville, and marching in the rear of Hood's army, by a rapid movement, reached Clarksville on the Tennessee river, and from thence moved to Nashville, where it took position with its brigade in the fortifications.

On the 15th of December the regiment moved with the army of General Thomas, and took part in the two days' battle in front of Nashville, which resulted in the extinction of Hood's army. Joining in the pursuit, it pushed on rapidly, through mud and rain, until the 27th, when further pursuit ceased, and the regiment went into camp at Columbia.

On the 5th of January, 1865, the regiment marched from Columbia for Clifton, and upon reaching that place embarked on transports, sailed to Cincinnati, and from thence was transported by rail to Washington City. Embarking on a steamboat at Alexandria, the regiment sailed to Fort Fisher, North Carolina, and disembarked. From Fort Fisher the regiment moved to Fort Anderson. On the 1st of March the regiment embarked and sailed to Morehead

City, and from thence went by rail to Newbern, North Carolina. On the 6th of March the regiment marched with its brigade from Newbern, and proceeded along the line of the railroad. On the 8th the enemy were encountered in force at Wise's Forks, about four miles from Kingston. Sharp skirmishing ensued for two days, resulting in a severe battle, the enemy being repulsed, and abandoning the field in great confusion. The regiment was actively engaged in this battle, and moved, immediately after its close, to Kingston, which was occupied without resistance from the enemy.

General Schofield at once put a large number of troops at work upon the railway, rebuilt the wagon bridge over the Neuse river, and brought forward supplies, preparatory to making another movement. On the morning of the 20th of March the regiment left Kingston with its division and entered Goldsboro, with but slight opposition, on the ensuing day. Thus a junction was formed with the main army under General Sherman, and our forces having free communication with the sea, both by river and railway, one great object of the campaign was accomplished.

Sherman's army rested a short time at Goldsboro', preparatory to opening a new campaign. Meantime General Sherman turned over the command of his army to General Schofield, and left for City Point, Virginia, for the purpose of having an interview with Lieutenant General Grant, and arranging the manner of co-operation for the coming campaign. General Sherman, having received his instructions, returned and reached Goldsboro' on the 30th of March. Soon afterwards orders were issued for the guidance of the army.

On the 10th of April, at daybreak, the heads of columns of General Sherman's army were marching for Smithfield toward the enemy. A few miles from Goldsboro' the rebel cavalry were encountered behind rail barricades, but the columns, pressing on, swept the rebel skirmishers before them, and entered Smithfield on the 11th. Here the news was received of the surrender of Lee's rebel army at Appomattox Court House, Virginia, which was hailed with glad shouts by the soldiers. General Sherman at once gave orders to drop all trains, and the army marched rapidly in pursuit of the enemy to and through Raleigh, arriving at that place on the 14th of April in a heavy rain. The rebel army was retreating rapidly toward Greensboro', and Sherman prepared to follow, when a communication from the rebel General Johnson arrested hostile movements.

From Raleigh the regiment moved to Greensboro', and from thence to Charlotte, North Carolina, where it went into camp with its division. During the summer and fall of 1865, the regiment was employed in guard duty at Charlotte. On the 2d of December, 1865, the regiment was mustered out of service at Charlotte, and started for home, arriving at Indianapolis on the 13th, with twenty-seven officers and five hundred and forty men. Upon its arrival it was greeted with a public reception in the State House grove, and, its members receiving final payment and discharge, left for home. Colonel Charles S. Parrish, who had commanded the regiment during its entire term of service, was promoted by the President to Brevet Brigadier General, to date from March 13, 1865.

THIRTEENTH CAVALRY (131st) REGIMENT.

The Thirteenth Cavalry, One Hundred and Thirty-First Regiment, was the last cavalry organization raised in the State. Recruiting for the companies composing the regiment was commenced in September, 1863, and continued during the fall and winter of that year. On the 29th of April, 1864, the organization of the regiment was completed, by its muster into service, with GILBERT M. L. JOHNSON as Colonel. On the 30th of the same month it left Indianapolis, dismounted and with infantry arms and accoutrements, for Nashville, Tennessee. The regiment remained in camp of instruction at that place until the 31st of May, when it was ordered to Huntsville, Alabama, for the purpose of garrisoning that post. During the stay of the command at that place, it was engaged in several skirmishes with prowling bands of rebel cavalry, and on the 1st of October, held the place against the entire command of the rebel General Buford.

On the 16th of October, companies "A," "C," "D," "F," "H," and "I," under command of Colonel Johnson, proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, for the purpose of drawing horses and equipments for the entire command. Upon their arrival there, the companies were ordered to Paducah, under command of Major Moore, to assist in repelling an attack of General Forest. Leaving Paducah on the 1st of November, they returned to Louisville, where the object of their mission was completed, and the line of march was taken up for Nashville, at which point the remaining companies from Huntsville, reported to Regimental headquarters. On the 30th of November, companies "A," "C," "D," "F," "H" and "I," fully mounted and equipped, under command of Colonel Johnson, proceeded to Lavergne, under orders from General Thomas to watch the movements of Hood's army, then advancing on Nashville. These companies being cut off from the line of retreat, retired, in obedience to orders from General Wilson, upon Murfreesboro, reporting to General Rousseau, under whose direction they participated in the battles of Overall's Creek, Wilkinson's Pike and twelve different skirmishes with the enemy, with a loss of sixty-five men killed and wounded, and two men missing, from an aggregate present for duty of three hundred and twenty-five. During the same period companies "B," "E," "G," "K," "L" and "M," left at Nashville, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Pepper, participated, dismounted, in the battle of Nashville on the 15th and 16th of December, immediately after which they were joined by the other six companies from Murfreesboro. After effecting an exchange of arms and procuring an entire re-mount, the regiment was assigned to the 2d Brigade, 7th Division of the Cavalry Corps of the Military Division of the Mississippi, Colonel Johnson commanding the brigade.

On the 11th of February, 1865, the Thirteenth Cavalry embarked on transports for New Orleans, but disembarked at Vicksburg, under the orders of General Canby, to prepare for a raid on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. These orders being countermanded, the regiment left Vicksburg on transports, on the 6th of March, for its original destination, and, on arriving at New Orleans, re-embarked for Navy Cove, Mobile Bay, where it reported to General Canby, and assisted in the operations against the forts and defenses of Mobile. It was also engaged in running a courier line to Florida, connecting with General Asboth. After the fall of Mobile, under command of General Grierson, the regiment was placed in condition for a long march, and, on the 17th of April, started on a raid of some eight hundred miles through the States of Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi, arriving at Columbus, in the latter State, on the 22d of May. From thence it proceeded to Macon, Mississippi, garrisoning that point and the line of railroad, sixty miles in extent, and taking possession of immense quantities of captured commissary, quartermaster and ordnance stores and ordnance. On the 6th of June, the regiment returned to Columbus, Mississippi, and remained there until orders were received for muster-out, when it proceeded to Vicksburg, where it was mustered out of service on the 18th of November, 1865. Proceeding homeward, it reached Indianapolis on the 25th of November, with twenty-three officers and six hundred and thirty-three men, for final discharge, and, on that day, partook of a substantial dinner at the Soldier's Home, after which the regiment marched to the State House, where it was publicly received by an assemblage of citizens. Lieutenant Governor Baker, in an appropriate speech, welcomed the soldiers home. He was followed by General Thomas W. Bennett, after which General G. M. L. Johnson, Lieutenant Colonel Moore and Captain Walls responded in behalf of the regiment.

In June, 1865, Colonel Johnson was assigned to the command of the sub-district of north-east Mississippi, and from that date until the muster-out of the regiment, Colonel Johnson held this important command, the immediate command of the regiment devolving upon Lieutenant Colonel Moore. On the 25th of September, 1865, in consideration of meritorious services rendered, Colonel Johnson was promoted to the rank of Brevet Brigadier General.

THE ONE HUNDRED DAYS VOLUNTEERS.

The Governors of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin having offered to raise for the service of the General Government a force of volunteers to serve for one hundred days, Governor Morton, on the 23d of April, 1864, issued his call for Indiana's proportion of that force. The troops thus raised were to perform such military services as might be required of them in any State, and were to be armed, subsisted, clothed and paid by the United States, but were not to receive any bounty. These troops were designed to aid in making the campaign of 1864 successful and decisive, by relieving a large number of veterans from garrison and guard duty, and allow them to join their companions in arms, then about entering upon one of the most active and important campaigns of the war. Their places were filled by the One Hundred Days Men as fast as the latter could be organized into regiments and sent forward from the camps of rendezvous. The organizations from Indiana consisted of eight regiments, numbered consecutively from the One Hundred and Thirty-Second to the One Hundred and Thirty-Ninth, inclusive.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY SECOND REGIMENT Was organized at Indianapolis on the 17th of May, 1864, and mustered into service on the 18th of May, 1864, with SAMUEL C. VANCE as Colonel, and departed at once for Tennessee. Seven companies of the regiment were raised in Indianapolis and vicinity, one company at Shellbyville, one at Franklin, and one at Danville.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-THIRD REGIMENT Was composed of nine companies raised in the Seventh Congressional District, and one company raised at Richmond, in the Fifth District. These were organized into a regiment and mustered into service at Indianapolis, on the 17th of May, 1864, with ROBERT N. HUDSON as Colonel. The regiment left at once for Tennessee.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FOURTH REGIMENT Was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 25th of May, 1864, with JAMES GAVIN as Colonel, and immediately proceeded to Tennessee. Seven companies of the organization were recruited in the Fourth and three in the Fifth Congressional Districts.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIFTH REGIMENT Was composed exclusively of companies raised in the Eighth Congressional District. These were organized and mustered into service as a regiment at Indianapolis on the 25th of May, 1864, with WILLIAM C. WILSON as Colonel, and departed at once for Tennessee.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SIXTH REGIMENT—Was composed of companies recruited in the First Congressional District, with the exception of three companies. These were raised, respectively, at Noblesville, in the Eleventh District, at Bedford, in the Third District, and at Goshen, in the Tenth District. The regimental organization was perfected and mustered into service at Indianapolis, on the 23d of May, 1864, with JOHN W. FOSTER as Colonel, and soon after departed for Tennessee.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT—Was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis, on the 27th of May, 1864, with EDWARD J. ROBINSON as Colonel, and proceeded to Tennessee. Five of the companies were from counties in the Third Congressional District, and five from other portions of the State, as follows: One from Kokomo, one from Medora, one from Zanesville, one from Sullivan county, one from Rockville, and a consolidated company from Owen and Lawrence counties.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT was composed of seven companies from the Ninth and three from the Eleventh Congressional Districts. These were organized and mustered into service, as a regiment, at Indianapolis, on the 27th of May, 1864, with JAMES H. SHANNON as Colonel and left, at once for Tennessee.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-NINTH REGIMENT was organized and mustered into service, at Indianapolis on the 8th of June, 1864, with GEORGE HUMPHREY as Colonel, and soon after, proceeded to Tennessee. The companies composing the regiment were raised as follows: Elizaville, Lawrenceburg, Kendallville, Knightstown, Connersville, Newcastle, Portland and Vevay each furnished one company, while New Albany and Metamora furnished a consolidated company and Columbia City, New Haven and New Philadelphia furnished another.

Each of these regiments, on arriving at Nashville, was assigned to duty at different places along the lines of the Nashville and Chattanooga, Tennessee and Alabama and Memphis and Charleston Railroads, and, until the latter part of August, 1864, were kept constantly engaged in guarding these lines of communication, used by General Sherman for the transportation of supplies to his army then advancing on Atlanta. The regiments all served beyond the period of one hundred days and returned to Indianapolis where they were finally discharged from service.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTIETH REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Fortieth Regiment was recruited under the President's call of July 18th, 1864, for five hundred thousand men, and was organized and mustered into the service, for the period of one year, on the 24th of October, 1864, at Indianapolis, by the consolidation of parts of two regiments, raised, respectively, in the Third and Fifth Congressional Districts, and numbered the One Hundred and Fortieth and One Hundred and Forty-First. Upon the organization of the regiment, THOMAS J. BRADY was commissioned and mustered in as Colonel. On the 15th of November the regiment left the general rendezvous at Indianapolis, and proceeded direct to Nashville, where it remained but one day, and then, under orders from General Thomas, was hurried to Murfreesboro', reaching there on the 23d of November. It was immediately placed on duty in Fortress Rosecrans, where it remained during Hood's operations around Nashville, taking part in all the battles and skirmishes in the vicinity of Murfreesboro'. On the 7th of December it was engaged in a skirmish south of Murfreesboro', under General Rosseau, losing one man wounded. At this time the regiment was temporarily assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, Twentieth Corps. Previously it had been permanently assigned to the Twenty-Third Corps, with orders to join it when the exigencies of the service permitted. Immediately after the defeat of Hood's army, the regiment took up its line of march, leaving Murfreesboro' on the 24th of December, and arriving at Columbia—at which place the Twenty-Third Corps was halted—on the 28th of December. Here it was assigned to the Third Brigade (then commanded by Colonel Stiles, of the Sixty-Third Indiana), of the Third Division (then commanded by General Cox), Twenty-Third Corps.

On the 2d of January, 1865, the regiment commenced the march across the country to the Tennessee river, reaching Clifton, Tennessee, on the 6th. On the 16th it embarked on steamers and proceeded down the Tennessee and up the Ohio, disembarking at Cincinnati, and moving thence by rail to Washington, D. C. Remaining in camp near that city until the 3d of February, it then moved to Alexandria and embarked on the ocean steamer Atlantic, and with the expedition against Fort Fisher, proceeded to the vicinity of Wilmington, North Carolina. Arriving near Fort Fisher on the night of the 7th, the regiment was landed on the 8th, and participated in the several attempts made to cross the bayou above the Fort. Proceeding up Cape Fear river, it crossed over to Smithville on the 16th, and on the 17th started toward Wilmington. In the attack on Fort Anderson the regiment was exposed to a severe fire from our own gunboats, and during the assault Company "A" captured the garrison flag. On the 20th the rebels were overtaken at Town Creek Bridge, where the regiment participated in their rout and capture, two companies of the regiment being the first troops to enter the enemy's works. On the 21st the regiment arrived in front of Wilmington, and on the 23d marched through the place and encamped in the vicinity.

On the 6th of March the One Handred and Fortieth took up its line of march for Kingston, and made the distance of eighty-six miles, through swamps, in five days. On the 19th it started for Goldsboro, arriving there on the 21st, and remaining in camp near that place until the 2d of April. It was then detached from the brigade and placed on duty as commissary train guard between Goldsboro and Morehead City, and was so engaged until the 10th, when it was relieved. Joining the brigade, it moved to Raleigh, arriving there on the 14th, where it remained until the 6th of May. It then marched to Greensboro, North Carolina, and there remained on duty until the 11th of July, 1865, when it was mustered out of service, and proceeded to Indiana. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 21st of July, it was present at a grand reception given to returned regiments, in the Capitol grounds, on the 25th, on which occasion addresses were delivered by Governor Morton and Major General Sherman. On the 28th the regiment was paid off and finally discharged.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

Under the call of July 18, 1864, the commandant of the camp of rendezvous for the Third Congressional District, was instructed to raise an infantry regiment for one year service, to be designated the One Hundred and Forty-First. The attempt was unsuccessful, and the companies and detachments of recruits were ordered to be consolidated with the One Hundred and Fortieth Regiment, with which organization they served during its continuance in service.

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Forty-Second Regiment was recruited for the one year service, under the call of July, 1864, most of the companies being from the Tenth Congressional District, the recruiting rendezvous being at Fort Wayne. The companies and detachments having reported to the general rendezvous at Indianapolis, the regiment was there organized and mustered into service on the 3d of November, 1864, with JOHN M. COMPARET as Colonel.

On the 18th of November the regiment left Indianapolis for Nashville, and on its arrival there was assigned to the garrison of the post, and while so engaged was attached to the Second Brigade, Fourth Division of the Twentieth Army Corps—which division was left behind in Tennessee, at the time the Twentieth Corps marched with Sherman through Georgia.

During the battle of Nashville, on the 15th and 16th of December, the brigade to which the One Hundred and Forty-Second was attached was in the reserve, and occupied the left of the inner line of defense, extending from the Cumberland river to Fort Negley. After the battle the regiment was retained on duty at Nashville until its muster-out of service on the 14th of July, 1865.

On the 16th of July the regiment arrived at Indianapolis with thirty-two officers and five hundred and eighty-three men for final discharge and payment. On the 18th it marched to the State House grounds and was publicly received by the citizens, who had assembled to greet the return of three thousand soldiers, of five different regiments and two batteries of Indiana volunteers. From the reception stand the soldiers were addressed by Governor Morton, Generals Hovey, Chapman and Bennett, and others. A few days after the officers and men were paid off and discharged from service.

ONE YEAR REGIMENTS OF 1865.

On the 20th of December, 1864, a call was made for eleven regiments of infantry to serve for one year, and recruiting rendezvous were established at the headquarters of each of the District Provost Marshals, from which recruits were forwarded to the general rendezvous at Indianapolis. Chief recruiting officers were, also, appointed in each District whose exertions materially aided the recruitment of the regiments. Subsequently five additional regiments for the same arm and term of service were called for, to be recruited in the same manner. Under these calls the following organizations were raised, mustered into service and sent to the field:

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-THIRD REGIMENT—Was composed of companies from the First Congressional District and was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis, on the 21st of February, 1865, with JOHN F. GRILL as Colonel. On the 23d the regiment was turned over to the United States, and, after being armed and equipped, left on the 24th for Nashville. From thence it moved to Murfreesboro, where it performed guard duty until the 13th of May when it proceeded to Tullahoma. Moving from that place on the 26th of June to Nashville it was sent to Clarksville, at which place three companies were detached and sent to garrison Fort Donelson. Receiving orders for muster-out the regiment was brought together and marched to Nashville where it was mustered out on the 17th of October, 1865. Leaving Nashville on the 19th it arrived at Indianapolis on the 21st of October, with thirty officers and six hundred and ninety-one men, for final discharge and payment, and on the same day it was publicly received at the State House grove by the citizens and State authorities.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FOURTH REGIMENT—Was composed of companies raised in the Second Congressional District, and was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 6th of March, 1865, with GEORGE W. RIDDLE as Colonel. On the 9th of March the regiment left Indianapolis and arrived at Harper's Ferry, Virginia, on the 13th, where it was assigned to the First Brigade First Provisional Division of the Army of the Shenandoah, and sent to Halltown. Subsequently it was stationed for brief periods at Charlestown, Winchester, Stevenson Depot and Opequan Creek, engaging in guard duty until the 5th of August, 1865, when it was mustered out of service. On the 9th of August it arrived at Indianapolis, with thirty-seven officers and eight hundred and forty men for final discharge, and on the 11th was present at a soldier's reception given in the Capitol grounds, at which speeches were made by Lieutenant Governor Baker, General Benjamin Harrison and others.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIFTH REGIMENT—Was recruited in the Third Congressional District and organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 16th of February, 1865, with WILL. A. ADAMS as Colonel. On the 18th the regiment left Indianapolis and arrived at Nashville, Tennessee on the 21st, and on the 23d reported to General Steadman at Chattanooga. The same day it proceeded to Dalton, Georgia, where it was placed on duty guarding the railroad for some time, and was then moved to Marietta where it remained until the fall of 1865, when it was ordered to Cuthbert. At this place it remained on duty until its muster out in January, 1866.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SIXTH REGIMENT—Was recruited in the First, Third and Fourth Congressional Districts and organized at Indianapolis on the 3d of March, 1865. On the 9th it was mustered into service, with MERIT C. WELSH as Colonel, and left Indianapolis on the 11th for Harper's Ferry, Virginia. Arriving there on the 15th it was assigned to one of the provisional divisions of the Army of the Shenandoah. From that time until the 27th of July, it was engaged in performing post and guard duty at Charlestown, Winchester, Stevenson Station, Jordan's Springs and Summit Point, Virginia. It was then ordered to the Relay House from whence it moved to Baltimore where it was assigned to duty in the Military District of Delaware, General Lockwood commanding. One company was at once detached and placed on duty at Hicks' General Hospital, Baltimore, one company sent to Havre De Grace, and, on the 1st of August, four companies were detached and placed on duty as follows: One company at Dover, and one at Wilmington, Delaware; one at Salisbury and one at Easton, Maryland. These companies were continued on this duty until the 31st of August, 1865, when the regiment was brought together and mustered out of service, at Baltimore. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 8th of September, with thirty-two officers and seven hundred and seventy-one men for final payment and discharge, it was publicly welcomed home, at a reception meeting held in the State House grounds, at which speeches were made by Governor Morton and Generals Mansfield and Washburn, which were responded to by Colonel Welsh, Lieutenant Colonel Morrison, Major Spillman and Adjutant Hill. The regiment then marched to Camp Carrington, where it was paid off and finally discharged.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT—Was composed of seven companies recruited in the Fifth Congressional District, two companies raised in the Eleventh District, and one company composed of detachments from Benton, Henry and Fayette counties. These were organized into a regiment at Indianapolis, on the 13th of March, 1865, of which MILTON PEDEN was commissioned Colonel. On the 16th it left Indianapolis for Harper's Ferry, Virginia, and on arriving there was marched to Charlestown, where it was assigned to one of the provisional divisions of the army of the Shenandoah. From that time until its muster out, on the 4th of August, 1865, it was engaged in doing guard and garrison duty at Stevenson Station, Summit Point, Berryville, Harper's Ferry, and Maryland Heights. On the 9th of August it arrived at Indianapolis, with thirty-two officers and seven hundred and forty-three men for final discharge, and was publicly welcomed home, at a reception meeting held in the State House Grove, on the 11th, at which speeches were made by Lieutenant Governor Baker, General Benjamin Harrison and others, to which Colonel Peden responded.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT—Was recruited in the Sixth Congressional District, and was organized at Indianapolis, on the 25th of February, 1865, with NICHOLAS R. RUCKLE as Colonel. On the 28th it left for Nashville, Tennessee, and was at once placed on duty. From that time until its muster-out, the regiment was kept constantly employed in doing guard and garrison duty in the interior of Middle Tennessee. On the 5th of September, 1865, it was mustered out of service and proceeded to Indiana, arriving at Indianapolis on the 8th, with thirty-six officers and seven hundred and eighty-four men for final discharge.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-NINTH REGIMENT—Was recruited in the Seventh Congressional District, and was organized at Indianapolis on the 1st day of March, 1865, with WILLIAM H. FAIRBANKS as Colonel. It left Indianapolis on the 3d for Nashville, Tennessee, and was a few weeks afterwards sent to Decatur, Alabama, in which vicinity it did duty until its muster-out. While stationed at that place, the regiment received the surrender of the rebel forces commanded by Generals Roddy and Polk, together with large quantites of arms and munitions of war. On the 18th of September it proceeded to Nashville, where it was mustered out on the 27th of September, 1865. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 29th, with thirty officers and eight hundred men, it was publicly welcomed home, at a reception meeting held in the Capitol grounds, and was addressed by Governor Morton, General Finnell, of Kentucky, and others.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH REGIMENT—Was recruited in the Eighth Congressional District, and was organized at Indianapolis, on the 9th of March, 1865, with MARSH B. TAYLOR as Colonel. On the 13th it left Indianapolis for Harper's Ferry, Virginia, arriving there on the 17th, and shortly after was marched to Charlestown. From thence it moved to Winchester, and from there to Stevenson Station, where it remained until the 27th of June. It then marched to Jordan's Springs, near Opequan, where it remained until its muster-out, on the 5th of August, 1865. On the 9th of August it arrived at Indianapolis with twenty-five officers and eight hundred and seventy men for final discharge, and on the 11th was present at a reception given to returned regiments in the State House grove, where it was addressed by Lieutenant Governor Baker, General Benjamin Harrison and others.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FIRST REGIMENT—Was composed of companies raised in the Ninth Congressional District, and was organized at Indianapolis, on the 3d of March, 1865, with JOSHUA HEALY as Colonel. On the 6th of March it left Indianapolis, and arrived at Nashville on the 9th and reported to General Rousseau. On the 14th of March it moved to Tullahoma, where it remained on duty until the 14th of June, when it returned to Nashville. Here it did post and garrison duty until the 19th of September, 1865, when it was mustered out of service and proceeded to Indiana. On the 22d it arrived at Indianapolis, with thirty officers and five hundred and seventy-three men, for final discharge. On the 26th it was present at a grand reception, given to a number of returned soldiers, at the Capitol grounds, on which occasion Lieutenant General Grant was present, as the invited guest of the State and city. Governor Morton addressed the regiment, and at the close of his speech presented General Grant to the soldiers and citizens, after which the regiment marched to Camp Carrington, where it was paid off and finally discharged.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SECOND REGIMENT—Was recruited in the Tenth Congressional District, and was organized at Indianapolis, on the 16th of March, 1865, with WHEDON W. GRISWOLD as Colonel. It left Indianapolis on the 18th for Harper's Ferry, Virginia, and on arriving there was assigned to duty with one of the provisional divisions of the Army of the Shenandoah. It was stationed for a short time at Charlestown, Stevenson Station, and Summit Point, and then moved to Clarksburg, in Western Virginia, where it remained until its muster-out, on the 30th of August, 1865. On the 1st of September it reached Indianapolis with seven hundred and seventy men and officers, where it was finally discharged.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-THIRD REGIMENT—Was composed of companies recruited in the Eleventh Congressional District, and was organized at Indianapolis, on the 1st of March, 1865, with OLIVER H. P. CAREY as Colonel. It left Indianapolis on the 5th, for Nashville, Tennessee, but was stopped at Louisville, by order of General Palmer, and sent to Russellville, Kentucky, and from thence detachments were sent out to Hopkinsville, Bowling Green and other points in that section of the country. Companies "D," "G" and "H" were, at different times, engaged in fighting guerrillas, and lost five men in killed and wounded. On the 16th of June the regiment returned to Louisville, and was assigned to duty at Taylor Barracks, in that city, where it remained until the 4th of September, 1865, when it was mustered out of service. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 6th, with thirty officers and seven hundred men, it was publicly welcomed home, at a reception meeting held on the same day in the Capitol grounds, at which speeches were made by General Mansfield, Hon. John H. Farquhar and Colonel Nelson Trusler.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FOURTH REGIMENT—Was recruited in the Eighth Congressional District, and was organized at Indianapolis on the 20th of April, 1865, with FRANK WILCOX as Colonel. On the 28th of April it left Indianapolis, under command of Major Simpson, and reached Parkersburg, West Virginia, on the 30th, where it remained until the 2d of May, and then moved into the Shenandoah Valley, halting at Stevenson Station on the 4th. Here it remained until the 27th of June, engaged in doing guard duty, and then continued on duty to Opequan Creek, and there remained until it was ordered to be mustered out. On the 4th of August, 1865, it was mustered out of service, and arrived at Indianapolis, on the 7th, with thirty-two officers and seven hundred and thirty-four men for final discharge. On the 8th it was present at a reception given to returned regiments, in the Capitol grounds, and was soon after discharged from service.

THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FIFTH REGIMENT—Was composed of companies recruited in the Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Congressional Districts and was organized at Indianapolis on the 18th of April, 1865, with JOHN M. WILSON as Colonel. On the 26th of April the regiment left for Washington and upon its arrival there it was sent to Alexandria and was assigned to the provisional brigade of the Third Division of the Ninth Army Corps. On the 3d of May it was transferred to Dover, Delaware, at which place companies were detached and sent to Centreville, and Wilmington, Delaware, and Salisbury, Maryland. On the return to the regiment of two of these companies a railroad accident occurred by which a number were severely injured. The regiment being brought together was, on the 4th of August, 1865, mustered out at Dover, Delaware. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 10th with thirty-two officers and eight hundred men, for final discharge, it was publicly welcomed home, at a reception meeting held in the State House grove, at which addresses were made by Lieutenant Governor Baker, General Benjamin Harrison and others.

THE BATTALION OF THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SIXTH REGIMENT—Was composed of five companies, two of which were recruited in the Seventh District, and one each in the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Districts. The Battalion was organized at Indianapolis on the 12th of April, 1865, with CHARLES M. SMITH as Lieutenant Colonel. On the 27th of April it left Indianapolis and proceeded to Harper's Ferry and during its term of service was engaged in performing guard duty in the Shenandoah Valley. On the 4th of August, 1865, it was mustered out of service at Winchester, Virginia, und returned home, arriving at Indianapolis on the 7th, with seventeen officers and three hundred and eighty men for final discharge. After attending a public reception in the Capitol grounds, on the 8th, it marched to Camp Carrington where it was paid off and finally discharged.

INDEPENDENT CAVALRY COMPANY, INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

On the 25th of July, 1863, an independent cavalry company, which had been raised in Crawford County, was organized and a tender of its services made to the General Government. On the 31st of July it was accepted, for special service, by the Secretary of War, who directed that it be mustered into service, by the United States mustering officer, "for twelve months, unless sooner discharged." The horses, furnished by the men, were received into the service, and the company mustered into service at Leavenworth, on the 13th of August, 1863, with CHARLES L. LAMB as Captain. The company was engaged during the fall and winter following in assisting the Provost Marshal of the District in arresting deserters, and in enforcing the draft, and in guarding the river border against invasions from rebel cavalry and guerrillas. On the 18th of January, 1864, authority was given by the War Department for the re-enlistment, in the three years service, of such of the company as desired to change their term of service, and, under this authority, a large proportion of the men re-enlisted for three years and entered the Thirteenth Cavalry. Soon after, the company was finally discharged from service, there being no further need of their services.

TWENTY-EIGHTH REGIMENT U. S. COLORED TROOPS.

The enlisted men of the Twenty-Eighth Regiment of United States Colored Troops were recruited in Indiana as a part of the quota of the State. Six companies were organized at Indianapolis in April, 1864, and turned over to the United States as a battalion of the Twenty-Eighth U. S. Colored Infantry. Captain Charles S. Russell of the Eleventh U. S. Infantry was appointed Lieutenant Colonel of the battalion and with it, left Indianapolis on the 24th of April, 1864, for Washington, D. C. From there it proceeded to Alexandria, Virginia, where it was placed in camp of instruction, and underwent a series of drills preparatory to entering upon active field service.

On the 2d of June the battalion embarked for White House, Virginia, and while there participated in an engagement with the enemy on the 21st of June. It accompanied Sheridan's Cavalry on its excursion through the Chickahominy swamps, and, after a hazadous and circuitous march, it arrived at Prince George's Court House. During this campaign the battalion sustained severe losses from frequent skirmishes with the enemy. At Prince George's Court House it was assigned to Thomas' brigade of Ferrero's division of the Ninth Army Corps. With this command it moved to the vicinity of the Appomattox, and participated in the campaign against Petersburg during the summer and fall of 1864. In the bloody battle of the "Crater," it was actively engaged, losing nearly half of its number in killed and wounded.

The decimated ranks of the battalion were now filled with recruits and, in addition, four more companies were raised in Indiana and sent to the command making it a full regiment. Lieutenant Colonel Russell was promoted to the Colonelcy of the Regiment on the 23d of August, and, for gallant conduct in the actions before Petersburg was promoted to the rank of Brevet Brigadier General to date from July 30th, 1864. Major Thomas H. Logan succeeded him as Lieutenant Colonel and took the command of the regiment, General Russell being assigned to the command of a brigade.

In the engagement at Hatcher's Run the regiment was conspicuously engaged, losing many in killed and wounded. Upon the organization of the Twenty-Fifth Corps, Army of the James, the Twenty-Eighth Regiment was assigned to it, and was selected for duty in the Quartermaster's department at City Point, at which place it remained on duty until called upon to assist in operating against Richmond. As part of a provisional brigade, under General Russell, it was among the first organizations to enter Richmond, where it was detained for three days at Camp Lee. From there it was sent to City Point to take charge of prisoners. At that place it remained until the Twenty-Fifth Corps was ordered to Texas, when it embarked with it, and proceeded to Brazos Santiago, where it arrived on the 1st of July, 1865. Disembarking at Indianola on the 5th, it remained there a short time, and then re-joined Russell's Brigade at Corpus Christi, where it remained until mustered out of service, on the 8th of November, 1865, in pursuance of an order from the War Department.

After its muster-out the regiment proceeded to New Orleans, where it remained for a brief period, and then embarked on steamer and proceeded up the Mississippi river to Cairo, and from thence to Indianapolis, arriving there on the 6th of January, 1866, with thirty-three officers and nine hundred and fifty men. On the 8th of January, a public reception was given the regiment at the Tabernacle, at which welcoming addresses were made by Governor Baker and others, to which responses were made by Lieutenant Colonel T. H. Logan, Chaplain G. H. White and Lieutenant W. C. Holahan. On the following day the officers and men of the regiment were finally discharged from service.

FIRST BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The First Battery of Light Artillery was organized at Evansville, on the 5th of August, and mustered into the service on the 16th of August, 1861, with MARTIN KLAUSS as Captain. The organization was chiefly composed of members of an independent company of artillery that had done duty at Evansville a few months previous. Soon after its muster the battery moved to St. Louis, and was assigned to the army of General Fremont. On the 27th of September the First Battery moved with the Army of Fremont to Springfield, Missouri. General Fremont being relieved of his command, the forward movement was abandoned and the army withdrawn from Southwest Missouri. On the 13th of December the battery set out on the Black Water expedition, and assisted in the capture of nine hundred and fifty rebels at Black Water creek.

On the 29th of January, 1862, Klauss' Battery moved with the division of General Jeff. C. Davis, in pursuit of the rebel General Price. The forces moved from Versailles in the direction of Springfield, where Price was stationed. The rebel army was encountered and driven for four days, with constant skirmishing. Price having reached Cross Hollows, Arkansas, further pursuit was abandoned.

Early in March a general movement was made by the divisions of the army in Missouri, having in contemplation a design to meet and check the rebel General Van Dorn, then moving north with a large force. On the 6th of March the enemy was encountered near Leetown, and a severe battle resulted. The next day a severe engagement took place at Elkhorn Tavern, and on the 8th the whole force of the enemy was encountered and decisively defeated at Pea Ridge. At 8 o'clock on the morning of the 8th, General Jeff. C. Davis began the attack with artillery, which brought responses from batteries of the enemy, one of which opened with grape and canister so near the flank of Klauss' Battery that it was compelled to retire. A movement of one of our brigades caused this annoying battery to withdraw. Klauss' Battery then took position in an open field, and maintained the contest with great spirit. Soon General Sigel's forces were in position, and his artillery opened. No human courage could withstand the terrible fire which swept from our line of batteries. For over two hours our artillery fire swept the rebel ranks. Onward crept our infantry. Forward moved our guns. Shorter became the range. At last, despairing, the enemy fled in great confusion, and the battle of Pea Ridge was won. Klauss' Battery rendered efficient service in this series of battles, closing with Pea Ridge.

The First Battery encamped at Cross Timbers for nearly a month. It then moved in the direction of Forsyth, Missouri, over the Ozark Mountains, and then to Sulphur Rock, where it again camped. In June it left Sulphur Rock, and marched to Helena, Arkansas, arriving there on the 13th of July. In October the First Battery moved to Ironton, Missouri, and from thence marched through the southeastern portion of Missouri. During these campaigns in Missouri and Arkansas, the First Battery marched three thousand six hundred miles.

On the 14th of March, 1863, the First Battery embarked on a steamer at St. Genevieve, Missouri, and moved to Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, where it arrived on the 25th, and was assigned to the Thirteenth Army Corps. The First Battery marched across the Peninsula, crossed the Mississippi river, and on the 1st of May was engaged in the battle of Port Gibson. At one o'clock on the morning of that day Carr's division, being in the advance, was met by the fire of the enemy's artillery. Line of battle was at once formed, Klauss' battery brought up, and the enemy's fire briskly replied to and silenced. During the day a general engagement ensued, in which the battery was severely engaged. The column pressing on, the battery became engaged in the battle of Champion Hill on the 16th. On the next day the enemy was overtaken and defeated at Big Black River Bridge. The First Battery then took position in line in front of the enemy's works at Vicksburg, and was engaged during the siege, and until the surrender of that formidable position.

On the 5th of July the First Battery moved with Sherman's column toward Jackson, and was engagad during the seige of that place, and, upon its evacuation by the enemy, returned to Vicksburg, where it went into camp. In the month of August the First Battery embarked on a steamer, and proceeded to New Orleans, and from thence moved with General Franklin's expedition through the Teche country in the fall of 1863.

Early in March, 1864, the First Battery moved with General Banks' army on the Red River Expedition. The battery took part in the battle of Sabine Cross Roads on the 8th of April, and in the fight at Yellow Bayou on the 21st. Banks' shattered army fell back to Grand Ecore, at which place the Battery was assigned to the Sixteenth Corps, and was daily engaged in assisting to repel the enemy until the army reached Morganza, when the battery returned to its old corps, the Thirteenth, and proceeded to New Orleans. On the 20th of June Captain Martin Klauss resigned, and First Lieutenant Lawrence Jacoby of the First Missouri Artillery (who had the command of the battery, by assignment, during the Red River Expedition) was promoted Captain. A number of its men re-enlisted as veterans while stationed at New Orleans.

In the fall of 1864 the non-veteran portion of the battery, severed its connection with the organization and proceeded to Indianapolis where the men were mustered out of service.

In March, 1865, the First Battery was again assigned to the Sixteenth Corps, and took an active part in the siege and capture of Spanish Fort, Alabama. After the surrender of Mobile, the First Battery moved to Montgomery, Alabama, and was stationed at that place when orders were received to proceed to Indianapolis for muster out. It arrived at Indianapolis on the 17th of August, 1865, with three officers and one hundred and two men, was present at a reception to returned soldiers in the State House grove on the same day, at which speeches were made by Lieutenant Governor Baker, General Wilder and others, and was mustered out of the service at Indianapolis on the 22d of August, 1865, its members receiving final payment and discharge.

SECOND BATTERY LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Second Battery of Light Artillery was organized at Indianapolis on the 5th of August, and mustered into service on the 9th of August, 1861, with David G. Rabb as Captain. On the 5th of September, it left Indianapolis, by rail, for St. Louis, where it went into camp until the 25th of September, when it embarked on a steamer and proceeded up the Missouri river to Jefferson City. Disembarking at that place, it encamped in the vicinity, until the 4th of October, and then marched, with part of General Hunter's division, to Tipton. Remaining there until the 17th, it moved southward, passing near Versailles and through Warsaw to Mount View, and thence to Springfield, Missouri.

From Springfield it moved into Kansas, going into quarters at Fort Leavenworth during the winter, and in the spring of 1862 moving to Fort Scott. On the 23d of May the Battery marched from Fort Scott to Iola, Kansas, where it remained in camp until the 1st of June, and then marched to Baxter's Springs, on Spring river, in the Indian Territory. On the 5th, with four pieces of the battery, a detachment marched with an expedition from Baxter's Springs to Round Grove, on Cow Skin Prairie, in the Cherokee Nation, where, coming upon the enemy's force, under Colonel Coffee, a fight ensued about dark on the 5th. The enemy was routed, after the firing of six rounds of shot and shell, and a large amount of live stock, equipage, and munitions of war captured. On the 28th of June, the Battery marched from Baxter's Springs, with Colonel Solomon's brigade, upon an expedition against the rebel Indians. Moving southward into the Cherokee Nation, the enemy, under General Rains, was encountered at Round Grove, and before our forces could attack them, the enemy fled. Returning to Fort Scott, the Battery took part in several expeditions sent out from that place. It engaged the enemy at Lone Jack, Missouri, on the 9th of September, and at Newtonia, Missouri, on the 10th of October.

Moving into Arkansas, it participated in engagements with the enemy at Fort Wayne, on the 28th of October, at Cane Hill, on the 27th of November, at Prairie Grove, on the 7th of December, and at Van Buren, on the 29th of December. During the following spring, the battery was stationed at Springfield, Missouri, from whence, in July, 1863, the greater portion was detached and sent to the field in Arkansas and Indian Territory. On the 28th of August this detachment took part in the battle at Perryville, in the Choctaw Nation, and on the 1st of September it was engaged in the fight at Cotton Gap, Arkansas. The battery, again united, participated in the battle of Buffalo Mountain, on the 25th of October, after which it moved to Waldron and Fort Smith, Arkansas. In January, 1864, a small por- of the men re-enlisted as Veteran Volunteers. The battery continued to operate in Western Arkansas during the winter, spring and summer of 1864. On the 11th and 12th of April it engaged the enemy at Prairie de Ann, Arkansas, and on the 13th at Moscow, Arkansas. On the 18th of the same month, it participated in the battle of Poisoned Spring, Arkansas, in which it lost two guns, and on the 28th it fought the enemy at Mark's Mills, Arkansas. On the 29th and 30th of April, it again engaged the enemy at Jenkins' Ferry, on Saline river, after which it moved to Fort Smith. At this place, on the 29th, 30th and 31st of July, it took part in the battles fought in defense of the fort, and assisted in defeating the enemy. In September it returned to Indianapolis, where the non-veterans were mustered out of service, and the organization broken up.

In pursuance of instructions from the War Department, dated September 22, 1864, the Second Battery was re-organized at Indianapolis, on the 18th of October, 1864, with JAMES S. WHICHER (First Lieutenant of the old organization) as Captain. In December it proceeded to Nashville, Tennessee, where it remained until the latter part of June, 1865. While there it took part in the battle of Nashville on the 15th and 16th of December, 1864. Returning to Indianapolis, with one hundred and thirteen men for muster out, it was present at a reception given to returned soldiers in the Capitol grounds on the 30th of June, at which speeches were made by Lieutenant Governor Baker, General Hovey and others. On the 3d of July, 1865, the battery was mustered out, and the officers and men finally discharged. During the term of service of the two organizations, the Second Battery marched eleven thousand five hundred miles, and lost one officer and twenty-seven men killed.

THIRD BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Third Battery was organized at Connersville on the 5th of August, and mustered into service on the 24th of August, 1861, with WATTON W. FRYBARGER as Captain. During the month of September the battery moved to St. Louis, was assigned to General Fremont's Army, and moved with that army in the campaign through Southwest Missouri. Upon the close of this campaign, Captain Frybarger being promoted Major and ordered to Indianapolis for the purpose of organizing batteries, Lieutenant James M. Cockefair was promoted Captain. From Springfield the Third Battery moved to Tipton, and from thence to Lamine Cantonment, where it remained until the spring of 1862. It then moved to Jefferson City. During the summer and fall of 1862, sections of the Third Battery were dispatched to different portions of Missouri, and engaged in numerous encounters with straggling forces of the enemy. This duty was exceedingly arduous and difficult, owing to the long and frequent marches, and the impossibility of forcing the enemy to a decisive battle. Sharp encounters were had with the enemy at Moon's Mill, Kirksville, and Lone Jack, in which the battery lost in killed and wounded. After a separation of nine months, and having traversed the principal portion of Missouri, the Third Battery rendezvoused at Springfield during the winter of 1862. It then moved to Rolla, and from thence to St. Louis, where it was stationed until the latter part of 1863. On the 30th of November, 1863, a majority of the members of the Third Battery reenlisted as veterans,—and during the summer of 1864, came home on a furlough. Upon the expiration of their furlough they rejoined the battery in the field.

In December, 1863, the Third Battery embarked on a steamer at St. Louis and moved to Columbus, Kentucky, and, upon arriving there, was assigned to the command of General A. J. Smith and moved with his column in the winter campaign of 1863 and 1864 through Western Tennessee. The battery then moved to Memphis, and with its division proceeded on steamer to Vicksburg. On the 3d of February 1864, the Third Battery moved from Vicksburg with the column of General Sherman, and proceeded to Meridian, Mississippi. Having aided in sufficiently destroying the enemy's communications, the battery returned with the army to its place of starting.

On the 8th of March the Third Battery embarked on a steamer at Vicksburg, and proceeding up the Red river, landed at Semmesport, on the west bank of the Atchafalaya, and, took part in the storming and capture of Fort De Russy. Thence the Battery moved with General A. J. Smith's command, and on the 9th of April was engaged in the battle of Pleasant Hill, in which the pursuing enemy were checked and routed. The battery was engaged almost constantly in covering the retreat of Banks' army, until it reached Morganza Bend on the Mississippi river, on the 21st of May. During this campaign it took part in the battles at Coutcherville, Cane Run, Alexandria, Old Oaks and Round Lake. Upon reaching the Mississippi river the battery embarked with its corps, and moved to Vicksburg, thence to Memphis, and thence marched to Tupelo, Mississippi, being engaged with the enemy at Tupelo, Tallahatchie, Jackson and Clinton, Mississippi during this movement across the country.

Returning to Memphis, the Third Battery was newly equipped, its guns, horses and material being worn out from constant service. After being completely refitted the battery moved to Oxford, Mississippi, and, returning to Memphis, moved with the Sixteenth Army Corps to St. Louis, and joined the forces of General Rosecrans in the pursuit of the rebel General Price, in the fall of 1864. After marching eight hundred miles in twenty-four days without being able to overtake the enemy, the Third Battery returned to St. Louis, and moved from thence to Nashville, Tennessee. Here, with the army of General Thomas, the battery took part in the decisive engagement in front of Nashville, on the 15th and 16th of December, 1864, which resulted in the defeat and rout of Hood's rebel army. In January, 1865, the battery moved to Eastport, Mississippi, and from thence moved to New Orleans, where it was assigned to General Canby's command, and operated with his army upon the defenses of Mobile. The battery was actively engaged in the siege and capture of Fort Blakely, which compelled the surrender of Mobile. After Mobile was occupied by our forces, the Third Battery moved to Montgomery, and from thence to Selma, Alabama, where it remained until the 30th of July, 1865, when orders were received to proceed to Indianapolis for muster out. Starting for home, the Third Battery arrived at Indianapolis on the 13th of August with three officers and seventy-one men, and was present at an ovation to returned soldiers in the State House grove on the 17th of August, at which addresses were made by Lieutenant Governor Baker, General Wilder and others. Since its organization the Third Battery has been commanded by Captains W. W. Frybarger, James M. Cockefair, Thomas J. Ginn, and Richard Burns, and has lost in killed and wounded one officer and sixty-three men. On the 21st of August, 1865, the Third Battery was mustered out of the service at Indianapolis, its members received final discharge and pay, and returned home.

FOURTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Fourth Battery of Light Artillery was mostly recruited in Laporte, Porter and Lake counties, and was organized at Indianapolis, on the 15th of September, and mustered into service on the 30th of September, 1861, with ASAHEL K. BUSH as Captain. Shortly after it proceeded to Louisville, and there joined the army of General Buell. During the winter it remained in camp in the vicinity of New Haven, Munfordsville and Bowling Green, and when the forward movement of the army was commenced, it moved with it to Nashville. From thence it marched to Savannah, on the Tennessee river, with Buell's army; but, for lack of transportation, did not cross the river in time to take part in the engagement at Shiloh.

During the seige of Corinth, the battery marched with Buell's army, and participated in the subsequent campaign through Northern Alabama and Middle Tennessee, reaching Nashville late in the month of August, 1862. Falling back into Kentucky, and to the Ohio river, at the time of Bragg's invasion, it moved out from Louisville, with Rousseau's division of McCook's corps, and took part in the campaign that resulted in driving that rebel general from Kentucky. During the progress of this campaign the battle of Chaplin Hills, near Perryville was fought on the 8th of October. The Fourth Battery and Stone's Kentucky Battery were placed on a high ridge on the extreme left of Rousseau's division, and extending diagonally to the front. To support these batteries, the First Wisconsin was placed on that ridge, and the Seventy-Ninth Pennsylvania on another ridge running almost at right angles with the one on which the batteries were planted. This formation gave a cross-fire, and proved of great value in maintaining that all important position during the day. General Rousseau, in his official report, says of this movement: "These formations were made in great haste, and in a few moments, but without the least confusion or disorder, the men moving into line as if on parade." The operations at this point saved McCook's left, and secured to the army the Maxville road, upon which stood the entire ammunition train and ambulances.

After this campaign, the Fourth Battery marched to Nashville, and upon the re-organization of the army, under General Rosecrans, it was assigned to the Third Division of General McCook's corps, of which General Sheridan was the division commander. In December the division marched with the right wing of the army towards Murfreesboro, then the headquarters of General Bragg. On the morning of December 30th, the battery moved near the enemy's lines at Stone river, and by order of General Sheridan, opened fire on a rebel battery at fifteen hundred yards range, and drove it under cover. About ten o'clock it moved across the open field near the woods occupied by the enemy, when a rebel battery opened upon it from the woods, at about six hundred yards range, when General Sill ordered Captain Bush to place his battery in position in the woods, and silence the opposing battery. This was accomplished, after a sharp contest of about two hours, at four hundred and fifty yards range. As a result, about one-half of the horses of the enemy's battery were killed, one of his gun carriages disabled, one of his Lieutenants and twelve men killed, and several others wounded, besides the killing and wounding of a number of the infantry supports which lay near. The Fourth Battery lost in the contest four men killed and three wounded. After dark the battery was posted about three hundred yards further to the right, in open ground, where it remained till next morning. About daylight on the 31st the enemy began his attack. The battery replied with canister, at short range, until the division was flanked, and obliged to retire, the battery moving to the rear of its brigade, and firing canister as it fell back. On reaching the first position of December 30th, it made another stand and fired canister from its howitzers and six-pound smooth-bores into the enemy in front, and with its rifles drove two of the enemy's pieces from position, which were firing on General Davis' retreating lines. In reaching this position, one caisson was lost, every horse drawing it being shot down by the enemy's musketry. Retiring from this position, it moved to a point eight hundred yards to the left, adjoining Gen. Negley's division, near which point it remained until its ammunition was expended, and then retired to the left. In crossing a dense cedar woods, near the Murfreesboro pike, the infantry were driven rapidly past the battery causing two rear pieces to be captured by the enemy. These were not abandoned until all the horses except four had been killed, and one piece had become fastened among the trees, and the enemy within forty yards of the two guns. On reaching the pike, Captain Bush moved his battery a short distance to the rear and obtained a supply of ammunition, and then reported to the front with three pieces for duty. By order of General Rosecrans the battery was then placed in park in front and on the left of the pike. The next morning General Sheridan placed it in position, where it remained until the morning of the 2d of January, 1863, without further casualties. The total loss to the battery in this battle was six killed, seventeen wounded, two paroled by the enemy, and one missing.

Encamping near Murfreesboro until June, 1863, it then moved, with its division in the campaign against Tullahoma, engaging the enemy on the 24th of June at Hoover's Gap. After the occupation of Tullahoma, it marched with the army toward Chattanooga, crossing the Tennessee river at Bridgeport, Alabama. Passing over Lookout and Sand Mountains, the enemy was encountered at Dug Gap, where a brisk engagement ensued. On the 19th and 20th of September the battery participated in the engagement at Chicamauga, rendering effective service on both days. It fired fewer shots than at Stone river, but with much greater effect. After the battle it fell back to Chattanooga, and there remained some months. On the 25th of November it took part in the battle of Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge. After these engagements, the battery was stationed at Chattanooga until the 21st of September, 1864, when the veterans and remaining recruits were transferred to the Seventh Battery, with which organization they continued to serve until its muster-out of service. The non-veterans proceeded to Indianapolis, where they were mustered out of service on the 6th of October, 1864.

On the 14th of October, 1864, telegraphic authority was given by the War Department for the re-organization of the Fourth Battery. The re-organization was perfected on the 28th of October, with BENJAMIN F. JOHNSON (one of the First Lieutenants of the old organization) as Captain. In a few days after the battery joined the Army of the Cumberland, at Nashville, and after the battle at that place was assigned as garrison of Fortress Rosecrans, at Murfreesboro, where it remained until ordered to be mustered out. Returning home, it left Nashville on the 19th of July, 1865, and arrived at Indianapolis on the 24th, with five officers and eighty-four men for muster-out. On the 26th it was present at a public reception given by the citizens to returned soldiers, on which occasion General Sherman (then on a visit to the city as the honored guest of the State) appeared upon the stand and addressed the soldiers and citizens. After which Governor Morton made a welcoming address to the returned soldiers. On the 1st of August, 1865, the battery was mustered out of service, and finally discharged.

FIFTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Fifth Battery of Light Artillery was authorized to be recruited on the 16th of September, 1861. It was raised in Whitley, Noble, Laporte and Allen counties. On the 17th of September the men rendezvoused at Indianapolis, where the battery was mustered into service on the 22d of November, with PETER SIMONSON as Captain. Its armament consisted of two twelve-pounder howitzers, two six-pounder rifle and two six-pounder smooth-bores. On the 27th of November, it left Indianapolis with one hundred and forty-eight men, and arrived at Camp Gilbert, near Louisville, on the 29th. Here it was placed in a school of instruction, where it remained until the 20th of December, when it was assigned to General O. M. Mitchell's division of Buell's army, then stationed at Bacon Creek, Kentucky. On the 9th of February, 1862, it moved with its division to Bowling Green and Nashville. During the month of March it moved to Murfreesboro, and from thence to Fayetteville, Tennessee and Huntsville, Alabama. The guns of this battery being in the advance, before reaching Huntsville, were placed in position and opened upon the flying railroad trains of the enemy, and, by a few well directed shots, halted all but one, and aroused the slumbering citizens to find their city in the possession of the national troops, at daylight on the 11th of April. The same day two guns of the battery were placed upon platform cars and run ahead of locomotives, each way on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad seventy miles. On the return, bridges were destroyed, thus rendering the position secure. During the stay at Huntsville, many raids were made in different directions, in which the battery participated, the men being frequently used by General Mitchell as cavalry, doing excellent service as scouts.

In June half of the battery, under command of Captain Simonson, were attached to the Nineteenth Illinois, under Colonel Turchin, and marched by way of Winchester, Tennessee, and Paint Rock, Bellefonte, and Stevenson, Alabama, to Bridgeport, Alabama. Here they remained on the bank of the Tennessee river, in full view of the enemy's pickets, for two months, until August, when the balance of the company joined them. On the 24th of August, the battery was ordered to Stevenson to cover the removal of Government stores, hospitals, rolling stock, &c., from that post. On the morning of the 31st of August, the enemy, in strong force, attacked the post, and a spirited and determined artillery battle was kept up until two o'clock in the afternoon, when the enemy ceased firing. Everything being in readiness, the troops were withdrawn, the battery being with the rear guard. The only loss to the battery was of one man taken prisoner. About this time, General Mitchell was assigned to a command at Beaufort, South Carolina, and General Rousseau took command of the Third Division, which had been placed in General McCook's corps. With the Army of the Ohio, under General Buell, the division fell back before Bragg's army to Nashville, via Murfreesboro, and from thence, on the 8th of September marched toward the Ohio river, going by way of Bowling Green and Munfordsville to Louisville.

Remaining at Louisville about a week, it marched with its division on a new campaign after Bragg. On the 8th of October it participated in the battle of Chaplin Hills, near Perryville, being hotly engaged for six hours, the battery maintaining its position, supported by the Thirty-Eighth Indiana, Thirty-Third Ohio and Tenth Wisconsin regiments, an hour longer than any other command on the field, and was highly complimented by the General commanding, for gallant and meritorious conduct during the engagement. The loss to the battery was two men killed and eighteen wounded, thirty-two horses killed and crippled, and one caisson chest blown up by the enemy's shell. From Perryville the Fifth Battery marched via Harrodsburg, Danville, and Stamford to Crab Orchard, and thence via Stamford, Greensburg, and Glasgow, to Bowling Green, where the army was re-organized, General Buell being relieved by General Rosecrans. Moving southward, the battery reached Nashville on the 9th of November, and, on the 24th of December, it was transferred to the Second Division, under General R. W. Johnson. On the 26th of December, the battery again moved, with its division, and became engaged with the enemy at Triune, on the 27th, and skirmished with him until the 30th, when the battle of Stone river was begun. Early on the morning of the 31st, the Second Division was fiercely assailed by a superior force, and with the First and Third Divisions of the Twentieth (McCook's) Corps, was routed and driven back nearly two miles, losing heavily in men and material. The Fifth Battery was severely cut up, losing three men killed and sixteen men and officers wounded—one mortally. Thirty-two horses and two guns were lost. The division commander, in his official report, says: "Captain Simonson managed his battery with skill and courage, and with it did good execution. He lost two guns, but not until the horses had been killed, and the guns disabled.' In the repulse of the enemy on the two last days of the engagement, the battery, with its remaining guns, did effective service.

After this battle the Fifth Battery went into winter quarters at Murfreesboro, and spent the succeeding five months in drilling and preparing for the succeeding campaign. On the 24th of June, 1863, the army was put in motion, the battery being still in the Third Brigade of the Second Division of the Twentieth Army Corps. On the same day it became engaged with the enemy at Liberty Gap, and heavy skirmishing continued for three days, when the enemy fell back and concentrated his force at Tullahoma. The whole Army of the Cumberland advanced upon that position, which was evacuated as the national forces approached, and quiet possession was taken on the 2d of July. On the 16th of August, the army again moved southward, the Twentieth Corps forming the right wing. Proceeding via Winchester and Salem down the Paint Rock, and then up the Hurricane Fork of that stream, and thence across the Cumberland Mountains to Bellefonte, Alabama, it moved from there to Stevenson, and crossed the Tennessee river at Caperton's ferry, on the 31st of August. After passing over Sand Mountain, and Lookout and Pigeon-toe Ridges, to Hog Jaw Valley, Walker county, Georgia, it was discovered that the command had advanced too far, when it fell back across Pigeon-Toe Ridge to Winston Springs, and thence over the Lookout Ridge into Chicamauga Valley to Pond Springs, and formed a junction with the main army, on the 19th of September. About noon on that day, the division became engaged and fought till after dark, the battery losing one gun and several horses. The next morning at sunrise, the battle was renewed with great fury, and the battery remained in position, heavily pressed, until two o'clock in the afternoon, when it was ordered to fall back, in doing which it lost another gun. It finally reached the main line, near Ringold, after dark. On the 22d it retired to the lines around Chattanooga. In this engagement the Fifth Battery lost one killed, nine wounded, and two prisoners. Twenty-six horses and two guns were lost.

In November the battery was ordered to Shell Mound, Tennessee, to guard the river and road from Bridgeport to Chattanooga. To reach that point the troops were obliged to cross the mountains bordering the Tennessee river called Waldron's ridge, up which the men were obliged to draw the guns and caissons with the picket ropes, one hundred men being required to haul one gun. The ascent of three miles was thus made in one and a half days. At Shell Mound the battery went into winter quarters, and there remained until February, 1864, when it moved to Blue Springs, Tennessee, and was attached to the First (Stanley's) Division of the Fourth Corps. During the winter fifteen men of the battery re-enlisted. In February a reconnoissance was made of the enemy's position on Buzzard Roost, under the command of General Palmer, in which the battery participated, and was actively engaged, without loss.

On the 3d of May, began the memorable campaign against Atlanta, during which the battery occupied a constant position in the advance, marching with its division and participating in the following engagements: Tunnel Hill, Rocky Face Ridge, Resacca, near Adairsville, Kingston, Cassville, Pine Mountain, before Kenesaw Mountain, New Hope Church, Hurst's Station, Peach Tree Creek, before Atlanta, and at Jonesboro. At Pine Mountain, while engaged in placing the battery in position, the gallant Captain Simonson was killed and one man wounded. Other losses were sustained as follows: At New Hope Church, two killed and two wounded; At Hurst's Station, one mortally wounded, and two slightly wounded; before Kenesaw, one killed and one wounded: at Peach Tree Creek, one killed. On the 20th of September the battery turned over its guns, horses and equipments to the ordnance officer at Atlanta, and the non-veterans were ordered to report at Indianapolis for muster-out. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 18th of November, the non-veterans were mustered out on the 26th of November, 1864. The veterans and remaining recruits were transferred to the Seventh Battery, and on the 5th of April, 1865, they were permanently consolidated with that battery, and continued to serve with it until its final muster-out, on the 20th of July, 1865.

At Pine Mountain, the shot that killed Lieutenant General Polk, of the rebel army, was fired from one of the Rodman guns of the Fifth Battery. The total losses to the battery during its term of service were as follows: Killed nine, mortally wounded three, wounded forty-eight, died of disease, twenty-one, prisoners of war, three; total eighty-four. It lost in battle four guns, and expended over sixty thousand rounds of ammunition. It has renewed its armament three times during its term of service.

SIXTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Sixth Battery of Light Artillery was recruited at Evansville and mustered into the service at Indianapolis on the 7th of September, 1861, with FREDERICK BEHR as Captain. On the 2d of October the battery left Indianapolis by rail, and proceeded by the way of Evansville to Henderson, Kentucky. From thence it moved to Calhoun, South Carrollton, and Owensburg, Kentucky, being on duty at each place until the spring of 1862, when it joined General Sherman's command at Paducah. On the 4th of March the Sixth Battery moved with Sherman's Division up the Tennessee River, on steamers, and disembarked at Pittsburg Landing. Moving to the bridge over Owl Creek on the Purdy road, it guarded the bridge, and was in that position on the extreme right, when, on the morning of the 6th of April, the rapid advance of the enemy opened the battle of Shiloh. For over two hours the battery held its position, supported by McDowell's Brigade, but was eventually forced back by the strong columns of the enemy. While the battery was retiring General Sherman met it at the intersection of the Corinth road, and gave orders to Captain Behr to bring his guns into battery. The Captain had hardly given the order to his men when he was struck by a musket ball, and fell from his horse. This caused confusion, and the enemy, pressing vigorously forward, captured most of the guns of the battery, killing sixty-eight horses. Captain Behr was killed, and four men wounded. After the battle of Shiloh the battery procured new guns, and moved with the army upon Corinth. On the 17th of May Lieutenant Michael Mueller was promoted Captain. On the 28th of May, supported by General Denver's brigade, the Sixth Battery had a sharp engagement with the enemy. The guns were unlimbered, and moved by hand to the crest of a hill, and opening a rapid fire, drove the enemy from a strong position, demolished a block-house, from which he annoyed our line of skirmishers, and, dashing forward, the brigade captured and held the ground. Taking position in these advanced works the battery was constantly engaged in the siege of Corinth until its evacuation by the enemy. The battery then moved with a portion of Sherman's troops to Holly Springs, Mississippi, where the enemy was encountered and driven from the town. On the 21st of June the battery moved from Holly Springs, and upon reaching Memphis was stationed at Fort Pickering, where it remained on garrison duty until the 26th of November. At that date the battery moved with General Sherman's troops upon the forces of the rebel General Pemberton, on the Tallahatchie river. The enemy, however, abandoned his works and retreated to Grenada, and the battery returned with the column to Lagrange, where one section was detached to Lafayette, and the other to Collierville, Tennessee. In June, 1863, the battery marched to Memphis, embarked on a steamer, and, moving down the Mississippi river, joined the army of General Grant then engaged in the siege of Vicksburg. The battery took part in the operations at Vicksburg until its surrender, and then moved with Sherman's column to Big Black river, where it had an engagement on the 6th of July, with the forces of the rebel General Johnson. Crossing the river, the battery moved to Jackson, Mississippi, and took part in the siege of that place until its evacuation, when it moved to Oak Ridge, Mississippi, and was assigned to the Third Brigade, Third Division, Fifteenth Army Corps. The battery then went into camp near Bear Creek, Mississippi.

On the 15th of October, the battery moved with General McPherson's command on an expedition to Brownsville, Mississippi, and shelled the rebels out of a strong position. Returning to Vicksburg on the 7th of November, it moved from thence to Memphis, Lagrange and Pocahontas, Tennessee, where the battery went into camp.

On the 1st of January, 1864, a majority of its members re-enlisted as veterans. From Pocahontas the battery moved to Memphis, and, embarking on a steamer, proceeded to Vicksburg, and, disembarking, marched to Black River Bridge, where it remained until March and then moved to Vicksburg and Memphis. In May it moved with the command of General Sturgis, through northern Mississippi, and, on the 10th of June, was engaged in the battle at Guntown, losing three men and ten horses.

On the 14th of July, the Sixth Battery was engaged in the battle of Tupelo, Mississippi, with a loss of one killed and seven wounded. It then moved with the command of General A. J. Smith, to Oxford, Mississippi, and, returning, arrived at Memphis on the 31st of August. The Sixth Battery was then assigned to duty as a stationed battery at Fort Pickering, and continued as such until ordered to proceed to Indianapolis for muster-out. While stationed here an order for the re-organization of the battery was issued and partially consummated, a number of recruits having been enlisted at Evansville. Leaving Memphis, the Sixth Battery arrived at Indianapolis on the 15th of July, with two officers and forty-eight men, was present at a public ovation to returned soldiers in the State House grove on the 17th, and were welcomed by Governor Morton and others.

On the 22d of July, 1865, the Sixth Battery was mustered out of the service at Indianapolis.

SEVENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Seventh Battery was mustered into the service at Indianapolis on the 2d of December, 1861, with Samuel J. Harris as Captain. Soon after its organization the battery moved to Louisville, and, upon its arrival there, was assigned to General Nelson's division of General Buell's army. From Louisville the Battery moved with its division, and arrived at Nashville immediately after its evacuation by the enemy, on the 26th of February, 1862. From thence the Battery moved to Pittsburg Landing, arriving too late to engage in the battle of Shiloh. Meantime Captain Harris resigned, and Lieut. Swallow was promoted Captain. During the siege of Corinth the battery was actively employed, and, upon its evacuation by the enemy, the battery moved with Buell's army to Huntsville, where it encamped during the summer of 1862. When Bragg moved with his army toward Kentucky, the battery moved with the pursuing column to Louisville, and thence to Perryville, where it took part in the engagement, and then countermarched to Nashville.

Upon the re-organization of the army the battery was assigned to the Third Division (Van Cleves'), and remained at Nashville until December 26, 1862. Upon that date, General Rosecrans's army made a forward movement, resulting in the battle of Stone River. The Seventh Battery, in this terrible battle, was remarkably efficient. Its division commander, General Van Cleve, reported that "the Seventh Indiana Battery, Captain Swallow, joined us on an open field, and rendered efficient aid." The battery was severely engaged during the whole fight, and aided materially in repulsing the enemy, losing four killed and eight wounded. The enemy having evacuated Murfreesboro', the battery encamped near that place, and, in June, 1863, joined in the forward movement upon Chattanooga.

On the 19th and 20th of September, the battery was engaged at the battle of Chicamauga, and, after that terrible but indecisive battle, fell back with the army to Chattanooga. In November the battery was engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge. It then returned to Chattanooga, and took position in its fortifications, and on the 2d of January, 1864, a majority of its members re-enlisted as veterans, and visited home on a furlough. Upon returning to the field, the Seventh Battery moved with General Sherman on his campaign against Atlanta. On the 2d of May, 1864, it was at Ringgold, Georgia.

Captain Swallow was, at this time, promoted Major of the Tenth Indiana Cavalry, and Lieutenant Otho H. Morgan promoted Captain. The battery took part in the skirmishes, battles and movements that resulted in the capture of Atlanta, and after resting a short time in camp at that place, returned to Chattanooga, where it was assigned to duty as a stationed battery and remained at that post until its muster out. The original officers and non-veterans of the battery were mustered out at Chattanooga on the 7th of December, 1864, leaving one hundred and seventeen men, veterans and recruits, whose term of service had not expired, without a commanding officer.

On the 13th of March, 1865, the Eighth Indiana Battery was consolidated with the Seventh, and Lieutenant William Stokes, of the Eighth Battery, appointed Captain of the consolidated companies, designated as the Seventh Battery. On the 5th of April, twenty-four veterans of the Fifth Indiana Battery were transferred to the Seventh Battery.

The battery remained stationed at Chattanooga, until July, 1865, when orders were received to report to Indianapolis for muster out. Starting for home the battery reached Indianapolis on the night of the 11th of July, with three officers and one hundred and eighty-three men, for muster out, representing three commands, (Fifth, Seventh and Eighth Batteries,) that numbered upon leaving the State in 1864, four hundred and sixty men and officers.

Upon the next day the members of the Seventh Battery were present at a reception to returned soldiers in the State House Grove, and were welcomed by addresses from Governor Morton, General Hovey, Dr. Orpheus Everts, and others. On the 20th of July, 1865, the Seventh Battery was mustered out of the service at Indianapolis, its members received final payment and discharge and left for their respective homes.

EIGHTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Eighth Battery of Light Artillery was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis, on the 13th of December, 1861 with George T. Cochran as Captain. On the 24th of January, 1862, the Battery proceeded by rail to Louisville, and was assigned to General Nelson's division. The battery accompanied its division in the movement upon Nashville, and on the 26th of February, reached that city, being the first Union artillery to pass through its streets. Here the battery was assigned to General Wood's division, and with that division made a forced march to Pittsburg Landing, arriving there at the close of the battle of Shiloh.

In the seige of Corinth the Eighth Battery was an active participant, and upon its evacuation, moved with the main army through Northern Alabama to Tuscumbia, having several skirmishes with the enemy. On the 30th of August, the Eighth Battery, under command of Lieutenant George Estep, had a sharp engagement with Forest's rebel cavalry near McMinnville, Tennessee. The rebel command was cut in two, and utterly routed by the fire of artillery alone. It moved with Buell's army in the pursuit of Bragg through Tennessee and Kentucky, and upon reaching Munfordsville, after its surrender by Colonel Wilder, was engaged in driving the rebels from the place, and took position to hold the town while the column moved to Louisville. Soon afterward the battery reached Louisville, and from thence moved in pursuit of the retreating forces of Bragg, skirmishing constantly, and losing several horses, until Perryville was reached. It was present at that fierce engagement. The battery marched with its division until the pursuit was abandoned, and then counter-marched to Nashville, arriving there in November, 1862. While stationed there several foraging expeditions were made, during which the Eighth Battery had several skirmishes with the enemy.

On the 26th of December 1862, the battery left its camp near Nashville, and moved toward the enemy. The Battery accompanied Hascall's brigade, of Wood's Division, the left wing of Rosecrans' army. In the afternoon the advance encountered the enemy near Lavergne, and soon drove him from position. The next morning Hascall's brigade took the advance with Estep's Eighth Battery, and marched steadily forward, driving the enemy across Stewart's Creek. On the 28th, artillery was disposed to hold the bridge at Stewart's Creek. The next day the advance was resumed, until the head of the column arrived within three miles of Murfreesboro. It then became evident that the enemy determined to resist our further advance. The brigades were placed in line of battle and bivouacked on their arms. General Wood's division remained in this position the next day, its skirmishers keeping up an active fire with those of the enemy. On the morning of the 31st, the division commenced the passage of Stone River, while our batteries covered the crossing. A portion of our troops had crossed, when the sudden roar of musketry indicated that our right wing was being severely pressed. Orders were soon received to suspend the crossing, withdraw the troops and reinforce the right and center. Hascall's brigade and Estep's Eighth Battery were detached for this purpose, and aided in gallant style in driving back the enemy. While this attack was in progress, a message was received that the enemy was pressing our left. A force was dispatched and held the enemy in check. As night approached, the enemy opened with artillery. Cox and Estep's batteries gallantly and effectually replied. Darkness put an end to the bloody contest of this memorable day, which found Hascall's and Wagner's brigades, with their supporting batteries, occupying the same ground on which they had gone into the fight in the morning. Cox and Estep's batteries were splendidly served throughout the day and did effective service. Estep's Eighth Battery lost so heavily that it was necessary to make a detail from an infantry regiment to assist in working the guns. Shortly after the battle of Stone River, the enemy evacuated Murfreesboro, and the battery moved with its division through that town and took position in its fortifications. In April, 1863, Lieutenant George Estep was promoted Captain. The Eighth Battery remained at Murfreesboro, until the advance of Rosecrans' army upon Tullahoma, on the 24th of June, 1863, when it joined in the movement which resulted in the expulsion of the rebel army from Middle Tennessee. Halting with the army near Winchester, the Eighth Battery went into camp at Hillsboro, Tennessee.

On the 16th of August the Eighth Battery moved from Hillsboro, with its division, to Thurman, in the Sequatchie Valley, and thence to Chattanooga, and on the 9th of September, entered that place with its division, being the first United States Battery to pass through its streets. From thence the battery moved with its division to Ringold, Georgia, constantly skirmishing with the enemy's rear guard, and thence to Gordon's Mill, where Rosecrans' army was endeavoring to concentrate. While our columns were moving, the enemy's forces were encountered and the battle of Chicamauga resulted. The Eighth Battery was severely engaged in this battle, losing two officers wounded, two men killed, seven wounded and seven captured, and forty-three horses killed and disabled. A fierce charge of the enemy through a gap in our lines, captured the battery, but it was soon recaptured by Bradley's brigade, of Sheridan's Division. After two days of terrible fighting, Rosecrans' army fell back to Chattanooga and the Eighth Battery was stationed in the fortifications of that place. On the 25th of November, the battery was engaged in the battle of Mission Ridge, which resulted in raising the seige of Chattanooga, and driving the rebel army beyond Rocky Face Ridge. The Eighth Battery was then assigned as a stationed battery to the important military post of Chattanooga.

In May, 1864, General Sherman's army moved from Chattanooga on its campaign against Atlanta, and Captain George Estep was detached as Acting Assistant Ordnance officer of the 14th corps, and accompanied that corps to Atlanta, and subsequently to Savannah, Georgia. The Eighth Battery was left at Chattanooga under command of Lieutenant Samuel Winsor. On the 15th of May, 1864, General Hooker drove the enemy from several hills near Resacca, and captured a four gun battery, called the First Georgia Artillery. Lieutenant Winsor was detailed to command these captured guns, and placing them in position in redoubts at Resacca, was engaged in garrison duty at that place during the summer and fall of 1864, and on the 12th of October, 1864, used his guns effectively upon the forces of the rebel General Hood, then threatening that place. Lieutenant Stokes meanwhile commanded the Battery at Chattanooga. Upon the evacuation of the railroad south of Dalton, Lieutenant Winsor destroyed the works at Resacca, and returned to his battery at Chattanooga. In April, 1864, a number of members of the Eighth Battery, re-enlisted as veterans. In January, 1865, the non-veterans were mustered out and left for home. On the 13th of March, the Eighth Battery was consolidated with the Seventh Indiana Battery and Lieutenant William Stokes appointed Captain of the consolidated companies known as the Seventh Battery. The Seventh Battery was stationed at Chattanooga until its muster out.

NINTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

Portions of the recruits for the Ninth Battery of Light Artillery entered the general rendezvous at Indianapolis on the 5th of December, 1861. On the 20th of December, the minimum number of men required for a battery organization being recruited, and the company organization completed, the battery was mustered into service at Indianapolis. On the 1st of January, 1862, NOAH S. THOMPSON was commissioned as Captain, and on the 27th of that month the battery left Indianapolis, by rail, for Cairo, and on arriving there reported to General Paine for duty. Owing to informality in the muster-in of the organization at Indianapolis, the officers and men of the battery, in pursuance of orders from General Paine, were re-mustered into service on the 25th of February, at Cairo, Illinois. The battery remained in camp at Cairo until the 27th of March, drilling and preparing for active service. It then embarked on a steamer, and proceeded up the Ohio and Tennessee rivers to Crump's Landing, where it disembarked on the 31st of March, and joined the division of General Lew. Wallace. After a reconnoisance toward Adamsville it returned to camp near Crump's Landing, and on the 6th of April moved toward Shiloh Church. After marching almost to the point of destination, it was discovered that the division, if its course had been continued, would have reached the rear of the enemy's lines. Its steps were retraced and another road taken, by which the battle field of Shiloh was reached just as the sun was setting on the 6th. At 11 o'clock that night the Ninth Battery moved into position in front of a rebel battery on the enemy's extreme left,(our right). On the morning of the 7th the battery opened fire at daylight, being the first to commence the fire from our lines. The firing was kept up continuously from this position for about half an hour, when, the enemy's front being broken, he fell back, and our lines advanced nearly a mile. From the new position the battery continued to pour the iron hail into the enemy, until about four o'clock in the afternoon, when, all of its shot having been exhausted, it was relieved During the day the Ninth Battery fired from its six guns eleven hundred and fifty-two rounds, and sustained a loss of one man killed, five men wounded, and five horses killed.

After this action the battery moved into the line in front, and formed part of the army that besieged Corinth; but before the march was made upon that place, it moved from Shiloh battle field, with Wallace's division, on an expedition to Purdy, Tennessee, and return. During the siege of Corinth it served with Wallace's division in the "third reserve." After the evacuation of Corinth the battery moved to Bolivar, Tennessee, with Wallace's force. There it was detached from that command, and became attached to the right wing of the Thirteenth (McPherson's) Corps, remaining at Bolivar until November following. Captain Thompson having been discharged, Lieutenant George R. Brown assumed the command of the battery, and continued to command it until its muster out of service. It then moved with the army of General Grant to Holly Springs, Mississippi, and thence across the country to the Tallahatchie river, crossing which it moved to Oxford, and thence to Yockney creek, While at that place news was received that Van Dorn's rebel force had cut Grant's communications, and had captured Holly Springs with its immense stores of supplies. This forced the army to retrace its steps to the crossing of the Tallahatchie river, which point was reached on the 24th of December. At that place the battery became separated from the main army, and remained there until the 20th of January, 1863, when it moved with a division of troops to Moscow, Tennessee. From thence it marched to Collierville, and to Nevill's station, and from there to Memphis. On arriving at Memphis it was immediately sent to Columbus, Kentucky, under orders to report to General Asboth. On the 26th of April it embarked for Cape Girardeau, Missouri, to reinforce General McNeil, then being attacked by the rebel General Marmaduke. The battery, however, reached there too late to take part in the action, and immediately returned to Columbus.

The battery remained on duty at Columbus until about the 10th of July, when it was ordered to Clinton, Kentucky, to join the brigade under command of Colonel George E. Waring, and with it marched on a campaign against Roddy's forces, through Mayfield and Murray, Kentucky, to Conyersville, Tennessee. Receiving orders at that place to return, it marched back to Boydsville, Kentucky, and from thence, by way of the rebel "Camp Beauregard," to Union City, Tennessee, arriving there on the 4th of August. At that place it went into quarters, and there remained until the 20th of December, when it joined the division of General A. J. Smith, and marched with it toward Jackson, Tennessee, in pursuit of Forrest. On arriving at Huntington the division halted, in consequence of Forrest's escape, and then moved to Paris, Tennessee, from which place it returned to Union City. Remaining at Union City until the 23d of January, 1864, it then moved to Columbus, Kentucky, where it immediately embarked for Vicksburg. On arriving at that place it was attached to Colonel Moore's brigade of General A. J. Smith's division of the Sixteenth Army Corps, and with it marched from Vicksburg, on the 3d of February, on the expedition to Meridian, Mississippi. It engaged the enemy near Queen's Hill, where a brief battle was fought, and from that time on until the division reached the vicinity of Jackson, the battery was, almost constantly, engaged in skirmishing. Upon arriving at Meridian it assisted in the destruction of the town and the railroad in that vicinity. From Meridian it moved to Marion, where it remained nearly a week, and then moved westward to Pearl river on the return march.

After crossing Pearl river, it moved to Canton, and there remained until the arrival of a provision train from Vicksburg. While at Canton, one man of the battery was killed by guerrillas, while out with a foraging party. From Canton the battery marched direct to Vicksbug, where it rested until the 8th of March. During this campaign thirty-two of the enlisted men of the battery re-enlisted as veteran volunteers, and these were re-mustered as veterans at Vicksburg, on the 19th of February.

On the 8th of March the Ninth Battery left its camp in the rear of Vicksburg, and on the following day embarked on the steamer "Chouteau" for Red River, General A. J. Smith commanding the detachments of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Corps, composing the expedition, and General Mower the two divisions of the command. On the 10th the expedition moved from Vicksburg, and reached the mouth of Red River on the 11th. Entering Atchafalaya river on the 12th, it disembarked at Semmesport on the following day and marched to Fort Dick Taylor, the evacuation of which was compelled by the advance of the expedition. On the 14th the enemy was pursued to Mansura. Leaving him at that point, the command moved off to the right, and, passing through Marksville, reached Fort De Russey about three o'clock in the afternoon of the 14th. The battery was ordered into position and took part in the capture of the works. On the 15th the battery re-embarked on the steamer, and, proceeding to Alexandria, found the city evacuated. Remaining there until the 21st, it then marched with General Mower to Henderson's Hill, where it participated in the capture of the entire rebel garrison. On the next day it returned to Alexandria. On the 26th it left for Cotile Landing, en route for Shreveport. Arriving at the former place on the 27th, it remained inactive until the 2d of April, when it again went on board the steamer and proceeded to Grand Ecore, arriving there on the 3d, at dark.

On the 7th, the battery marched with its division from Grand Ecore towards Shreveport, and reached Pleasant Hill on the night of the 8th. On the next day it was engaged in the battle of Pleasant Hill, in which it captured two guns, but suffered no loss. On the 11th, it returned to Grand Ecore, where it remained in camp until the 20th, and then moved to Nachitoches. At this place it remained on out-post duty until the army of General Banks had crossed Old Red River. On the night of the 21st, it took up its line of march towards Alexandria, covering the rear of the retreating army, and engaging in skirmishes with the enemy at Cloutierville, Cane River Crossing, Cotile Landing and the crossing of the Bayou Rapides. On the 26th, the battery arrived at Alexandria, where it rested until the 1st of May. It then moved out on the Opelousas road, and went into camp until the 6th, and then marched to Bayou Boeuf, where, on that and the following day, it skirmished with the enemy. On the 14th, it moved towards Marksville, arriving there on the 16th, and participating in the fight that occurred on the prairie between Marksville and Mansura. On the 17th, the battery marched to Yellow Bayou, and there took a conspicuous part in the battle at that place. Arriving at the mouth of Red River on the 19th, the battery embarked on transports and proceeded to Vicksburg, where it remained in camp until the 3d of June.

Leaving Vicksburg, the Ninth Battery moved up the Mississippi river to Chicot or Old River Lake, and, disembarking, fought the enemy, under Marmaduke, defeating him, and raising the blockade established by the rebels at Columbia, Arkansas. On the 7th, it re-embarked, and proceeded to Memphis, arriving there on the 9th. At Memphis the veterans were furloughed home, leaving behind a detachment which marched with the expedition into northern Mississippi, and participated in the battle of Tupelo on the 14th of July. Returning to Memphis from this expedition, on the 23d of July, it there rested until the 8th of August. The battery then marched with General A. J. Smith's command to look after Forrest. On reaching Oxford, news was received that that officer had entered Memphis, when the command was, at once, marched back again, arriving there on the 30th of August. The battery lay in camp until the 8th of September, and then proceeded, by steamer, to Jefferson Barracks, Missouri, reaching there on the 19th. After a brief expedition to De Soto, the battery, on the 2d of October, started with General A. J. Smith's command in pursuit of the rebel General Price through Missouri, following him to the Kansas border. After a march of seven hundred and twenty miles, the regiment reached St. Louis, where it remained until the 25th of November.

Proceeding with General Smith's forces on transports to Nashville, it reached there on the 30th of November, and, on the 15th and 16th of December, participated in the battle before that city. On the 17th, it started with Smith's command in pursuit of Hood's retreating army, and arrived at Clifton, on the Tennessee river, on the 1st of January, 1865, from whence it proceeded, on transports, to Eastport, Mississippi. On the 26th of January, the battery being ordered to report to Indianapolis for the muster-out of the non-veterans, and the re-organization of the company, embarked on board the steamer Eclipse. Reaching Johnsonville, one hundred and fifteen miles above Paducah, at seven o'clock the same evening, the steamer laid up for the night. About six o'clock on the morning of the 27th, while getting ready for departure, the steamer exploded, and, catching on fire, was soon after consumed. The steamers Lady Franklin and Madison, and the gunboat Lexington, were alongside, and their officers and men rendered all the aid in their power to save the wounded and others from being burned up or drowned. Of the sixty-eight men and two officers of the Ninth Battery on board the Eclipse, but ten escaped uninjured. Many were killed outright, some were drowned, and a great many severely wounded. Of the whole number, thirty were either killed or died subsequently from their wounds. The saved were taken to Paducah, from whence the wounded were transferred to the general hospital at Evansville. The uninjured and slightly wounded were ordered to proceed to Indianapolis, and, on arrival there, the non-veterans were mustered out of service on the 6th of March, 1865. The veterans and recruits were then sent to Camp Butler, Illinois, where they remained until June, and then proceeded to Indianapolis. Authority for the re-organization of the battery was given by the War Department during the month of March, and under it a number of recruits were obtained, but, on the receipt of the news of the capture of Richmond and surrender of Lee's army, an order was issued for the discharge of all the light batteries. This latter order canceled the previous authority to re-organize the company, and, on the 26th of June, 1865, the detachment of veterans and recruits, fifty in number, were mustered out of service at Indianapolis.

TENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Tenth Battery of Light Artillery was ordered to be raised on the 13th of November, 1861, and was recruited in the Eighth Congressional District during the remainder of the fall and winter of that year, with recruiting headquarters at Lafayette. Rendezvousing at Indianapolis it was there mustered into service on the 25th of January, 1861, with JEROME B. COX as Captain, and on the same day left the State Capital for Louisville. At that place it went into Camp Gilbert, where it remained until February 1862, drilling and preparing for the Tennessee campaign. Joining General Nelson's division of Buell's army, it marched with it to Nashville, assisting in the capture of that place. In March the division moved to the Tennessee river and crossing over participated in the battle of Shiloh on the second day. The battery, however, owing to the lack of transportation, was compelled to remain at Savannah until after the battle. After camping on the field of Shiloh for a brief period the battery moved with the army against Corinth and participated in the siege of that place. Upon its evacuation it marched with Buell's army into Northern Alabama to Athens where it was placed in the reserve artillery. Remaining there until the latter part of July, it then moved to Decherd Station, Tennessee, where it joined Gen. Thomas J. Wood's division, and, with that division, campaigned through Northern Alabama and Southern Tennessee. Upon the advance of Bragg's army it fell back to Nashville, and from thence marched through Kentucky to Louisville. From Louisville the battery moved through Kentucky, participating in the campaign that ended in driving from that State the rebel General Bragg's invading army.

In November the battery returned to Nashville, via Glasgow, where it remained until General Rosecrans commenced his movement against Murfreesboro. On the morning of the 26th of December with Wood's division, it broke up its encampment in the vicinity of Nashville, and marching with the left wing of the Fourteenth Army Corps to Lavergne, portions of the enemy were there encountered and some fighting ensued. On the 29th, the division moved forward, Cox's battery supporting Wagner's brigade, and on arriving within two miles and a half of Murfreesboro the rebel army, under Bragg, was discovered in full force, in line of battle. The division was halted for the afternoon and night. On the following day, the skirmishers kept up an active fire with the enemy, the rebels, about nine A. M., opening fire upon Cox's battery (which was between the pike and the railroad, and its front partially covered by woods.) The artillery fire of the enemy was soon silenced by the well directed shots of the battery. On the 31st the engagement became general, and during the day the extreme left of the division became the object of the enemy's attention. Skirmishers were seen descending the slope on the opposite side of Stone river, as also working their way down the stream for the purpose, apparently, of gaining our left flank and rear. A few well directed charges of grape and canister from Cox's battery, drove them back. The battery did most excellent service combatting the enemy's artillery, posted on the hights on the southern side of the river. The enemy concluded his operations against the left as night approached, by opening on it with his artillery. Cox's battery gallantly and effectually replied, but darkness soon put an end to this artillery duel. On the 1st of January, 1863, the division lay in line of battle all day, with nothing more than picket firing and an occasional artillery duel to break the silence. On the 2d the artillery firing was kept up quite heavily during most of the day, and on the following day the battle ended with occasional picket firing. During the entire engagement at Stone River the Tenth Battery had one killed and four wounded.

After this battle the battery remained in the vicinity of Murfreesboro until the forward movement against Tullahoma was commenced. On the 2d of June, 1863, Captain Cox resigned, when Lieutenant W. A. Naylor was promoted to the Captaincy. On the 24th of June the army moved southward, and, on reaching Tullahoma, found the place evacuated. On the 16th of August the movement over the Cumberland mountains began. General Wood moved from Hillsboro, by Pelham, to Thurman, in Sequatchie Valley. From thence Wagner's brigade (the Tenth Battery accompanying it), moved to the Tennessee river, opposite Chattanooga, the battery shelling the town on several occasions.

During the movement that resulted in the battle of Chicamauga, the battery was stationed at Chattanooga, with Wagner's brigade, which garrisoned that post. In October the battery was moved to Moccasin Point, on the north side of the Tennessee river, from which place it did most effectual service in shelling the enemy's works on Lookout Mountain.

On the 25th of November, 1863, the battery participated in the storming of Mission Ridge, after which it continued in the vicinity of Chattanooga, where, during the winter, forty-five of the men re-enlisted as veteran volunteers. In the spring of 1864 the Tenth Battery lost its identity, eighty-eight of the men being transferred to the Fifth and Eighteenth Indiana Batteries, and with those organizations participated in the campaign against Atlanta. The remainder, forty in number, were placed on the gunboat "Stone River," at Decatur, Alabama, where they did duty as gunboatmen until the 19th of June, 1865, when the battery was brought together again, and sent to Huntsville, Alabama. On the 2d of July it received orders to report at Indianapolis for muster out of service. Arriving there on the 6th of July, with about seventy men for discharge, it was on the following day publicly received in the State House Grove, and addressed by Governor Morton, General Mansfield and others. On the 10th of July the battery was finally mustered out and discharged from service.

ELEVENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Eleventh Battery was recruited at Fort Wayne, and mustered into the service at Indianapolis on the 17th of December, 1861, with ARNULD SUTERMEISTER as Captain. Soon after its organization the battery proceeded to Louisville, and moved with General Buell's army to Nashville, arriving there on the 26th of February, 1862. From thence the battery moved with its division to Pittsburg Landing, arriving there at the close of the battle of Shiloh, and participated in the siege of Corinth which followed. Upon the evacuation of Corinth, the battery moved with the main army through northern Mississippi to Tuscumbia, Alabama, and thence to Huntsville, where it went into camp in July. The rebel General Bragg having transferred a large part of his army through Alabama and Georgia, reached Chattanooga in advance of General Buell's forces, turned his left, and, moving up the Sequatchie valley, crossed Tennessee, and entered Kentucky. General Buell's army fell back to Nashville, and then moved in pursuit of the rebel army. The battery moved with the main column, and, after the pursuit of Bragg had ceased, returned to Nashville, and, upon the re-organization of the army under General Rosecrans, was assigned to the Third Division, Twenty-First Army Corps. After the battle of Stone River and occupation of Murfreesboro', the battery went into camp near that place. On the 24th of June, 1863, the battery moved with the main army upon the enemy's position at Tullahoma, which place was abandoned by the enemy, who fell back across the Tennessee river. The battery then halted at Cowan's Station. General Sheridan's division, to which it was assigned, was engaged, during the months of July and August, in guarding the railroad from Decherd, Tennessee, to Stevenson, Alabama, and sections of the Eleventh Battery were stationed at important points along the railroad. On the 16th of August, a general forward movement was made, and General Sheridan's division crossed the Tennessee river at Bridgeport upon a bridge which it had constructed on the 1st of September, and, moving by the way of Trenton, joined its corps near Winston's Gap. From thence the battery moved with its division to Stevens' Gap. On the 19th of September, the battle of Chicamauga began. Sheridan's division moved to support the right of Crittenden's corps at Gordon's Mill. Here a sanguinary engagement took place, with great loss on both sides, but Sheridan's division held its position, and, at one time, gallantly charged the enemy, recapturing a battery. The following day the fight was renewed with great fury, and, the enemy having broken a portion of our line, our army retired to Rossville, and from thence to Chattanooga. The Eleventh Battery was severely engaged in this battle, and lost heavily in killed and wounded. Upon arriving at Chattanooga, the battery took position in the fortifications, and was engaged during the siege of that place. The battery took part in the battle of Mission Ridge, on the 25th of November, and remained at Chattanooga during the following winter.

On the 5th of March, 1864, a number of members of the battery reenlisted as veterans at Chattanooga. In May the battery moved with General Sherman's army upon the campaign against Atlanta, and took part in the principal engagements and movements that crowned that campaign with success. After the capture of Atlanta the Eleventh Battery returned to Chattanooga, where it remained stationed until, on the 21st of Noqember, 1864, sixty-five of its members were transferred to the Eighteenth Indiana Battery, and consolidated with it, and the Eleventh Battery lost its designation, the new organization being known as the Eighteenth Battery. The consolidated battery remained at Chattanooga until orders were received to proceed to Indiana for muster out. On the 7th of June, 1865, the Eighteenth battery was mustered out of the service at Indianapolis.

TWELFTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Twelfth Battery of Light Artillery was recruited at Jeffersonville, organized at Indianapolis on the 20th of December, 1861, and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 25th of January, 1862. On the 22d of February it left the State Capital and proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, where it was, temporarily, assigned to General Thomas' division of Buell's army, and with it moved to Nashville, Tennessee, arriving there on the 6th of March. On the 29th of March, it proceeded across the country with a division of Buell's army to Savannah, on the Tennessee River, but did not reach Pittsburg Landing until after the battle of Shiloh had been fought. While at this place Capt. Sterling resigned and was succeeded in the command by Captain James E. White. In May and June, it took part in the march upon and siege of Corinth, and after the evacuation, moved, with the Army of the Ohio, into Northern Alabama, going as far east as Stevenson, from whence it moved to Nashville, arriving there on the 18th of August. On arriving there it was placed in Fort Negley, where it remained stationed in charge of the siege guns of the garrison during the remainder of its term of service. On the 5th of November, 1862, the city was attacked by the rebel forces under Breckenridge, Forrest and Morgan, and during the engagement, the guns of Fort Negley, manned by the Twelfth Battery, did good service in driving the rebel advance from the roads leading to the city. After the battle of Chicamauga, one half of the battery, under the command of Lieuteanant James A. Dunwoody, was detached and ordered to Chattanooga, where it arrived in time to take an honorable part in the great victories at Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge, after which it rejoined the battery at Nashville. In the month of January, 1864, forty-eight men of the battery re-enlisted as veterans. During the battle before Nashville on the 15th and 16th of December, 1864, the battery was actively engaged. On the 23d of December, 1864, thirty non-veterans were mustered out of service, because of the expiration of their term of service.

Captain White having resigned, Lieutenant Dunwoody was, on the 1st of March, 1865, commissioned as Captain.

The Twelfth Battery was kept well recruited up, and when the order for muster out reached it, the number of enlisted men upon its rolls exceeded the maximum number allowed to light battery organizations. On the 1st of July, 1865, the battery under command of Captain Dunwoody reached Indianapolis with five officers and one hundred and seventy men for final discharge, and on the 7th of July, 1865, these were mustered out of service.

THIRTEENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Thirteenth Battery of Light Artillery was organized at Indianapolis during the winter of 1861, and was mustered into service at the same place on the 22d of February, 1862, with SEWELL COULSON, as Captain. Immediately after its muster the battery proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, and from thence was detached as cavalry for the purpose of clearing the country of guerilla bands. While engaged in this duty in Owen county, the mounted artillerymen of the Thirteenth Battery had a sharp skirmish at Monterey, on the Kentucky river, utterly routing the enemy, capturing over one hundred prisoners, and losing but one man killed. During the summer of 1862 the Thirteenth Battery was actively engaged in checking, and pursuing the forces of the rebel John H. Morgan, who was at that time making frequent raids through Kentucky, pouncing upon small garrisons and destroying the railroad.

On the 15th of September a portion of the Thirteenth Battery reached Munfordsville, then threatened by the advance of the rebel army under General Bragg. The place was at once invested by the enemy, and after two days sharp fighting, during which the garrison made a gallant resistance, Munfordsville was surrendered, and the battery lost one gun.

Upon Bragg's advance toward Louisville, the battery was engaged in repelling the head of the column of his left wing, and had a sharp artillery duel with a rebel battery. On the 5th of October the enemy's troops, under John H. Morgan, were encountered by our troops on the Kentucky river, near Versailles. A sharp fight ensued, in which the battery was engaged, and the enemy's forces were driven from the field. Three several times the battery, subsequently, joined in pursuit of Morgan's band, and drove him from Kentucky.

On the 7th of December a section of the Thirteenth Battery was stationed at Hartsville, Tennessee, with a brigade of General Dumont's division. At sunrise of that day the rebel General John H. Morgan, with a picked force of fifteen hundred mounted infantry, suddenly appeared, and, after a short fight, notwithstanding Nicklin's guns were well handled, captured the post and troops. The battery lost in this affair two guns, and had two men killed. It then went to Gallatin, to refit, and was placed in charge of Fort Thomas, where it remained until the 23d of January, 1865. At that date the Thirteenth Battery left for Chattanooga, where it was assigned to duty on the forts, and fitted up for service in the Light Artillery Reserve. Here the battery remained until orders were received to repair to Indianapolis for muster-out. Starting for home it arrived at Indianapolis on the 4th of July, was present at a public reception in the State House Grove, at which addresses were made by Governor Morton, General Hovey and others, and on the 5th of July, 1865, the members of the battery, numbering an aggregate of one hundred and forty-six, men and officers, received final payment and discharge. On the 11th of March, 1862, Benjamin S. Nicklin was commissioned Captain of the Battery, which rank he held until the muster out of the battery.

FOURTEENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Fourteenth Battery of Light Artillery was recruited mainly in Wabash, Huntington, Miami and Fayette counties, during the winter of 1861 and 1862, and was organized and mustered into service at at Indianapolis, on the 24th of March, 1862, with Meredith H. Kidd as Captain. On the 11th of April it left the general rendezvous at Indianapolis for St. Louis, and soon after its arrival there, it embarked on board a steamer and proceeded to Pittsburg Landing, on the Tennessee River, arriving there on the 21st of April. From thence it marched with the army toward Corinth and participated in the siege of that place. After it was taken, the battery marched to Jackson, Tennessee, arriving there on the 21st of July. While at Jackson one section of the battery with thirty men, under command of Lieut. J. W. H. McGuire, together with five hundred cavalry, moved out to Lexington, twenty-eight miles east of Jackson, where they were attacked by Forrest's cavalry. The guns were taken by the enemy, and of the men two were killed and twenty-seven captured, (two of whom were severely wounded) together with the officer in command of the section. But one escaped.

On the 3d of June, 1863, the Fourteenth Battery left Jackson and marched to Lagrange, Tennessee, where it remained until October 11th and then proceeded to Pocahontas, Tennessee, remaining in camp at that place until the 23d of November. From Pocahontas the battery moved to Corinth, Mississippi, where it remained in garrison, until that place was evacuated by our forces on the 25th of January, 1864. It then proceeded, by rail, to Memphis, and upon its arrival there immediately embarked on a steamer for Vicksburg.

On the 3d of February the battery left Vicksburg, with a force under General Sherman, for Meridian, Mississippi, and participated in the operations incident to that famous raid, returning to Vicksburg on the 4th of March. During the progress of this movement and subsequently sixty-eight men of the eighty-seven men present, re-enlisted as veteran volunteers. On arriving at Vicksburg the battery was ordered to Memphis where it remained on duty until the 16th of November. Captain Kidd having been promoted Major of the Eleventh Cavalry, Lieutenant Francis W. Morse was, in March, 1864, promoted Captain, and had command of the battery until July, 1865, when he was mustered out because of the expiration of his term of service. In May, 1864, the veterans visited Indiana on furlough and returned to the battery on the 30th of June. The non-veterans and recruits left behind at Memphis, marched with General Sturgis' expedition into Northern Mississippi. The detachment was composed of about thirty-two men with two guns. In the unfortunate affair at Guntown, Mississippi, on the 10th of June, in which General Sturgis lost all of the guns attached to his army, and his entire wagon train, the two guns of the Fourteenth Battery were captured, and with them two men. Besides this loss, five enlisted men were killed and wounded.

Upon leaving Memphis, the battery was ordered to report to Major General A. J. Smith, then at Nashville. Arriving there on the 1st of December, it joined the command of that officer, and with it participated in the battle before Nashville, on the 15th and 16th of December. In the pursuit of Hood's army that followed, the battery participated, marching with Smith's detachment of the Sixteenth Army Corps to Clifton, Tennessee, and from thence proceeded by steamer to Eastport, Mississippi, arriving there on the 13th of January, 1865, after an arduous campaign. On the 7th of February, the battery left Eastport with General Smith's command, on board of transports, and moving down the Tennessee, Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, arrived at New Orleans on the 22d of February. From thence it moved with the forces of General Canby, to Mobile Bay, and, landing near the mouth of Fish River, took a prominent part with the Sixteenth Army Corps in the operations against Mobile. It was actively engaged in the seige and capture of Spanish Fort, and upon the fall of Mobile, marched with the same corps, to Montgomery, Alabama, where it arrived on the 25th of April. At this place it remained until the 15th of August, when it was ordered home. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 29th of August, 1865, with three officers, and one hundred and seven enlisted men, the whole under command of Captain John W. H. McGuire, for final payment and discharge, it was publicly welcomed home, at a reception given in the State House grove, and addressed by General Mansfield on behalf of the State authorities. The battery was mustered out and finally discharged on the 29th of August, 1865.

FIFTEENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Fifteenth Battery of Light Artillery was organized at Indianapolis, and was on duty guarding prisoners at that place, but was not mustered into service until the 5th of July, 1862, with John C. H. Von Sehlen as Captain. On the 5th of July, the battery left Indianapolis by rail, and proceeded to Harper's Ferry, Virginia. On the morning of the 12th of September, the enemy, under Stonewall Jackson, appeared in large force on Maryland Heights, and, after three days' fighting, compelled the surrender of Harper's Ferry, its troops, stores and guns. The members of the battery were paroled and sent to Camp Douglas, and from thence returned to Indianapolis, where new guns were procured. The battery remained until March, 1863, at Indianapolis. At that time it proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, and engaged in pursuit of the rebel General John H. Morgan, and subsequently followed him in his raid through Indiana and Ohio, in June, 1863. After Morgan's capture, the battery moved with General Burnside's army into East Tennessee, in the month of August, and was engaged with the enemy at Kingston, Calhoun, Philadelphia and Loudon. Our troops evacuated Loudon the latter part of October, and the battery was then divided, one portion going to Kingston, twenty miles below, on the Tennessee River, and the other portion to Lenoirs, on the railroad, six miles from Loudon. At Kingston a sharp engagement was had with the enemy, and at Lenoirs a brisk resistance was encountered, but the enemy was driven, and the column moved to Campbell's Station, where the enemy, on the 16th of November, made a desperate effort to retard the advance of our column, and, after a sharp artillery and musketry fire, were repulsed. Another fight took place at Concord, the Fifteenth Battery doing effective service. On the 17th of November, the battery entered Knoxville with Burnside's army, and the rebel army, closing round, commenced the siege of Knoxville. The Fifteenth Battery was efficient during this siege, and aided in the terrible repulse of Longstreet's assaulting rebel brigades. On the 5th of December, upon the approach of General Sherman's column, Longstreet raised the siege, and retreated on the Bristol road towards Virginia. General Burnsides forces moved in pursuit, and encounters were had with the rear guard of the enemy at Blain's Cross Roads and Rutledge, the battery using shot and shell with effect on the enemy's ranks. Further pursuit being discontinued, the battery returned to Knoxville and went into camp.

On the 19th of January, 1864, the Fifteenth Battery started from Knoxville, and marched to Red Clay, Georgia, and, upon arriving there, was assigned to the Third Division (Cox's) Twenty-Third Army Corps. On the 9th of May, the battery moved with its division on the campaign against Atlanta, and engaged the enemy at Rocky Face Ridge. The column then wound through Snake Creek Gap, and, at Resacca, on the 15th, a heavy battle was had with the enemy, driving him from several strong hills. On the 24th, the battery again engaged the enemy near Cartersville, and held a position at Dallas Gap from the 27th of May to the 2d of June, skirmishing sharply with the enemy's artillery. The battery was engaged at Altoona on the 15th, 17th and 18th of June. At Nose Creek, on the 19th and 20th, a severe artillery duel was had. On the 27th, the battery took part in covering our forces in the sanguinary assault on Kenesaw Mountain, and, on the 1st of July, engaged the enemy's batteries in a redoubt named "Fort Riley." On the 18th, General Schofield's corps reached Decatur, and, on the 22d, was fought a severe battle in front of Atlanta, resulting in severe loss to both parties, in which the battery was engaged in incessantly shelling the enemy to prevent his reinforcing an important point, until the Twenty-Third Corps, sweeping down, recovered the lost ground, and the enemy gave way and retired to his intrenchments in front of Atlanta. Our army now faced the enemy in his strong position, and constant skirmishing and artillery firing was carried on. On the 27th of August, the battery moved with its division on the communications of Atlanta, and, on the 1st of September, was engaged at the battle of Jonesboro'. The same night the enemy evacuated Atlanta, and the battery moved with its corps to Decatur, and went into camp.

On the 4th of October, the Fifteenth Battery moved with its corps in pursuit of Hood, and, upon reaching Rome, was detached from Sherman's army, and moved with its corps to Chattanooga, and thence to Columbia, Tennessee. During the 24th and 25th of November, the enemy's advance skirmished with General Schofield's troops at Columbia and, on the 26th, his infantry came up and strongly pressed his lines. The Fifteenth Battery was actively engaged in preventing his advance, and in protecting the passage of our army across Duck River. On the two subsequent days, Schofield's army crossed the river, and fell back to Franklin, reaching there on the morning of the 30th. Line of battle was at once formed on the southern edge of Franklin, and our trains hurried to the north side of Harpeth River. The enemy followed closely, and, reaching our position, made repeated assaults, the fight lasting until late in the night, but without avail, for our position was so well chosen, that every assault was repulsed with great loss to the enemy. During the night our army fell back to Nashville, and took position on its surrounding hights. Hood's army now covered the southern approaches to Nashville, his flanks extending to the Cumberland River on either side. Skirmishing, with artillery and infantry, occurred as some new position was sought to be obtained.

On the 8th of December, the Fifteenth Battery had a lively artillery duel with a battery of the investing foe. On the 15th, General Thomas' army advanced from Nashville, and utterly routed the rebel army of General Hood, the battery moving with the column and taking part in the two days' fight that wiped Hood's army from history as an organized force. The battery then moved with its corps to Clifton, on the Tennessee River, and, embarking on transports, proceeded to Cincinnati, and from thence was conveyed by rail to Washington City. At Alexandria, Virginia, the battery embarked on steamers, with its division, and, on the 9th of February, 1865, reached the mouth of Cape Fear River, and landed upon the peninsula near Fort Fisher.

On the 11th, the enemy's pickets were driven in and a good position obtained. On the 20th, General Cox crossed Town Creek, and captured a large number of prisoners, and, on the 22d, Wilmington was entered, the enemy having abandoned the town. On the 15th of March, our forces left Wilmington, and reached the Neuse River on the 22d, at Cox's Bridge, where a junction was made with General Sherman's army. On the 10th of April, the battery marched with its corps towards Raleigh, and arrived there on the 13th, in the midst of a heavy rain. On the 14th, the further march of our army, in pursuit of the enemy, was brought to a close by a communication from the rebel General Johnson, which ultimately terminated in his surrender. The Fifteenth Battery then moved to Greensboro', and went into camp with its division, where it remained until June, when orders were received to proceed to Indianapolis for muster out. Leaving Greensboro', the battery reached Indianapolis on the 24th of June, with two officers and one hundred and twenty-two men, was present at a reception in the State House grove on the 26th, at which addresses were made by Governor Morton, Generals Hovey and Wilder, and others, and, on the 30th of June, 1865, the Fifteenth Battery received final payment, and was mustered out of the service of the United States.

SIXTEENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Sixteenth Battery of Light Artillery was organized at Lafayette and rendezvoused at Indianapolis, where it was mustered into service on the 24th of March, 1862, with CHARLES A. NAYLOR as Captain. The battery left Indianapolis on the 1st of June, and was conveyed by rail to Washington City, where it went into camp on Capitol Hill. On the 26th of June the Sixteenth Battery was assigned to the Second Division, General Banks' Corps, Army of Virginia, under command of General Pope, and, moving to the front with its corps, participated in the battle of Slaughter's Mountain on the 9th of August. Shortly afterward the advance of General Lee's army forced a series of skirmishes and battles. General Pope was defending the line of the Rappahannock river, with the hope of retarding the advance of the enemy until the Army of the Potomac, then en route from the Peninsula, could affect a junction. The series of engagements which followed commenced on the 22d of August, and ended, on the 1st of September, at the battle of Chantilly.

On the 22d of August the battery opened fire on the enemy, and for two days and nights artillery firing was almost continuous. The enemy boldly pushed his skirmishers to the fords of the Rappahannock, and brisk fighting resulted, both with infantry and artillery. During the first day's fight two guns of the battery were dismounted by the enemy's fire, and eleven horses killed. At midnight the battery was ordered to advance and take position within six hundred yards of the enemy. The movement was performed so quietly that a good position was secured without attracting the attention of the enemy. The next morning Lieutenant Deming's section of the battery opened fire on the enemy. Lieutenants Dutiel and Sturm quickly followed, and soon the entire line of our batteries, extending along the river for eight miles, was engaged. The Sixteenth Battery had but four effective guns, and for nine hours withstood the concentric fire of sixteen guns from the enemy. The battery was stationed in a small clump of pine trees. So severe was the enemy's fire that the trees were stripped of their foliage, and their tops clipped off as with a scythe. At 4 P. M. the rebel batteries withdrew, leaving two disabled guns, three caissons, and a number of their dead. On the 26th Pope's army fell back from the line of the Rappahannock. While engaged in this retrogade movement the enemy were encountered at Sulphur Springs. A sharp skirmish took place, in which the battery handled the enemy so roughly as to cause him to abandon two guns, which were quickly taken possession of and attached to the battery. The battles of Manassas Plains soon followed. On the night of the 28th of August, at the battle of Groveton, the rebel twelve-gun battery, styled the "Washington Light Artillery" attacked the Union lines upon the right, capturing two batteries. The Sixteenth Battery was then thrown forward, and by its effective fire saved our troops from annihilation. The battery then fell back with the army of General Polk to the defenses of Washington. Here General McClellan assumed command, and the Sixteenth Battery marched with his army, and took part in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam. After these battles the battery returned to Washington, and was stationed at Fort Corcoran. In October Lieutenant Deming drew two sections of guns at Washington, and proceeded by the way of Harper's Ferry, Leesburg, and Snicker's Gap, to join the forces of General Reynolds, then near Warrenton, Virginia. When near Snicker's Gap, on the 11th of November, the Lieutenant's command was attacked by three hundred of Mosby's and White's rebel cavalry. The Lieutenant, having no gunners, and nothing but drivers, was compelled to manage the guns himself, and after a fighting retreat of twenty-eight miles, crossed the Potomac river at Berlin, saving his guns, and losing four men killed and three wounded. On the 1st of May, 1863, Captain Naylor having resigned, Lieutenant Charles R. Deming was appointed Captain of the battery. The Sixteenth Battery remained stationed in the defenses of Washington City until June, 1865. On the 21st of April, 1865, Captain Deming was mustered out by reason of expiration of term of service. and Lieutenant Benjamin W. Livermore appointed Captain. The Sxteenth Battery left Washington for Indianapolis with orders for muster out, arriving there on the 25th of June, with five officers and one hundred and eighty men, and was mustered out at Indianapolis on the 5th of July, 1865, when its members received final pay and discharge, and left for their respective homes.

SEVENTEENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Seventeenth Battery of Light Artillery was organized at Indianapolis on the 13th of March, 1862, with MILTON L. MINER as Captain, and was mustered into service on the 20th of May, 1862. On the 5th of July it left Indianapolis for Baltimore, where it remained in camp during the summer and fall of that year, with the exception of a brief expedition to Gettysburg at the time of Stonewall Jackson's invasion of Maryland. From Baltimore the battery moved to Harper's Ferry, arriving there on the 28th of December, 1862. With the exception of a brief period, during which it was transferred to Frederick City, the battery remained in garrison at Harper's Ferry from the date of its arrival there until the summer of 1864. During its stay at that place it participated in engagements at Harper's Ferry on the 6th of July, 1863, losing one man man wounded, and at Charlestown on the 18th of October, 1863, losing five men wounded.

When General Sheridan assumed the command of the troops in the Shenandoah Valley, those stationed at Harper's Ferry and vicinity entered, at once, upon an active campaign. The Seventeenth Battery participated in all the operations of Sheridan's army, engaging the enemy from Maryland Hights on the 4th of July, 1864, and at Halltown on the 24th of August. In the grand movement against the forces of the rebel General Early the battery took part in the battle of Opequan on the 19th of September, losing six men wounded; at Fisher's Hill on the 21st of September; at New Market on the 23d of September; and at Cedar Creek on the 19th of October. In the latter engagement the battery lost five men killed and fifteen wounded, and twenty horses killed. In the morning, when the tide of the battle was against us, the battery lost three guns, but these were recaptured in the evening, when our victorious army, under the immediate command of Sheridan, drove the enemy from the field.

Upon the conclusion of this campaign the battery was stationed near Frederick City, and then moved to Winchester, where it remained until the 19th of June, 1865. At that date it was ordered to report to Indianapolis for muster-out of service, arriving there on the 3d of July, with three officers and one hundred and eight men for final discharge and payment. The battery was present at a reception given to returned regiments and batteries in the Capital grounds, on which occasion the soldiers were addressed by Governor Morton and General Hovey. On the 8th of July, 1865, the battery was mustered out of service, and the officers and men were finally discharged and paid. During it term of service two officers died of disease: Captain Milton L. Miner and Lieutenant Howard Brown. Upon Captain Miner's death, on the 8th of October, 1864, Lieutenant Hezekiah Hinkson was promoted to fill the vacancy, and had the command of the battery from that time until its muster out of service.

EIGHTEENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Eighteenth Battery of Light Artillery, was organized at Indianapolis, and mustered into the service on the 24th of August, 1862, with Eli Lilly as Captain. Soon after its organization it left for the front, and upon arriving at Louisville, was assigned to the Fourth Division, Fourteenth Army Corps. From Louisville it marched to Frankfort, and from thence to Bowling Green and Gallatin, Tennessee. Upon the occupation of Murfreesboro by the army of General Rosecrans, the battery moved to that place, where it remained in camp until a general forward movement was made. On the 24th of June, 1863, General Rosecrans' army moved toward Tullahoma, Wilders' brigade, to which the Eighteenth Battery was assigned, being in the advance. At Hoovers' Gap the enemy were encountered in a strongly fortified position. Wilder's Brigade charged and drove the enemy through the Gap upon his reserves. Here he formed line of battle and resisted our further advance. Lilly's Battery then opened an effective fire and the enemy was driven from the field. The battery then marched with its brigade to Manchester, and from thence to Decherd, Tennessee, where the army halted for a short time preparatory to further movements. On the 16th of August the movement over Cumberland Mountains began. The battery moved with its brigade and reached Chattanooga soon after it was abandoned by the enemy. Moving in pursuit of the enemy, the battery became engaged in the battle of Chicamauga, on the 19th of September, and aided in repelling a charge of Longstreet's rebel columns, mowing down the enemy with terrible effect. The battery then fell back to Chattanooga, and, moving up the Tennessee River, guarded the fords. On the 1st of October, the battery marched with General Crook's command in pursuit of the rebel General Wheeler, who had crossed the Tennessee River, and was moving through Sequatchie Valley. Moving over Waldron's Ridge into Sequatchie Valley, and thence across the Cumberland mountains, the enemy were encountered at Thompsons' Cove, and routed. On the 4th the command overtook the enemy near McMinnville, and had a sharp fight. Lilly's Eighteenth Battery opened with vigor, at one time killing one man and four horses at one shot. The enemy was driven through McMinnville in great confusion. The command reached Murfreesboro, and moved from thence through Shellbyville toward Farmington. On the 7th near Farmington the enemy made another stand. Our cavalry dismounted and charged across open fields, and, after a determined fight, completely routed the enemy. The command then proceeded to Huntsville, Alabama, and halted for a short time. After the battle at Mission Ridge, the Battery moved with its division to the relief of General Burnside at Knoxville, and was engaged at Mossy Creek, Fair Garden and Dandridge, East Tennessee. The battery then returned to Knoxville, and camped. In April 1864, Captain Lilly was promoted Major of the 9th Indiana Cavalry, and Lieutenant Moses M. Beck appointed Captain. In May the Eighteenth Battery marched with Sherman's army on the campaign against Atlanta, and was present and took an active part in the engagements at Resacca, Stylesboro, Cassville, Lost Mountain, Vining's Bridge, Newnan, Hopkinsville, and West Point, and after the evacuation of Atlanta, went into camp near that place. Upon Hood's movement north, the battery marched with its corps in pursuit, and then moved to Nashville. From Nashville the battery moved to Hopkinsville, Kentucky, where an engagement was had with the enemy, and then, returning by the way of Nashville, proceeded to Eastport, Mississippi, and from thence marched with General Wilson's command to Selma, Alabama, where a sharp engagement was had with the enemy, and then moved through the interior of Alabama and Georgia, to West Point and Macon, defeating the enemy and destroying large quantities of military stores. The battery then returned to Chattanooga and from thence proceeded to Nashville, having marched during its term of service over five thousand miles, and been transported by railroad over one thousand miles. On the 23d of June, 1865, the Eighteenth Battery left Nashville for Indianapolis for muster out, and reached that place on the 25th. The battery left for the field with one hundred and fifty-one men and officers. In November, 1864, sixty-five members of the Eleventh Indiana Battery, whose term of service had not expired, were transferred to the Eighteenth Battery. The battery has received forty recruits. One officer and thirty-one men have died of disease or been killed in action. Twenty-six men have been discharged for disability. The battery returned with three officers and one hundred and eighty men.

On the 20th of June the Eighteenth Battery was present at a public reception to returned soldiers in the State House Grove, and were welcomed by addresses from Governor Morton, General Hovey, General Wilder, Colonel Ben. Spooner and others. On the 30th of June, 1865, the members of the Eighteenth Battery received final pay and discharge from the service, at Indianapolis, and were mustered out.

NINETEENTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Nineteenth Battery of Light Artillery was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 5th of August, 1862, with SAMUEL J. HARRIS as Captain. Proceeding to Louisville, Kentucky, it joined the Army of the Ohio upon its return to Louisville at the time of the invasion of Kentucky by General Bragg's army, and was assigned to the Thirty-Third Brigade, serving with the Tenth Division thereof. In the campaign against Bragg, through Central Kentucky, it was an active participant. Moving from Louisville with its division (commanded by General J. S. Jackson), it encountered the enemy at Chaplin Hills, near Perryville, on the 8th of October. In the engagement that followed the battery was sent across the main road to the left, and posted on the right of a high level ridge, from which position it kept up a steady fire against the enemy for three hours and a half. When the division gave way, at six o'clock in the afternoon, four of the guns of the battery were captured by the enemy, but these were recovered the next morning, the enemy having left so precipitately that they could not carry off the captured guns. The loss sustained by the Nineteenth Battery in this battle was two killed, thirteen wounded, and three missing; total eighteen.

After the battle at Chaplin Hills the battery moved to Danville and Crab Orchard, in pursuit of the enemy and then marched to Lebanon and Woodsonville. At the latter place it remained until December, when it moved to Glasgow, and from thence to Murfreesboro', Tennessee. While in Kentucky the battery was actively employed, frequently making hard marches after the forces of John Morgan. After a heavy march the battery reached Rosecrans' army the day after the last day's engagement at Stone River. On arriving at Murfreesboro' the battery was assigned to General Reynolds' division of the Fourteenth Corps, and with it remained in camp near that vicinity until the 24th of June, 1863, when the army again moved forward.

General Reynolds' division, with which the Nineteenth Battery was still serving, had the advance of the Fourteenth Corps, Wilder's mounted brigade leading. Wilder's command surprised and captured Hoover's Gap, a defile three miles in length, before the main infantry support of the rebels (two brigades) could come up, and when they did arrive, fought them and held the position until the remainder of Reynolds' division arrived. After a brief fight the division passed through the Gap to Fairfield, and thence to Manchester and Tullahoma. The latter place was found evacuated. From thence it proceeded to University, and on the 16th of August. it moved forward with the army toward Chattanooga, marching over the Cumberland Mountains and crossing the Tennessee river at Shell Mound. On the 10th and 11th of September Lookout Mountain and its ridges were crossed, and on the afternoon of the 18th the whole corps was moved to the left along Chicamauga creek to Crawfish Springs. Reynolds' division was then placed in line of battle, and, on the 19th and 20th, was in the hottest part of the battle of Chicamauga. During that terrible conflict it firmly maintained its position, and was one of the last divisions to leave the field when the retreat to Chattanooga was ordered. The Nineteenth Battery, for the support given this division on both days of the battle of Chicamauga, recieved the commendations of the Generals commanding the division and corps. It sustained a severe loss in killed and wounded, and in the destruction of its horses. Among the wounded was Captain Harris.

After the battle of Chicamauga the Army of the Cumberland was re-organized, and, upon the breaking up of Reynolds' division, the Nineteenth Battery was transferred to the Third Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps, of which General Baird was made the commander. During the storming of Mission Ridge the battery participated, and, after the victory, engaged in the pursuit of the enemy to Ringold, Georgia. On the 22d of February, 1864, it took active part in an expedition against Dalton, and skirmished with the enemy in front of Buzzard Roost, near that place. Upon its return the battery encamped at Ringold, and remained there until the 7th of May, 1864.

In the arduous campaign against Atlanta, the Nineteenth Battery took part in the principal battles and skirmishes, confronting the enemy at Rocky Face Ridge, Resacca, Cassville, near Dallas, Kenesaw, Peach Tree Creek, and before Atlanta. It also participated in engagements at Utoy Creek and Jonesboro', and then moved into Atlanta, where it went into camp for a short time. The battery took part in the pursuit of Hood's army through Northern Georgia, moving with its division to Resacca, and thence, through the Chatooga Valley to Gaylesville, Alabama—returning to Atlanta by way of Rome and Kingston, Georgia. On the 16th of November it left Atlanta, and marched with its division to Savannah, participating in the siege of that city, and in the capture of Fort McAllister and the city of Savannah. After the capitulation on the 21st of December, the battery remained in Savannah until the 30th of January, 1865, when the movement through the Carolinas commenced. In this laborious campaign the battery marched with its division through the swamps and over the uplands of South Carolina, engaging the enemy at Columbia, and then continued its march through North Carolina to Goldsboro'. On the 19th of March, 1865, it participated in the battle of Bentonville, in which engagement Lieutenant Webb was killed. After the surrender of Johnson's forces, which ended the war in North Carolina, the battery proceeded to Newbern, and there embarked on steamship for Washington. On arriving there it was present and took part in the grand review of Sherman's army, after which it left for Indianapolis. Arriving there on the 6th of June, it was present at a public reception given to returned soldiers in the Capitol grounds, on which occasion addresses were delivered by Governor Morton, Generals Hovey and Wagner, Colonel Ben. Spooner, Judge Gregory and others. On the 10th of June, 1865, the battery was formally mustered out of service, and the men finally discharged and paid off.

Captain Harris, of this battery, was commissioned, in 1861, as Captain of the Seventh Battery, in consideration of his knowledge of artillery service acquired during the Mexican war. He entered service in 1842, as an enlisted man in Ringgold's Battery of Horse Artillery, and during the Mexican war served with Colonel Bankhead's United States Artillery, participating in the actions of Monterey, Vera Cruz and Cerro Gordo, and was with Colonel Childs during the twenty-eight days his command was besieged at Puebla. In consequence of wounds received at Chicamauga, and exposure during and after the battle, he was compelled to accept an honorable discharge from the Ninteenth Battery on the 3d of June, 1864. He was succeeded by Lieutenant Stackhouse, who was commissioned Captain on the 1st of July following.

TWENTIETH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Twentieth Battery, Light Artillery, was organized at Indianapolis and mustered into service September 19th, 1862, with Frank. A. Rose as Captain. It left for the field under command of Lieut. Herman Ludwig, on the 17th of December, and proceeded by rail to Louisville, and from thence to Henderson, Kentucky, by steamer. After a short stay at Henderson, the battery moved to Nashville. Meantime, Captain Rose resigned, and Milton A. Osborn, First Lieutenant of the Twenty-Fourth Battery, was appointed Captain. Early in 1863, the guns of the Twentieth Battery were turned over to the Eleventh Indiana Battery, and the members of the Twentieth Battery assigned to duty in the fortifications of Nashville, having charge of the siege guns at that place. This duty was faithfully performed during the spring and summer of 1863, until, by the persistent efforts of Captain Osborn, and the energy of Governor Morton, a new set of guns were obtained, and the battery fitted for active duty. On the 5th of October, 1863, the battery moved for the front, and was employed in guarding the line of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad. The battery remained on this duty until the 5th of March, 1864, when it moved into the Wauhatchie Valley, and was assigned to the Fourteenth Army Corps. The battery moved to Bridgeport, and remained stationed on duty at that place until the latter part of the Atlanta campaign. Joining its corps south of the Chattahoochie River, it took part in the battles and skirmishes that followed, and, after the capture of Jonesboro', marched with its corps to Atlanta. On the 5th of November, it left Atlanta, and was transported by rail to Chattanooga, and, upon its arrival there, was assigned to General Steadman's command. Moving with that General's army, it arrived at Nashville in time to take part in the final defeat of Hood's rebel army on the 15th and 16th of December, 1864. The battery then moved to Courtland, Alabama, and, after a short stay there, proceeded to Chattanooga, and was assigned to the reserve artillery. Here the battery remained doing duty in the fortifications until orders were received for it to report to Indianapolis for muster-out.

On the 18th of February, 1865, Captain Osborn resigned, and Lieutenant John I. Morris was appointed Captain. Leaving Chattanooga for home, the Twentieth Battery reached Indianapolis on the 23d of June, with one hundred and twenty five men and officers, was present at a public reception on the 26th, in the State House grove, at which addresses were made by Governor Morton, General Wilder, General Hovey, Colonel Trusler and others, partook of a sumptuous dinner at the Soldiers' Home, tendered by the ladies of Indianapolis, and, on the 28th of June, 1865, was mustered out of the service of the United States, and its members returned to their homes.

During its term of service, the Twentieth Battery lost by death from disease, twenty-one men; by discharge, twenty-three, and by desertion, twenty-five.

TWENTY-FIRST BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Twenty-First Battery of Light Artillery was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 9th of September, 1862, with WILLIAM W. ANDREW as Captain, and immediately left for Covington, Kentucky, then threatened by the invading forces of Kirby Smith. From Covington it moved to Lexington, and from thence marched to Richmond and Danville, and then to Louisville. At the latter place it remained until the 2d of February, 1863, when it proceeded to Nashville, Tennessee. From there it moved to Carthage, Tennessee, from whence it marched with an expedition to Rome, Georgia, and there skirmished with the enemy on the 19th and 26th of March, and after capturing a number of prisoners, returned to Carthage. While on duty at this place it engaged in other expeditions, skirmishing with the enemy at Gainsboro on the 5th of April and at Carthage on the 4th of May.

On the 3d of June the battery left Carthage and proceeded to Murfreesboro, joining General Reynold's division of Rosecrans' army at that place and advancing with it on the 24th of June, towards Manchester. In the engagement at Hoover's Gap, the battery participated, and during the summer and fall marched with the army in the campaign against Chattanooga. After crossing the Tennessee, it engaged the enemy at Catlett's Gap, Georgia, and participated in the great battle of Chicamauga. Falling back with the army, from that field, it remained at Chattanooga until the 5th of December, during which time it was engaged in the storming of Mission Ridge on the 25th of November. Proceeding to Nashville, the battery remained there during the winter and the following spring.

On the 26th of March, 1864, it moved to Columbia, at which place it was engaged with the the rebels under General Forest on the 1st of October. On the 17th of September, Capt. William W. Andrew was discharged for disability from wounds and Lieutenant Abram P. Andrew was promoted his successor. On Hood's advance the battery moved to Nashville, and was under fire in the engagement before that place on the 15th and 16th of December. After the battle it remained at Nashville as part of the reserve artillery until it was ordered to be mustered out of service. Arriving at Indianapolis from Nashville on the 21st of June, 1865, with five officers and one hundred and forty-two men for final discharge, it was present at a public reception given to returned soldiers at the State House, at which welcoming speeches were made by Governor Morton, Generals Hovey and Wilder, and others. On the same day the battery was formally mustered out of and discharged from service. The Twenty-First Battery entered service with one hundred and forty-one men and five officers and during its term of service received sixty-nine recruits. Its losses were as follows: Killed in action, two; died of wounds received in action, one; died from injuries received by explosion of ammunition, two; died of disease, twenty-one; discharged, twenty-nine; deserted, seven.

TWENTY-SECOND BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Twenty-Second Battery of Light Artillery was organized at Indianapolis on the 25th of October, 1862, and was mustered into service, at the same place, on the 15th of December, 1862, with BENJAMIN F. DENNING as Captain. It remained at the general rendezvous until March, 1863, when it was ordered to Kentucky. It remained in this State during most of that year, doing duty at Louisville, Bowling Green and Russellville, and taking part in the chase after John Morgan, in the months of July and August. In December it was ordered to Knoxville, Tennessee, to reinforce General Burnside, but on arriving at Point Burnside, Kentucky, it was assigned to duty with a brigade of troops commanded by General S. S. Fry, the emergency requiring reinforcements having passed.

The battery remained in camp at Point Burnside until the 12th of May, 1864, when it was ordered to report to General Schofield, com manding the Twenty-Third Corps, then operating with Sherman's army in Georgia. Reaching that command on the 1st of July, it entered at once upon an active campaign, and participated in all the engagements and skirmishes of that corps until the occupation of Atlanta, into which city it is claimed the Twenty-Second Battery threw the first shot and shell. Captain Denning, in the first engagement with the enemy, while on the skirmish line, on the 1st of July, was shot from his horse and mortally wounded, from the effects of which he died on the 3d of July. Lieutenant Edward W. Nicholson assumed the command, was subsequently commissioned Captain, and had command of the battery until its muster-out of service.

When the Twenty-Third Corps marched northward through Georgia, and into Tennessee, the battery accompanied it, participating in engagements with the enemy at Columbia and Franklin, Tennessee On the 15th and 16th of December, it took part in the battle before Nashville, and then joined in the pursuit of Hood's broken and shattered army, going as far as Clifton Landing, Tennessee. From thence it was transported with the Twenty-Third Corps to Cincinnati, and from there proceeded by rail to Washington, D. C. Being ordered to the Department of North Carolina, it embarked at Alexandria and sailed for the mouth of Cape Fear River. On arriving there it was sent, with its division, to Morehead City, and disembarking there, marched to Kingston, and thence to Goldsboro', driving before it Johnston's rebel army. At Durham Station, above Raleigh, Johnston surrendered his army, at which surrender, the Twenty-Second Battery was present.

The battery remained in North Carolina, occasionally making light marches, until the 5th of June, 1865, when it moved to Greensboro', and from there proceeded to Indiana. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 25th of June, with ninety-seven men and three officers for final discharge, it was present at a public reception given at the Tabernacle on the 30th of June, on which occasion speeches were made by Governor Baker, General Hovey and others. On the 7th of July, 1865, the battery was formally mustered out of service, and the officers and men discharged and paid.

During its term of service, the Twenty-Second Battery sustained losses as follows: Died of wounds received in action, one (Captain Denning); killed, accidentally, two; died of disease, ten; discharged, twenty-two; deserted, thirty-seven.

TWENTY-THIRD BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Twenty-Third Battery of Light Artillery was recruited during the fall of 1862, and was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 8th of November, 1862, with JAMES H. MYERS as Captain. From that time until the 4th of July, 1863, the battery did duty at Indianapolis, under the orders of Generals Carrington, Hascall and Willcox, who, respectively, had the command of the Military District during that period. Its duties consisted mainly in aiding in guarding the rebel prisoners. On the 10th of June, in obedience to the orders of General Willcox, a section of the battery accompanied the Seventy-First Regiment, under Colonel Biddle, on a brief expedition to Monroe, Sullivan and Greene counties, to quell the disturbances in that quarter created by the interference with and killing of the government enrolling officers. On the 4th of July General Willcox received an order from General Burnside, commanding the Department, directing him to send to Kentucky all the available troops then at Indianapolis. Intelligence had been received that a large force of rebel cavalry, under General John H. Morgan, had attacked Colonel Moore's command at Green River bridge and been defeated, and was then marching on Louisville. Accordingly, all the infantry, cavalry and artillery that could be spared was sent to Louisville, with orders to report to General Boyle, commanding that district. The Twenty-Third Battery formed part of this force. After Morgan crossed the Ohio into Indiana, at Brandenburg, the battery rendered good service in following him up, and ultimately helping to capture the raiders. It then returned to Indianapolis, and remained there until the six months regiments were sent to the field, in September, 1863, when it proceeded to Camp Nelson, Kentucky, and became a part of General Willcox's division, and with it marched through southern Kentucky to Cumberland Gap. From there it moved to Knoxville, and participated in the campaign in the mountainous regions of East Tennessee during the winter of 1863, including the engagements fought at Knoxville and vicinity under General Burnside, and the operations in the region of country extending from Morristown to Greenville, and from Bull's Gap to Cumberland Gap, and thence to Blain's Cross Roads. During this campaign Willcox's command was obliged to cross several ranges of mountains, and broad rivers, and was often away from its base of supplies and severed from all support.

In May, 1864, the battery was assigned to the Twenty-Third Army Corps, under command of General Schofield, and with it took part in the campaign against Atlanta. After the occupation of that place, the battery moved with its corps northward, through Georgia and Middle Tennessee, engaging the enemy at Columbia and Franklin. On arriving at Nashville it rested until the 15th and 16th of December, when it participated in the battle before Nashville, and then followed in pursuit of Hood, going to Clifton, on the Tennessee river. At that place it embarked on transports, and proceeded, with the Twenty-Third Corps, to Cincinnati, and from thence, by rail, to Washington, D. C. From Washington the battery moved to Alexandria, Virginia, and from there sailed to Wilmington, North Carolina. From thence it marched to Goldsboro', Raleigh and Greensboro', participating in the campaign made by Schofield's forces in that State. After the surrender of Johnston's rebel army the battery was ordered to proceed to Indiana for muster-out. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 27th of June, 1865, with three officers and one hundred and twenty-three men for final discharge, it was present at a public reception given to returned soldiers at the Tabernacle on the 30th, at which speeches were made by Governor Baker, General Hovey and others. On the 2d of July, 1865, the battery was formally mustered out, and the officers and men discharged from service.

TWENTY-FOURTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Twenty-Fourth Battery of Light Artillery, was organized and mustered into service at Indianapolis on the 29th of November, 1862, with Joseph A. Sims as Captain. During the winter of 1862, it remained at Indianapolis, and on the 13th of March, 1863, departed for Louisville, Kentucky. From thence it marched on a campaign to Lebanon, Columbia, Burkesville, Jamestown, Monticello and various other points on the Cumberland River, engaging the enemy, on the 11th of May, at Horse Shoe Bend on the Cumberland. Returning to Columbia on the 5th of June, it remained in camp at that place until the 22d, and then left for Glasgow. On the 2d of July it engaged the enemy at Marrowbone and on the 4th marched from that place to Edmunton, Greensburg and other points in pursuit of Morgan.

In August the battery marched with General Burnside's army into East Tennessee, and was the first battery with that army that crossed the Cumberland Mountains. On the 2d of September it reached Loudon, and marching from thence, participated in the engagements at Philadelphia and Sweetwater on the 14th of October. Leaving Loudon for Knoxville on the 14th of November it took part in the engagement at Campbell's Station, between General Longstreet's rebel forces and a small portion of the Ninth and Twenty-Third Army Corps, under General Burnside, on the 16th of November. During the siege of Knoxville from the 17th of November to the 4th of December, the battery was actively engaged in the defense of the garrison and works. On the 5th of December, it left Knoxville, in pursuit of Longstreet's army, marching to Bean Station, Strawberry Plains Mossy Creek, Dandridge and other points in East Tennessee. During December, 1863, and January, 1864, the battery, marched and encamped in the mud and snow, entirely destitute of tents. Nearly all of the men were without overcoats and very scantily supplied with other clothing, and were, almost entirely dependent for rations upon the country, which had already been overrun and robbed by Longstreet's army. Returning to Knoxville, the battery rested from the labors of this severe campaign until April, when being assigned to General Hovey's division of the Twenty-Third Corps, then at Charleston, Tennessee, it marched there and joined it.

On the 4th of May, the Twenty-Fourth Battery marched from Charleston, with its division, to Red Clay, Georgia, and entered at once upon the active campaign against Atlanta, participating in the battle of Resacca on the 15th of May. On the 1st of July the battery was attached to General Stoneman's command, and was engaged with it on the 11th, 12th and 13th, at Campbellton, Moore's Bridge and Sandtown on the Chattahoochie River. On the the 25th of July it left Decatur with General Stoneman's command for Macon, and engaged the enemy at the latter place on the 30th, and on the 31st at Sunshine Church, at which place it was compelled to surrender to the enemy two of its officers and forty-seven men, with two guns. The remainder of the battery returned to Atlanta where it remained until the 4th of October and then proceeded northward through Georgia into Tennessee, in pursuit of Hood's army. On the 28th of November it participated in an engagement with the enemy at Columbia Tennessee, and on the 1st of December arrived at Nashville. Remaining at this place until the 18th of January, 1865, it was then ordered to Louisville, Kentucky, where it remained on post duty until the 26th of July, at which date it was ordered to Indianapolis for muster out of service. Arriving at that city on the 28th, with three officers and ninety-two men for final discharge it was present at a public reception given at the State House on the 1st of August, at which speeches of welcome were made by Lieutenant Governor Baker and General Hovey. On the 3d of August, 1865, the battery was formally mustered out of service and the officers and men finally discharged from service.

On the 20th of January, 1864, Captain Sims resigned, when Lieutenant Alexander Hardy was appointed to fill the vacancy, and from that time until its muster out, he had command of the battery. During its term of service the Twenty-Fourth Battery marched a distance of about four thousand miles and suffered losses as follows: Died in rebel prisons, two; lost on steamer "Sultana," five; died in hospital, at home and elsewhere, twenty-three; discharged, eighteen; deserted, thirty-three.

TWENTY-FIFTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The Twenty-Fifth Battery of Light Artillery was the last artillery company recruited in Indiana. It was raised during the months of September and October, 1864, and the officers and recruits composing the company were mustered into the service for one year. On the 28th of November it left Indianapolis for Nashville, with FREDERICK C. STURM as Captain. On the 13th of December it reported for duty to General Thomas J. Wood, commanding the Fourth Army Corps, and was engaged in the battle before Nashville on the 15th and 16th of December. Upon the defeat of Hood's army the battery marched in pursuit, arriving at Huntsville, Alabama, on the 4th of January, 1865. It remained at Huntsville until the 3d of February, and from thence moved to Decatur, Alabama, where it remained, performing garrison duty, until the 11th of July, when it was ordered home for muster-out of service. Arriving at Indianapolis on the 13th of July, with four officers and one hundred and twenty-five men, it was present at a public reception given to returned soldiers at the State House on the 18th, on which occasion addresses of welcome were made by Governor Morton, Generals Hovey, Chapman, and Bennett and others. On the 20th of July, 1865, the battery was mustered out of service, and the officers and men discharged from service.

*This Battery was originally Company "A," Seventeenth Infantry.

"WILDER"—TWENTY-SIXTH BATTERY, LIGHT ARTILLERY.

The "Wilder Battery"—Twenty-Sixth—of Light Artillery, was originally recruited in May, 1861, for a light artillery company, by Captain JOHN T. WILDER, of Greensburg, but was not accepted into service as such. Joining an infantry regiment then organizing at Indianapolis, it was mustered into service on the 12th of June, 1861, as Company "A" of the Seventeenth Regiment. Captain Wilder, having been promoted to Lieutenant Colonel of the Seventeenth, First Lieutenant Silas F. Rigby was appointed Captain of the company. On the 2d of July, the regiment left Indianapolis for Western Virginia, Company "A" taking along with it two wrought-iron six-pounder guns, which had been presented to the company by Decatur county.

At Elk Water, Virginia, Company "A" was organized and detached as an artillery company, and was designated the "First Independent Battery." It was generally known, however, as "Rigby's Battery."

During General Reynolds' operations on Cheat Mountain, the battery did good service, and when General Milroy marched on his unsuccessful expedition to Alleghany Summit, the battery accompanied him, and was present at the engagement at that place on the 13th of December. In April, 1862, it marched with General Milroy over the mountains, and engaged the enemy under General Johnston at McDowell, Virginia, on the 8th of May, after which it retreated, with that command, to Franklin, the retrogade movement being harrassed by the forces of Generals Johnson and Stonewall Jackson. Joining General Fremont's forces, the command moved across the the mountains, and chased Stonewall Jackson up the Shenandoah Valley, engaging the enemy at Cross Keys, and at other points. After this campaign the battery moved to Winchester, where it became attached to the brigade commanded by Colonel Piatt, and, with it, remained in garrison at Winchester—the men doing picket and scouting duty as cavalry—until the advance of Lee's army towards Maryland, after the second battle of Bull Run. Falling back from Winchester to Harper's Ferry, it was compelled to surrender with the other forces there. The officers and men were paroled and sent to Camp Douglas, at Chicago, and, subsequently, to Camp Butler, at Springfield, Illinois.

From Springfield the battery was sent to Indianapolis, where it was re-organized, by the appointment of Lieutenant Hubbard T. Thomas of the Third Battery as Captain, and the promotion of non-commissioned officers to the different grades of Lieutenants. From this period, until its discharge from service, the battery was known as the "Wilder Battery," that name having been given it in honor of Colonel Wilder, who first organized the company. On the 18th of March, 1863, the battery left Indianapolis under command of Lieutenant Casper W. McLaughlin, and proceeded to Cincinnati and Covington. From the latter place it moved to Lexington, Kentucky, where it joined the forces of General Gilmore, commanding the Central District of Kentucky. During its stay in Kentucky, it engaged the enemy at Danville, Dutton's Hill and other points. At Somerset, Captain Thomas joined the battery, on the 9th of May, and took command of it. In August, it started across the mountains, with General Burnside's expedition, into East Tennessee, and participated in the battles at Carter's Station on the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad, and at Watauga River. During the siege of Knoxville by Longstreet's forces, the battery was conspicuously engaged in the defense of that place, and the honor is claimed for it of having fired the first gun at the commencement of the engagement. During the continuance of the defense, the battery rendered effective service in harrassing the enemy, by dividing the company into sections, and moving these close upon his lines, at night, and from the positions thus gained, sending forth an incessant and annoying artillery fire. When the siege was raised, the battery moved with the army of General Burnside, and followed in pursuit of the enemy, engaging him at different places, until the pursuit was abandoned.

On the 1st of January, 1864, one hundred and three men of the battery re-enlisted as veterans at Strawberry Plains, East Tennessee, and came home on veteran furlough. On reaching Indianapolis, several of these were not considered eligible for re-muster as veterans, and, consequently, but fifty-five were re-mustered as veteran volunteers.

On the 18th of March, 1864, the Wilder Battery left Indianapolis for the field, returning to East Tennessee. About the last of April, it was attached to the division commanded by General A. P. Hovey, then at Charleston, Tennessee, but, failing to be equipped in time to join the movement of General Sherman in his Georgia campaign, it was sent to Knoxville, where it became attached to the "Reserve Artillery," commaaded by General Tillson.

On the 12th of June, the non-veterans were sent to Indianapolis for muster-out of service. The company remained at Knoxville, doing garrison duty and building fortifications, until March, 1865, when it was equipped as a four-gun battery, and took the field in General Tillson's command, at the time of General Stoneman's movement through East Tennessee into North Carolina. At the end of this campaign, it encamped at Greenville, East Tennessee, until orders were received for the battery to report at Indianapolis for muster-out. Arriving at that place on the 11th of July, with five officers and one hundred and three enlisted men for final discharge, it was present at a reception given to returned regiments and batteries, at the State House, on the 12th, on which occasion addresses were made by Governor Morton, General Hovey and others.

On the 19th of July, 1865, the Wilder Battery was formally mustered out, and the officers and men finally discharged from service.
